And, whom do we have to blame for this terrible way we turned out? You're right, our mean mother.

Look at all the things we missed. We never got to march in a protest parade. Nor to take part in a riot, burn draft cards, and a million and one things that our friends did.

She forced us to grow into God-fearing, educated, honest adults.

Using this as a background, I am trying to raise my three children.

I stand a little taller and I am filled with pride when my children call me mean.

Because, you see, I thank God.

He gave me the Meanest Mother in the whole world.

Please do not include any glass or perishable items. Co-sponsors for the event are: Campbell's, Priority Mail, the United States Postal Service, The AFL-CIO, and the United Way.

Since 1881, any time a new U.S. flag has been designed—following the admission of a state or states—the new banner has been unveiled on July 4.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920 real photo postcard view of Beale Street in Wollaston. At that time, Wollaston Center was area around the railroad depot that was just to the left and out of this view. Just a few commercial buildings were located at Hancock and Beale. In the building on the left, the Wollaston Cash Market later became one of almost 40 neighborhood First National Stores that were located throughout Quincy. Howard Johnson opened his first store next to it on the left. After prohibition ended the Wollaston Wine Company was located in this block as was the Viking Cafe which later became Dee Dee's Lounge. All of these buildings were demolished in the 1960's to make room for the Red Line Parking lot. The buildings on the right are still extant. Stuart Payzant whose grandson is superintendent of schools in Boston owned the real estate office.

MWRA Board Lauds Mariano On Budget Work

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

At a time when our state budget process is under tremendous scrutiny, the MWRA Advisory Board would like to share with readers how their state representative spent his time during the recent House budget debates.

Thanks to Representative Ron Mariano's ongoing and continually successful efforts on behalf of MWRA-served communities, the House embraced the most pro-ratepayer amendment offered for FY01. As the lead sponsor of the "surplus property amendment," Representative Mariano fought to ensure that costs assessed to ratepayers are related solely to the services they receive.

The surplus property amendment accomplishes two things: it saves ratepayer dollars and it gives communities the opportunity to utilize valuable properties such as Chestnut Hill Waterworks and Fisher Hill in Brookline. By clarifying the responsibility of the Department of Capital Asset Management to repossess properties considered "surplus" to MWRA, this amendment allows the Authority to avoid spending ratepayer dollars on the maintenance and upkeep of properties no longer relevant to MWRA services.

Still other ratepayer-friendly initiatives that Representative Mariano guided the inclusion of in the House budget are $48.4 million in debt service assistance, as well as a state reimbursement to MWRA for clean-up costs associated with Lake Cochituate in Natick.

As always MWRA ratepayers can count on Representative Mariano to carry the torch on their behalf. Thanks to Ron Mariano, the MWRA Advisory Board looks with confidence toward both the Senate and final versions of the FY01 state budget.

Elian Gonzalez Case Raid A Grave Violation

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

A grave violation of our nation's laws occurred on the Saturday before Easter. I fear it is an ominous sign of a federal government out of control. Regardless of how one feels about the Elian Gonzalez case, all American citizens should take offense at the reality of the raid (attack) by the federal government on a private home, possibly without a warrant and days after a federal court had ruled in their favor.

Elian's uncle, Lazaro Gonzalez, had broken no law. We are a nation of laws. The fact that the INS had decreed that the Gonzalez family no longer had custody of the boy imposed no duty on them to surrender him.

A climate of disgraceful journalism led to disgraceful government behavior. Rampant was an implication that there must have been something wrong with Elian's mother that she would risk the ocean to ensure Elian's freedom. Absent was the truth: that Elian's father had called the Gonzalez' two weeks before the escape from Cuba to tell them that the family was coming and to "take care of my son."

But children in Cuba are state property and woe to us if we offend Cuba! Thirty eight years ago President Kennedy, on being presented with a Cuban flag from a group of survivors from Cuban tyranny, said: "I can assure you that this flag will be returned one day to a free Havana." Thirty eight years later America has a different kind of President.

Quincy's Yesterdays

City Merchants Urged To Preserve Retail Supremacy

By PAUL HAROLD

The city's merchants met at the Quincy Neighborhood Club where they were urged to preserve Quincy's retail supremacy on the South Shore. Thomas O'Kane, manager of Sears Roebuck, said that the city's position was threatened on two fronts: with the construction of a Filene's shopping center in Braintree and the resurgence of Boston.

O'Kane proposed the building of a "war chest" of $50,000 for the promotion of Quincy as "Shoppers' Town."

TAX RATE UP $4.40

Gorham Nickerson, chairman of the Board of Assessors, predicted that the tax rate would increase to $65, a rise of $4.40.

Three dollars were shaved off the new rate when the city council authorized the expenditure of a half million dollars from the excess and deficiency fund. Additionally, it was noted that next year's valuation would include the old Squantum Air Base that would be taxable, having been sold by the federal government to the Edison Company.

AUTOGRAPHED 'PROFILES IN COURAGE' IN QUINCY TEACHERS' AUCTION

Among the prizes in the Quincy Teachers' Association's scholarship auction was an autographed copy of "Profiles In Courage," donated by its author, Sen. John F. Kennedy.

Prizes from throughout the country came into the auction as a result of letters written by the typing classes at both of the city's high schools. Included was a polka dot silk tie from Governor Mennen Williams of Michigan and a Wisconsin cheese from that state's Governor Vernon Thompson.

Frances Barrett and Botta Page were co-chairmen with school attendance officer William Spencer in charge of the transportation of larger auction items.

Quincy Symphony Guild Celebrates 20th Anniversary

The Quincy Symphony Guild is celebrating its 20th anniversary this year with special commemorative activities.

Initially a loosely knit group of music lovers, the guild was formally organized in 1980 to support the Quincy Symphony Orchestra through fundraising activities, ushering assistance and hosting receptions at concerts.

On May 12, the annual spring Pops Concert will be held at Freeport Hall in Dorchester. Each table will have a 20th anniversary centerpiece and during the intermission, the guild will hold a raffle as a fundraiser for the Quincy Symphony Orchestra.

At the Winter Concert Feb. 12, the audience received souvenir mini envelopes stuffed with candies. At the "Youth Performs Concert" April 7, colorful balloons adorned the North Quincy High School cafeteria where the reception was held.

Members of the guild include: Paula DaForno, president; Florence Cetlin, vice president; Louise Randall,

Greenleaf House A Home For Its Disabled Residents

By CRAIG SALTERS

Looking at the large Victorian home at 74 Greenleaf St. in Quincy, one wouldn't think there was anything different about it. And guess what: there isn't.

That's just the point, as the Greenleaf House, a residential program for six men and women with developmental disabilities, helps individuals with disabilities work and participate in the community as it helps the community embrace the disabled in its midst.

And the Greenleaf House, run by the private non-profit Work Inc. of Quincy, has been doing just that for 28 years now, something Hank Cheney, president of Work Inc., sees as nothing short of remarkable.

"It's been 28 years and the community has been terrific," Cheney said during an interview in the spotless and newly renovated home, which was built in 1890. The house features 10 rooms and a sleeping loft, three full and two half baths, and enough windows to fill the house with sunlight.

"We knew people were apprehensive back in 1972 — with the idea, with property values," said Cheney. "But Quincy has been very receptive to people with mental disabilities, which is quite different from some other communities."

Work Inc., founded in 1965, is one of Massachusetts' oldest non-profit providers of vocational rehabilitation services, housing, transportation, and employment opportunities for individuals with disabilities.

It serves over 1,000 people with disabilities, including individuals with mental retardation, chronic mental illness, and those with multiple disabilities.

It is the largest employer of people with disabilities in New England.

Since 1972, Cheney said, over 30 disabled residents have lived at Greenleaf House, holding jobs, paying taxes, voting in elections, shopping at local stores, and just generally taking part in neighborhood life.

Greenleaf House has six trained staff members who support residents in areas such as job training, budget management, and social skills. One staff member lives on-site.

There are house rules and a set routine which revolves around residents' job schedules. Both staff and residents share cooking responsibilities. The overall goal is to foster independence and self-reliance through a supportive network and family environment.

One longtime resident, Joe, is actually retired from his job and said that he enjoys most about living at the Greenleaf House is going out to eat at the local restaurants. Joe is old enough to be a veteran of the state-run schools of the past and said he likes the new system much better.

For Cheney, Joe's level of community involvement represents a sea change from the 1940's and 1950's, when those with mental retardation or other disabilities were isolated in state-run institutions such as the Wrentham State School or the Paul A. Dever School.

That "out of sight, out of mind" attitude didn't change, said Cheney, until legal action in the 1960's and 1970's forced integration and privatization trends, resulting in companies like Work Inc. and homes like the Greenleaf House.

To illustrate the point, Cheney recalled processing paperwork one day regarding a disabled individual only to realize he had been the man's neighbor growing up in Braintree.

"I was on the track team with his brother, I delivered papers to their house," Cheney said. "He lived six houses from me and I never saw him in the community."

Nowadays, Cheney's children attend schools which have long since integrated students with disabilities and don't think much about it. "I think we're one generation away from when people will be much more open concerning people with disabilities, when they'll be naturally integrated and accepted, like everyone should be," he said.

Cheney, who attended Braintree schools, is a graduate of Boston University and holds a master's degree in Rehabilitation Administration from Northeastern University.

His work with the disabled, he said, happened quite by accident. His family owned a company which processed apples for the bakery trade, hard work often done by hand. "It was not a job everyone was beating down the door to take," Cheney remembered.

Out of desperation, Cheney hired several disabled workers just around the time he was pursuing a graduate degree in what he originally thought would be Hospital Administration until he heard of the program at Northeastern.

While at Northeastern, Cheney was supposed to intern at a company in Fall River but asked to switch to Work Inc., a company he knew of and which was much closer to home.

Thirty years later, what began as an internship has evolved into a lifelong career and the role of company president.

"The real thing," said Cheney, "is you know you can make a difference in someone's life."

QRTA To Award Over $100,000 In Scholarships

The Quincy Retired Teachers Association (QRTA) will hold its annual Scholarship Luncheon May 17 at the Neighborhood Club and award 34 scholarships totaling $102,200 to recipients from Quincy and North Quincy High Schools.

Scholarships, derived from the interest of the QRTA scholarship endowment, will be of varying amounts but no scholarship will be less than $1,000.

The event marks the 23rd year of the QRTA scholarships, which were created with a bequest of $1,000 from the estate of the late Warren Findlay, former teacher at Quincy High School.

The scholarship fund grew consistently over the years with additional donations and bequests but grew significantly with the bequest of the late Harry and Louisa Beede after their deaths in 1997 and 1993, respectively.

Harry Beede, a lifelong educator and former principal of Broad Meadows High School, and Louisa Beede, a podiatrist in the city, left exactly $1,272,011.11 to the endowment beginning in 1998, doubling both the number of scholarships and the minimum scholarship amount.

"When we heard (about the dollar amount), we just fell on our knees," said Robert Mattson, QRTA treasurer. "We asked if all the decimal points were in the right places."

As a special tribute to the Beedes, the QRTA received a waiver from the Massachusetts Secretary of State's Office to donate $35,000 of the funds to build the Young Adult Room at the expanded Crane Public Library.

The room, which is scheduled for dedication in September, will be named after the Beedes and contain a portrait and plaque.

"Harry Beede dedicated his whole life to young adults and all of his scholarship money goes to young adults, so it's fitting," said Mattson. "The Beedes will have an effect on Quincy students forever and will become almost surrogate parents."

Besides the luncheon, students will be recognized at each school's award assembly.

One particular Beede Scholarship is reserved for a student who will major in education while another goes to a student who attended Broad Meadows.

Several scholarships from other donations are earmarked for certain individuals, such as those who attended the Montclair School or North Quincy High athletes.

The Beedes did not have children of their own.

The wife of the late Warren Findlay is in her 90's and living in Nova Scotia.

HOME IMPROVEMENT

Style And Function In The Kitchen

(NU) - Are you continually searching for products with that perfect combination of form and function?

As people spend more time in the kitchen, it's been transformed into an area that creates the look and style they prefer while making food preparation and cleaning quick and easy.

From cabinets with shelves that pull out for easy storage, to islands with prep sinks and extra work space, manufacturers are developing products that not only look good in your kitchen, but are ergonomically designed for ease-of-use. Sinks with integral drainerboards, multilevel countertops and even can-openers are all designed to meet the demand for maximum convenience.

Modern kitchen fixtures, such as pull-out faucets, also combine luxury styling with superior functionality. Enlarged spray patterns provide a more powerful spray, soft rubber nozzles allow for easy removal of residue and longer reaching hoses make easy work of filling pitchers and rinsing sinks. Additionally, smooth lines and rounded surfaces make the faucet surface easy to clean.

Leading faucet manufacturer Delta Faucet Company has incorporated those features, and more, in their new pull-out faucet. The revolutionary wand design of Delta's new pull-out faucet is a "first" in the category. Side-diverter buttons let you switch from stream to spray with a simple side-to-side motion. This eliminates the need to twist the wrist around and push a top button.

"We created a new pull-out wand that's not only sleek and sophisticated in design, but also able to accommodate the rigors of a busy kitchen," says Karie Johnson, new product development manager, Delta. "It makes working at the sink a breeze — instead of bringing your pitcher or coffee pot to the sink for filling, you can bring the faucet to the pot. It's that easy!"

New pull-out faucets are stylish and easy-to-use.

Available in a variety of fashionable finishes from anti-tarnish polished brass and pearl nickel, to chrome, white, and an updated version of off-white called biscuit, these faucets coordinate with other appliances and fixtures in your kitchen.

For more information, visit Delta's Web site at www.deltafaucet.com or call 1-800-345-DELTA (3358).

Heating Inspections Keep You Out of the Cold

(NU) - Experts at the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Contractors (PHCC) National Association recommend that you have your system inspected and serviced by a qualified heating contractor prior to the beginning of each heating season.

Here's a list of some of the procedures PHCC contractors perform to help ensure the safe and efficient operation of your heating system all season long:

- Check the thermostat. An improperly functioning thermostat will call for more or less heat than desired. The former will cost you money; both will cost you comfort.
- Check the filter. A dirty filter in a hot air heating system can reduce efficiency, increase energy usage and affect equipment reliability. Following the inspection, homeowners should clean or replace the filter monthly.
- Check the motor and blower. A clean, lubricated, properly adjusted blower and motor are necessary to provide the airflow that ensures proper heating and efficiency.
- Check the burners. To ensure proper ignition and fuel combustion, burners are cleaned and observed for proper burning characteristics.

- Check the heat exchangers. This ensures that the blower goes on and off at predetermined temperatures in order to deliver the proper temperature of air to the house.
- Check the safety valves and controls. This is a furnace's principal means of preventing overheating and damage to the unit.
- Check the venting system. All flue connections and elbows should be firmly fitted. There should be no cracks or openings where the flue enters the chimney or sidewall. There should be no obstructions in the flue or the chimney to prevent the exit of combustion byproducts.

Local Beaches Target Sites For Cleaner, Greener Saturday

Local beaches will be the focus of the 11th annual Cleaner, Greener Quincy this Saturday, Mayor James Sheets announces.

The cleanup will occur from 9 a.m. to noon at various sites, including several parks, throughout the city.

Locations are:

- Ward 1: Perry Beach/Back Beach - Houghs Neck; Sung Harbor School/beaches - Germantown.

- Ward 2: Mound Street Beach & Avalon Beach - Quincy Point; Faxon Park - South Quincy.

- Ward 3 - Hobart Street bog - Montclair; Forbes Hill Playground - Wollaston Hill.

- Ward 4 - O'Rourke & Flaherty Parks - West Quincy; Kincaide Park/Lincoln-Hancock School - Southwest Quincy.

- Ward 5 - Grossman's Park/Sailor's Cemetery - Beechwood Knoll.

- Ward 6 - Nickerson Beach & Orchard Beach - Squantum; Welcome Young Park - North Quincy.

"This year we will focus on cleaning our beaches so that we may allow our residents an opportunity to enjoy the beautiful natural amenity that is our 27 miles of coastline," Sheets said. "This will be the first major step toward bringing families back to our beautiful, public beaches.

"Our beaches will be places where people can bring their children and enjoy the sand, sun, and surf without hesitation," the mayor added.

Crews from the Park Department and Department of Public Works will work alongside volunteers at the aforementioned locations. Tools will be provided, but it is recommended that volunteers bring their own work gloves. All residents will receive a free Cleaner, Greener Quincy t-shirt for their participation.

Following the work (12:30 to 2 p.m.), Mayor Sheets will host an appreciation barbecue for volunteers at the Richard J. Koch Family Park & Recreation Complex in Merrymount Park. Hamburgers, hot dog and soda will be offered.

In conjunction with Cleaner, Greener Quincy, the Park Department has hosted a Yard Care Conference earlier this spring and will conduct the 3rd annual Neat Neighbors Contest this summer.

"Cleaner, Greener Quincy has been such a success that we are able to expand our focus to encouraging private homeowners to partake in beautification efforts. We hope to encourage residents to maintain their properties in the spirit of a cleaner and greener city and concurrently recognize those people who work hard in keeping their properties beautiful," said Thomas Koch, executive director of Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

Residents forming a group of volunteers wishing to clean a site other than the designated sites may call the Quincy Park Department at (617) 376-1254 to arrange for tools and trash pick-up.

For more information on Cleaner, Greener Quincy or related programs, call the Quincy Park Department at (617) 376-1254.

Upon his promotion, Rand said, "I was well prepared for an Air Force career by my upbringing at home. Thanks to my parents, I came to the Air Force with an overpowering sense of importance of family, and strong values like integrity, service and excellence in my blood."

The 49th annual Flag Day Parade will feature a variety of bands, floats, color guards, specialty units, and much more. The flag-raising ceremony will be highlighted by the hoisting of a 30 foot x 60 foot version of Old Glory that will be by two Fire Department ladder trucks. Board Repeats Action On Two Liquor Licenses

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Two weeks ago, the License Board canceled the common-victualer all alcoholic license held by Kevin Cadigan former owner of Kevins at the Heritage a restaurant on 1495 Hancock St., for failure to conduct a business at a licensed premise.

The board had to take action again at Tuesday's meeting, because Cadigan was not notified of the earlier meeting.

Chairman Joseph Shea said even though the notice to Cadigan informing him of the meeting was "hand delivered" it somehow didn't get to Cadigan.

Shea said he and the board are "very interested in working with Kevin who is trying to re-locate." But, he said the license is now owned by the License Board until Cadigan finds another place.

Shea said the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC) does not allow two liquor licenses in the same building, one held by Cadigan and the other by Flynn.

Daniel J. Flynn, III will now operate the restaurant and call it The Heritage. Flynn also owns the building which houses the restaurant.

In order for Flynn to open the The Heritage however, the board transferred an all-alcoholic license held by Comeau's Sandwich Shop, 54 Winter St., to Flynn.

Shea commended the Comeaus who were sitting in the city hall chambers for operating a "good business for all these years" The Comeaus have owned Comeau's Sandwich Shop since 1965.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman refrained from voting because he is related to the Comeau family.

Montclair/Wollaston Assoc. Takes Part In 'Cleaner Greener'

As in springs past members of the Montclair Wollaston Neighborhood Association will participate in the "Cleaner Greener" program sponsored by the city of Quincy.

On Saturday, May 13, with a rain date of May 20, association members will clean Montclair Park (Bishop Field), Wollaston School Yard, and the Bog. Volunteers will meet at 9 a.m. at the three locations.

Clean-up requires only an hour or two commitment and more volunteers are welcome.

The city will provide rakes, brooms, and bags. Following the clean-up everyone is invited to a cookout at the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Center.

Vera Bradley Special At Abigail's Crossing

Abigail's Crossing, 1350 Hancock St., Quincy Center, is now an Emerald Status Dealer carrying a large selection of Vera Bradley handbags, accessories, totes, duffels, and luggage pieces. This Saturday, for Mother's Day, Abigail's is offering a 15 percent discount on Vera Bradley purchases.

Laity Sunday At Wollaston Baptist

Laity Sunday will be observed at Wollaston Baptist Church, Prospect Ave., Sunday at the 11 a.m. worship service.

Lay members will conduct the worship service. And several will present the play, "This is God...I Need You."

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

*Granted a permit to Network Plus, 234 Copeland St. to hold a road race to benefit the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Greater Boston. The three mile race will begin at 9 a.m. and include Copeland St., Willard St., Furness Bk. Pkwy. and Adams St.

*Granted a one day liquor license to the Thomas Crane Public Library for a fundraiser and reception June 1. The reception will be from 6 to 7:30 p.m. David McCullough will be guest lecturer from 8 to 9:30 p.m.

*Allowed a change of managers at Friendly's Ice Cream Corp. Mark Weare will manage the restaurant at 699 Hancock St., Wollaston. Lucille Ray will manage the one at 213 Independence Ave. Chairman Joseph Shea gave Ray a folder regarding lighting disturbing the neighbors at night.

*Granted a one day permit to Bethany Congregational Church, 18 Spear St., to hold an indoor-outdoor yard sale from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, May 20 on the church grounds.

*Postponed a request of St. Ann's Parish Council for a one-day liquor license for an appreciation dinner Saturday, June 10, because of possible date change.

*A request from Wal-Mart to erect a tent for Wal-Mart Memorial Day May 11 through May 31 was tabled because no one from Wal-Mart was present at the meeting. Fire Chief Thomas Gorman spoke of violations including a rear exit blocked by boxes as well as "messed up" areas.

COZUMEL, MEXICO

Even though it is Mexico's largest cruise ship port, Cozumel, has remained refreshingly undeveloped. Most of the 189-square-mile island south of Cancun consists of vast stretches of beaches, groves of palm trees, jungles and swamp land. San Miguel, the only established town, offers shopping and dining along the waterfront and is easy to navigate. Beautiful sandy beaches line Cozumel's west coast. Playa San Francisco is the most popular with its restaurants, bars and water-sports equipment rentals. Scuba diving and snorkeling are key attractions in Cozumel, mainly because of its incredible coral reefs and sea life. More than 60,000 divers visit Cozumel each year, and they rank Plancar reef one of the five best diving spots in the world.

If shopping is more your sport than diving, swimming and sunning, be sure to look for the beautiful objects of Mexican silver that are favorite purchases of travelers to Cozumel. Look also for pottery and hand-woven crafts to bring home to family and friends. Asian Citizens' Academy Seeks Greater Community Access

The new "Asian Citizens' Academy" program kicked-off its schedule Thursday with a Welcome Coffee Hour at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center at 11 Hayward St.

The new five-week program, sponsored by the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office, the Quincy Police Department, and the Asian Task Force Against Domestic Violence, seeks to make Asian residents more aware of the roles played by the courts and police in America and the limits those institutions have, including a fairly sophisticated discussion of basic criminal law and civil rights.

Classes will meet May 11, May 18, May 25, June 1, and June 8 and will include such events as a tour of the Quincy Police Station and a 911 Demonstration. Seminars will also be given on such topics as the role of the police, neighborhood watches, the various forms of abuse, basic criminal law, civil rights, and immigration law.

Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating, Quincy Police Chief Thomas Frane, and Carmen Chan, executive director of the Asian Task Force Against Domestic Violence, all made remarks to the 50 or 60 Quincy residents in attendance, with Keating and Frane's comments translated by Hi Thai, a QPD translator and liaison to the city's Asian community.

Keating thanked the residents for their commitment to the classes and praised the Asian Citizens Academy, modeled after the highly successful Asian Senior Academy, calling it "a vital link with the people we represent."

"I hope you're an active part of helping us do our job better," Keating told the audience.

Chief Frane welcomed the group and was pleased with the turnout. "If this continues to be a success, we'll hold these at least once a year and hopefully more."

Chan, who said that the Asian Task Force's domestic violence hotline received over 900 calls last year, welcomed a program that extended support to a group which might otherwise be very isolated. "Domestic violence affects everyone, regardless of color," Chan said, "but the Asian community faces the particular challenges of language and culture."

By "culture," Chan explained that it was very common for Asians to see domestic violence purely as a "family issue," and even a source of shame, rather than an issue for the police or courts. "And an 800 number means nothing to someone from Hong Kong or China," Chan added, although she pointed out that the Task Force's hotline was (617) 338-2355.

Crime Prevention Officer Robert Hanna, a coordinator of the program supervising QPD officers Greg Mar, Kent Yee, and Bruce Trieu, saw the program as a chance to dispel some of the myths about police officers.

"People watch movies and TV and they see us chasing cars and shooting bad guys, but that's not what we do," Hanna said. "It's time to erase some of those stereotypes."

Officer Mar agreed, and added that police stereotypes are even harsher in the East. "Culturally, they (the Asian population) have a natural fear, especially the older generation," Mar said, remarking that some of the police in China or Hong Kong are known for corruption and strong-arm tactics.

Patricia Thorley, director of the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, which will host the classes, called the program an evolution of successful programs that had worked in the past. "This is just the next level," Thorley said. "This is a great opportunity to let the Asian community know what's out there."

7 Residents On Xaverian Honor Roll

Seven Quincy residents are on the honor roll for the third marking period at Xaverian Brothers High School, Westwood.

QC Student Veterans Say 'Thank You' With Flags

Nearly two years ago, Quincy College decided to offer a discounted tuition to Vietnam and Gulf War veterans.

The student-veterans recently showed their appreciation by accepting a challenge from the college president.

Interim President Sean Barry, who originally recommended the tuition in 1998, decided it was time to ask Quincy College veterans for help.

"I never anticipated the response," said Barry, who challenged veterans to contribute to a fund to purchase American and State Flags for the lobbies of campus buildings.

"They were generous, and many attached messages of thanks...we should be thanking them," he said.

Barry got the idea when Theresa Lord-Piatelli, chairwoman of the Quincy College Board of Governors, mentioned that many veterans benefited from the tuition differential and that some had asked how they could help the college. "These brave men and women wanted to say thanks," she said.

So Barry drafted a letter, matched the first $300 contributed and before long the goal was met. Students who were veterans contributed in memory of family or colleagues, and a special recognition will be placed on campus Barry said.

"Both sides of my family

served in World War II, Korea, and Vietnam, one didn't come back," Barry said. "So this had a special meaning to me as well."

The American and Massachusetts flags were placed in the lobby of Saville and Coddington Hall this week, two more now grace the entrance to the executive offices of the campus as well.

"Ideally, I want to add a MIA flag and City of Quincy flag, and would be honored if a group or organization wants to assist in that plan," Barry said.

Veterans of Vietnam and the Persian Gulf may enroll in classes at Quincy College for $50 a credit. That amount will increase to $60 per credit in the fall, but remains about half the price of a three-credit course, Barry said. World War II and Korean veterans may qualify for the senior citizen rate that is the same.

Contributors included Barry in memory of Lt. Donato Liuzzi killed in action at Anzio Beach; Robert Beeson; Antonio DiMaggio; Mike Foley in memory of Patrick Foley (Korea); Christine Gaffney; Walter W. Davis II; Robert Bagley in memory of fallen heroes; Steven Bradley in memory of John Bradley Sr.; Scott Mangino in memory of Sgt. Sam Clements I-Troop 3/2 ACR; Thomas Casey; Frank Garcia; Patrick Ellis; Ronald Bartlett in memory of his brother Bob; Robert Baird; Louis Madeira; Joseph Boyle; James Foley in memory of Bridget Foley; Timothy Kaes; William Riley in memory of William Riley Sr.; Thomas Gaeta in memory of Anthony Gaeta III.

McDermott Proposes Tourism Study

Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott has proposed a year-long study on how to successfully implement a vibrant tourism business in Quincy.

The plan would eventually make use of the new funds set aside for tourism in the recently passed local room occupancy tax.

Using a 1996 Tourism Strategic Plan as a foundation, McDermott wants to form a sub-committee made up of representatives from the business community, the tourism industry, city, state, and federal officials, and local residents who have an interest in the issue to work on how to implement the tourism plan.

McDermott placed a goal of reporting back to the City Council in February, 2001.

McDermott, speaking as chairman of the City Council's Business and Economics Development Committee, said the city is "missing the boat" when it comes to getting its share of tourism revenue.

"Quincy is an untapped, hidden resource," said McDermott, who cited the city's wealth of historic sites, miles of seashore, and nearness to Boston, adding that he wanted Quincy to be a more significant player as a tourist destination in Massachusetts and New England.

Last week, the City Council passed a local room occupancy tax which, when fully implemented in 2004, could generate approximately $1.2 million annually.

McDermott, joined by Council President Paul Harold and Councillor Frank McCauley, advocated for thirty percent of these revenues to be used directly for tourism, based upon the 1996 Tourism Strategic Plan developed by Yeager Communications at the request of local business leaders.

McDermott specifically highlighted the fact that tourism is one of the smartest public investments. "Industry sources have demonstrated that, for each $1 of public funding invested in tourism programs, an average of $8 is generated in tax revenues... a direct benefit to the city's taxpayers," noted McDermott.

The council ultimately voted to set aside 15 percent of the total revenue for tourism.

McDermott expressed his disappointment in the lower figure but said that his committee is committed to making a positive effort to keep tourism on the frontlines of debate.

But Things Could Be Better Harold Sees Positive Trend In Business Council Relations

Council President Paul Harold believes the relationship between Quincy business leaders and the City Council is improving.

But some members of the Quincy Business Council, Chairman Anthony Agnitti and Edward Keohane among them, believe the council is still not taking advantage of the expertise business leaders have to offer.

Speaking before the Quincy Business Council Friday, Harold contrasted the council's December commercial tax rate increase with its recent decision to create a local hotel/motel room occupancy tax as evidence that both sides were working harder to create a dialogue.

"There was a lot more cooperation this time," Harold said, citing the council's postponement of a vote on the tax to listen to the QBC's tourism expert and the continuous input of business leaders at council meetings and public hearings. "Just because you didn't get a 70/30 split (the QBC's goal), doesn't mean that councillors weren't responsive."

In December, councillors voted to increase the commercial property tax classification from 169 percent to 175 percent and then, by a slim majority, voted at a special meeting not to reconsider the rates, effectively denying some of Quincy's most respected businessmen the chance to even discuss the issue.

Agnitti, of Agnitti Insurance and chairman of the QBC, called that episode "an open wound" with Quincy business leaders and accused the council of "hiding behind Robert's Rules."

More recently, however, a home rule petition earning 100 percent of revenue from a proposed motel/hotel room occupancy tax for the preservation of Open Space in the city was discussed several times until the final version, which was passed May 1, allotted 15 percent of revenue for the promotion of tourism in the city.

Despite business claims of an 8 to 1 return on investment for every tourist dollar spent, Harold, who actually voted in favor of the failed 70/30 split amendment, defended the council's vote by saying that Open Space is and should be a top priority in the city, as witnessed by the 78 percent support city-wide for the ballot question on the taking of Lot 23 in Marina Bay.

Keohane, owner of Keohane Funeral Home and president of the Quincy Partnership, agreed that much time was spent on the tax split but wondered aloud how much of that time was constructive.

"Yes, they did at least give the time for a discussion, but they didn't really listen to what (tourism expert) Mr. Yeager was saying," said Keohane. "People in authority tend to think they're experts in everything but this council isn't. This (the 70/30 split) was not of any benefit to the business members advocating for it but it was a great benefit to the city."

According to Keohane, Harold and Councillor Patrick McDermott attended an entire Tuesday presentation made by Yeager at the Quincy 2000 offices. Other councillors, Keohane said, attended a Zoning Board Hearing that night but others did not. "They could have paid more attention to Mr. Yeager," Keohane said.

Keohane is not as convinced as Harold as to any thaw between business and city councillors but he did offer that "we have to think with our business caps and they have to think with their political caps, and I understand that."

Harold defended the council by saying that a switch in Mr. Yeager's availability, from Monday to Tuesday, could have resulted in schedule conflicts for very busy councillors. "The councillors work very hard," said Harold. "They can deal with 50 calls in one week, drainage issues, ward concerns... it's a very demanding job."

Harold also clarified reports that all councillors had not responded to a letter on the tax rate increase from Marshall Carter, chairman and CEO of State Street. In fact, Harold said, Carter had sent a letter to then Council President Peter Kolson with "cc" copies forwarded to councillors for their information, which are usually not answered.

When asked to defend the council's reasoning behind the hiring of new Parks Department workers to take over the maintenance of school grounds, at a cost of $240,000, while not making a corresponding cut in jobs or budget on the School Department side, Harold said he was on the losing side of that issue and could only speak for himself. "You shouldn't pay twice for the same thing," Harold agreed with the QBC. "I didn't think there was a logic to it and that's why I voted against it."

Harold also urged the QBC to use the hotel/motel tax dialogue as a model for further dealings with the council. "When issues develop, you have to be there at the ground floor," Harold said. "Identify issues and have a role in forming them."

REAL ESTATE

Sell, Buy Or Both? Helping Home Sellers Decide

Which comes first, the sale or the purchase?

Many home sellers find it hard to decide. Selling a home can be a challenging experience, and buying a new home at the same time can be even more challenging.

Even positive change can be stressful, so some people prefer to focus on one challenge at a time. They sell their current home, and move into an apartment while searching for their next home. Others look for a new home while their existing house is on the market. It takes some balancing, but it can be done.

Have a plan. You'll need to stay organized, so it helps to set up a system in advance. That way, you won't be hunting for closing papers, or misfiled documents. Set up a "selling" file and a "buying" file, with clearly labeled folders. That way, if you're searching for your inspection report and repair receipts or feature sheets from potential new homes, there won't be any confusion.

Set a fair price. Few things slow a home sale more than a price that's too high for the home, the neighborhood or the market. If you want your home to sell fast, set a reasonable price.

Check your credit. One of the first things you should do is check the three major credit bureaus. A score below 620 will be a red flag and lenders may be hesitant to qualify you for a mortgage. It's best to get this information early in the process to avoid later surprises.

Limit haggling. When buying your next home, save the serious negotiating for the important elements, such as sale price, closing costs or installing a new roof when the inspector discovers leaks. Overnegotiating about chandeliers, refrigerators or occupancy dates, can derail a potentially good deal.

For additional selling and buying tips, call Tom McFarland at ReMax Realty Pros at (617) 328-3200 or 698-9600.

into bedlam. Rachel, 16, crams down a gallon of ice cream and two boxes of cookies in the name of dinner, followed by a finger down her throat and a laxative. And then there's Robert. The perfect young man on Tuesday. Falling down drunk on Friday.

What's really going on? Take a closer look at each one of these kids and you'll see a threat that unites them. They all show signs of depression, a mental health problem characterized by gloomy feelings about oneself that persist even when good things happen.

"Childhood mental health problems go unnoticed and untreated far too often," says Elliot Pittell, M.D., a Boston-area child and adolescent psychiatrist. "Untreated mental health problems in kids can have a catastrophic long-term impact."

As a result of depression, the youth suicide rate is on the rise, as are a wide range of other difficulties -- including attention and learning problems, drug and alcohol usage, eating disorders and anti-social behavior.

According to the National Institute of Mental Health, children may be at risk for depression if they have experienced stress; a loss of a parent or loved one; attention, conduct or learning disorders; chronic illness, such as diabetes; abuse or neglect; or other trauma, including natural disaster. Dr. Pittell said kids who suffer with depression are often misdiagnosed. In fact, many of the behavioral, social and learning problems facing children and teens today can be rooted in depression. Knowing the signs of depression is the first step to getting help for these young people. The signs may be:

- Withdrawal from friends and activities
- Increased irritability or agitation
- Missed school or poor school performance

- Changes in eating and sleeping habits
- Indecision, lack of concentration, or forgetfulness
- Poor self-esteem or guilt
- Frequent physical complaints, such as headaches and stomach aches
- Lack of enthusiasm, energy or motivation
- Drug and/or alcohol abuse

• Persistent sadness and hopelessness

If your child exhibits several of these symptoms for two more more weeks, he or she may be depressed.

Eating disorders such as anorexia (self-starvation) and bulimia (bingeing and purging), drinking, drug use and suicide all may have roots in depression.

Fortunately, depression is among the most treatable of mental health problems. With early recognition, an accurate diagnosis and appropriate treatment, people who suffer from depression can get the help they need.

In the last decade, there have been significant advances in treating young people who suffer from depression. Today, treatment often involves short-term psychotherapy, medication and targeted interventions both at home and in school.

If you or someone you know exhibits symptoms of depression, speak to your doctor. For further information is available at the National Institute of Mental Health,

McCann Brilliant On Mound For North Pitches Raiders Past Presidents

After a confidence-boosting 2-1 win over Boston College High School last Friday, North Quincy had to face city rival Quincy under lights Monday night at Adams Field.

Another huge game. Another huge win for North Quincy.

With many on hand for the dedication ceremony of the bullpen area in memory of Joseph Conti Jr., a former QHS baseball player who died in a fire last year at Twin Rivers, North Quincy ignited a seven-run fifth inning en route to a 12-2 victory.

On the heels of junior pitcher Keith Doherty's performance against B.C. High, Matt McCann was handed the ball and the senior hurler painted another masterpiece for North Quincy's starting rotation.

McCann (2-1) kept Quincy off-balance, allowing only three hits and two unearned runs as he overpowered them with 12 strikeouts in a complete-game effort.

"I felt strong from the beginning of warm-ups," McCann said. "I felt that this was my best pitching performance of the season. My off-speed was working. My fastball was hitting spots. The warm weather was definitely a plus. It kept my arm really loose."

"Every time you play Quincy you get a little more adrenaline, just from the cross-town rivalry," he added. "Anytime you play Quincy, they're going to come out gunning no matter what their record is."

North Quincy (6-5, 2-4) raced out to a 3-0 start this season, but then lost its next four as its potent offense vanished. After an 11-3 loss to Plymouth South last Wednesday, the Red Raiders seemed to have regained its early-season form as it prepares to make a stretch run toward the postseason.

"B.C. High turned this team around," McCann said. "After that win our confidence went through the roof and I'm sure that we can feed off that win for the rest of the season."

Quincy (0-10) hung around through four innings as junior pitcher John Lupo pitched well despite his team trailing 5-0. Lupo, however, ran out of gas in the fifth as he left his pitches high in the strike zone for North Quincy to feast on.

Senior John Gavin ripped an RBI double to score senior Rob Celata who reached on a single. Sophomore Dennis Thomson reached on an error and junior Mike Keddy walked to load the bases. Junior Sean Crowley stroked a two-run single to make it 8-0.

Quincy coach Michael Draicchio brought in junior Dave Centrella and he hit Doherty to load the bases and then nailed senior Brian Deptula that made it 9-0.

Junior Mark Robertson relieved Centrella and he plunked junior Chris Lockhead to bring in another run.

Senior T.J. Bell's sacrifice fly and Celata's infield hit handed North Quincy a commanding 12-0 lead.

Quincy scored two unearned runs in the sixth. With Centrella at third (walk) and senior Tim Pezzulo at first (reached on an error), junior Peter Turowski beat out an infield hit to short to score Centrella, and an errant throw to first allowed Pezzulo to cross home.

"It's the same old," Draicchio said. "We're just not hitting. We're in a tough league. Every team we've played against, even the non-league teams, will probably make the tournament. This is a young team. The future is with the freshmen."

North Quincy built a 3-0 lead in the second inning on Gavin's RBI single, senior Joe Flynn's RBI double and senior Chris Walsh's RBI single. The Red Raiders added a run in the third when Lockhead knocked in Deptula, who reached on a double to left.

The Red Raiders scored their fifth run when Doherty lined an RBI single over the leaping John Cooper at second base.

The Quincy High School Football Boosters Club is planning a Clambake Fundraiser for Kevin Moore Sunday, June 18 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Paget Field.

Moore, a former QHS football player, was severely injured in a car accident two years ago.

Cost in $30 per person (lobster, steamed clams, chowder, corn, etc.) and $10 per child (hamburger, hotdogs, chips, etc.). All proceeds benefit the Kevin Moore Fund.

QNHS, Family Commission Golf Tourney

Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services, in cooperation with the Mayor's Commission on the Family, is sponsoring a golf tournament Friday, June 16, at the Pembroke Country Club.

All proceeds from the event will benefit the NHS Second Step Housing Program which gives formerly homeless families a second chance at a permanent home. This program offers an affordable apartment and support services to families working toward financial independence.

Corporate sponsors who have committed to the tournament thus far include Quarry Hills Association, Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance, South Shore Savings and Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation.

Foxwoods Casino has donated a prize of a two-night stay at the Grand Pequot Tower with dinner.

There will also be an opportunity for golfers to win a brand new car donated by South Shore Buick.

Those interested in participating as a golfer, team, hole sponsor or corporate sponsor can call Rob Corley at Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services at (617) 770-2227. Donations of raffle items are appreciated.

Quincy Outshines North For Softball Bragging Rights

By CHRIS POISSON

One thing was certain when the Quincy and North Quincy softball teams met Monday afternoon — one team would leave Mitchell Field with its first win of the season.

Both teams have struggled this year, entering the game with a combined 0-15 record. But when the city rivals square off, no matter what the sport is, no matter what the records are, you know it's going to be a fight for bragging rights.

Monday was Quincy's day to shine.

North Quincy has had the President's number the past several years, and for 5 1/2 innings it looked like it would be that way again. But Quincy spoiled those plans.

It took a five-run sixth inning and a sensational defensive play in the seventh before the Presidents could finally walk away with a 9-8 victory over their neighbors.

"I tip my hat to Quincy and Colleen's girls," said North Quincy coach Bob Doyle. "They fought hard. They got timely hits and they were aggressive on the base paths."

Trailing 8-4 in the bottom of the sixth, Quincy's offense exploded as it batted around for five runs and its first lead of the game, 9-8. Senior Michelle Catrambone smacked a two-run double for the game-winning hit. Senior Caitlin Nichol and junior pitcher Christina Keenan, who picked up the win, also came through in the clutch with RBI singles.

As if the sixth-inning dramatics weren't enough, the seventh inning had Quincy fans clenching their fists as they sweat it out on summer-like day.

North Quincy's Terianne Fitzgerald led with a bloop single to right and moved to second on junior Christina Celata's groundout. Fitzgerald then stole third and when the ball got by the third baseman and rolled into left field, Doyle decided to wave her home.

But senior Jen Grogan, who was backing up on the play, picked up the ball and fired a strike to catcher Colleen Nichol, who applied the tag on Fitzgerald and held on to the ball for the out. Keenan struck out the last batter to end the game.

"I knew Jen was going to make it," said Quincy coach Colleen Gallagher. "We practice that all the time. And there was no way Colleen was going miss the ball."

North Quincy jumped out to a 6-0 lead in the second, highlighted by senior Jessica Lorman's three-run triple and senior Jen Conley's RBI single.

Quincy answered with three runs in the bottom half. Junior Meaghan Connolly had an infield hit that brought the first run home and she later scored on an error. Grogan made it 6-3 with an RBI single just over the shortstop's glove.

Each team added a run in the third inning. Fitzgerald led with a single and scored on an error for North Quincy. Catrambone knocked an RBI single to left for Quincy. North Quincy scored its final run in the sixth.

Fitzgerald turned in a strong game for the Red Raiders, going 3 for 4 with two RBIs and two runs scored.

"She has been a journey player and she's one of my captains," Doyle said. "Here's a game I started her and she came up big."

Stacey Andrew Rings Up Fourth Win With No-Hitter

The Quincy junior varsity softball team is hotter than a heat wave, winning four of its last five games.

North Quincy was its latest victim. The Presidents (4-4) dismantled the Red Raiders, 18-1, Monday afternoon at Mitchell Field, as Stacey Andrew tossed a no-hitter for her fourth win.

The freshman fireballer walked three and fanned three, raising her season strikeout total to 46. North Quincy scored its only run in the fifth when sophomore Meghan McLean walked, stole second and scored on a sacrifice fly by sophomore Mary Ng.

Co-captains Michelle Pilalas (3 for 4, 3 RBIs) and Shannon Paine (2 for 3, 4 RBIs, home run) paced Quincy's potent offensive attack.

Diane Gilbody (3 for 4, 2 RBIs), Liz Campbell (2 for 3, double) and Andrew (2 for 3) also contributed at the plate. Freshman Jennifer Gropp also played a strong game. Quincy blew the game open with a 10-run outburst in the third inning.

In previous action, Quincy rallied from a seven-run deficit to take home a 14-11 win over Falmouth. Andrew picked up the win as she punched out seven hitters and walked five.

Gilbody (3 for 4) tripled home Pilalas (4 for 5) in the sixth and then blasted a two-run home run to deep center field to give Quincy the lead for good.

Melissa Gage and Silvia Rios each went 2 for 3 at the plate. Pilalas went into catch in the fifth and shut down Falmouth's base running. Tressa Rogers ended the game with a double play.

Quincy pulled out a wild 16-15 win over Plymouth South in the bottom of the fifth inning after blowing a five-run lead in the top half.

Gropp ripped an RBI double down the right field line, scoring Laura Kane, who had walked and stole second, for the game-winning run.

Andrew picked up the win, fanning eight and walking 10 as she struggled a bit with her control. She also chipped in with two hits.

Pilalas went 2 for 3 with three RBIs. Right fielder Kristin Nelson (1 for 3, RBI) and first baseman Campbell (1 for 3, RBI) starred in the field.

Quincy cruised to a 15-9 win over Blue Hills Regional in a non-league game. Andrew struck out 12 and went 4 for 4 at the plate with a double.

Paine (2 for 4, double), Campbell (3 for 4), Gilbody (2 doubles) and Nelson (2 for 3) led the offense. Gropp played an outstanding game as catcher.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The cautious side of your usually adventurous nature stands you in good stead this week. Someone might, indeed, be trying to pull the wool over the Ram's eyes.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Planetary alignment still causes unsettling situations. Consider delaying non-priority matters until the weekend. Cheer up. The next such alignment isn't until 2020.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Family matters take precedence. Spend more time with those close to you. A career move sounds promising, but ask for more facts before making a decision.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your watchword this week is "tact"! While honesty is, of course, the best policy, it's best to temper your tendency toward bluntness with discretion.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Nothing pleases our Leos and Leonas more than to know they're admired, and this week you'll be overwhelmed with compliments. Enjoy the adulation. You earned it.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You're making progress in your dealings with a troubled loved one. Continue to offer understanding and support. You'll soon see positive results.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Change is favored this week. You might want to reassess a situation that has become too demanding. Also consider that job move you rejected earlier.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A loved one returns after a long separation. At work, a decision is made that could lead to the changes you hoped for. The next step is up to you.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good time to set things straight in your personal relationships. Some decisions might be difficult but necessary if you're to turn things around.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Cupid rules the Capricorn Goat's heart this week. It's a good time to start a new romance or reaffirm your commitment to your current beloved.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Travel and entertainment are favored for the rest of the month. You earned this good time. Enjoy it with friends and family members.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Someone you've been close to reveals a secret that could put this relationship at risk. Consider the full impact of the admission before making a decision.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You have a sense of justice that sometimes makes you a mite too judgmental, but it also makes you a trusted, loyal friend.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

SCOTT DEWARE*A Thought For The Week

"God thought to give the sweetest thing In His almighty power To earth: and deeply wondering What it should be-one hour In fondlest joy and love of heart Outweighing every other He moved the gates of heaven apart And gave to earth-a Mother!"...Amen.

On Mother's Day - we think back...We know mother is someone special...a special person who constantly tried to shape our character for the best. In thinking back, we realize we can never repay her for her uncountable acts of kindness; her gifts of patience, love and sacrifice. Nor can we reimburse her for the tears she shed for us in times past.

Mother's Day...What better time is there for us to rededicate ourselves to do better - to make our lives more meaningful to God and our fellow man? Would not a message of such intent, by letter, card, phone or personal visit...or promise by prayer...be a priceless gift to her?

Two Quincy Residents

On Relay For Life
Planning Committee

Two Quincy residents are members of the American Cancer Society's planning committee for the fourth annual Cohasset Relay for Life at Cohasset High School from 3 p.m. Friday, June 9 through noon on Saturday, June 10.

Gordon Behrer and Hank Bradley are among the members planning the event which the American Cancer Society hope raises $90,000, said Chairman Craig Bleicken.

The fundraiser features teams of eight or more people rounding a track, 'round the clock,' to raise funds for the fight against cancer.

Team members collect sponsorships in advance and agree to keep one member on the track at all times.

"Each team will keep a representative on the track throughout the 21 hours, with members walking in shifts," Bleicken said. Relay teams represent families, club, churches, neighborhoods and companies and are encouraged to camp out in tents throughout the night and enjoy the festive atmosphere created by music, food and camaraderie.

Starting the "night shift" will be a lumina (candlelight) ceremony (9 p.m.) to both remember and honor loved ones that have had cancer.

To join the Relay for Life, call Bleicken at 781-383-1502.

"The Relay will be a great way to renew our hope in the fight against cancer, while also doing something practical to support the American Cancer Society's research, education, and patient service programs," Bleicken said.

Funds raised during the Relay will support American Cancer Society cancer control programs, including a research initiative that has supported 30 Nobel Prize winners during its history.

Lydon Funeral Home Contributes Memorial Tree

The Lydon Funeral Home in Quincy, through affiliation with the Lofty Oaks Association in Bethlehem, N.H., contributes memorial trees for those families whom they have served.

The trees are planted on public lands in Massachusetts. Many times, the spring planting ties in with either Earth Day or Arbor Day. Often, they are planted by youth groups such as 4-H, Boy or Girl Scouts. The tree plantings provide a valuable learning tool for the future.

It is estimated that it takes about 400 trees one year to offset the pollution caused by one automobile. Trees also provide a habitat for animals and cleanse the water and air.

The Lydon Funeral Home, along with several hundred affiliated members of Lofty Oaks nationwide, has been providing memorial trees for their own state, some since 1981.

New Organ To Debut At Quincy Point Church

The membership of the Quincy Point Congregational Church, after months of research by two committees, has voted to replace its aging organ with a Rodgers 3 manual electronic instrument.

The organ, purchased from Marshall Ogletree Associates of Needham, will bring the music program of the Quincy Point church to a new level, not only servicing the church, but providing a new musical mission to the community.

It is expected to be installed in about four weeks.

The instrument, made by Rodgers Organs of New England, was selected by the churches' Music Committee and Organ Committee as the one that best fulfills the needs of the church and its music program.

The new organ has three keyboards and pedal board. It will contain more than 50 new voices (sounds) and will include the latest computer technology with a four level memory and the latest in digital technology, including a Midi.

VNA Of Boston Expands Service

The Visiting Nurse Association of Boston (VNA) has agreed to expand its service area to provide home health care services to residents of two additional towns on the South Shore that area affected by the closing of the Quincy Visiting Nurse Association, a department of Quincy Medical Center.

"We are pleased to be able to expand our current service on the South Shore to include the towns of Braintree and Randolph," said Joanne Hardy, president of VNA of Boston. "This is a natural expansion for the agency, as the VNA of Boston now provides home care to residents of Quincy and Milton."

In addition, the agency will interview interested employees of the Quincy VNA for possible employment opportunities. "It is our hope that we will be able to hire some of the staff to continue for the South Shore patients and to ensure continuity of patient care," Hardy said.

The VNA of Boston, however, will contract with the hospital for home health aides.

The VNA of Boston agreed to the expansion to assist patients and their families who are affected by the scheduled June 30 closing of the Quincy VNA.

For more information about the VNA of Boston or free health screenings, call (617) 464-5156.

Tel: (617) 376-1365

These notices shall satisfy two separate but related procedural requirements for activities to be undertaken by the City of Quincy.

REQUEST FOR RELEASE OF FUNDS

On or about May 26, 2000 the City of Quincy will submit a request to the HUD for the release of Community Development Block Grant funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, and the US Housing Act of 1937 as amended, to undertake a project known as 58-62 Winter Street Project for the purpose of acquiring the property on that address and demolishing one free standing unit of housing on this parcel of land. The proposed sources of funds are: CDBG funds of $50,000 and HOME funds of $125,000.

FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT

The City of Quincy has determined that the project will have no significant impact on the human environment. Therefore, an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (NEPA) is not required. Additional project information is contained in the Environmental Review Record (ERR) on file at the Department of Planning and Community Development, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA 02169 where the record is available for review and may be examined or copied weekdays 9:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M.

PUBLIC COMMENTS

Any individual, group, or agency disagreeing with this determination or wishing to comment on the project may submit written comments to the Quincy Department of Planning and Community Development. All comments must be received by May 26, 2000. Comments should specify which Notice they are addressing.

RELEASE OF FUNDS

The City of Quincy certifies to HUD that Richard Meade in his capacity as Planning Director consents to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal Courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to the environmental review process and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. HUD's approval of the certification satisfies its responsibilities under NEPA and related laws and authorities, and allows the City of Quincy to use Program funds.

OBJECTIONS TO RELEASE OF FUNDS

HUD will accept objections to its release of funds and the City of Quincy's certification for a period of fifteen days following the anticipated submission date or its actual receipt of the request (whichever is later) only if they are on one of the following bases: (a) the certification was not executed by the Certifying Officer of the City of Quincy; (b) the City of Quincy has omitted a step or failed to make a decision or finding required by HUD regulations at 24 CFR Part 58; (c) the grant recipient has committed funds or incurred costs not authorized by 24 CFR Part 58 before approval of a release of funds by HUD/State; or (d) another Federal agency acting pursuant to 40 CFR Part 1504 has submitted a written finding that the project is unsatisfactory from the standpoint of environmental quality. Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedures (24 CFR Part 58) and shall be addressed to HUD/State grant administration office at Address of that office. Potential objectors should contact HUD/State to verify the actual last day of the objection period.

Union Locals Endorse Harold

City Councillor Paul Harold has received the endorsement of the Pipefitters' and Roofers' union locals in his bid for election to the Register of Deeds post in Norfolk County.

"Paul Harold has an outstanding labor record in the Massachusetts Senate and most recently as Quincy City Councillor," said Pipefitters' Business Agent Robert O'Toole.

"Over and over again, Paul has shown he supports the hard-working men and women in the community which he serves."

"You have been a great friend to labor and we are looking forward to working with you again," Roofers' business manager Paul Bickford told Harold.

Harold is seeking the Democratic nomination in the primary election Sept. 19 for the post being vacated by the retiring longtime register Barry Hannon.

agement problems" with the project.

Since the February calling of the loan and MARAD's seizure of the actual shipyard grounds, the Maritime Administration has moved steadily toward foreclosure and liquidation of the property while MHL has pushed for reorganization under Chapter 11 bankruptcy laws, a reorganization both the city and the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA), as creditors behind MARAD, support.

Although Sheets would not respond to comments made by John Graykowski, deputy administrator of MARAD, that city and MWRA support is hampering MARAD's efforts to move ahead on the shipyard, Sheets emphasized that each creditor had an obligation to protect its own interests. Said Sheets:

"We have our own bankruptcy attorney (Robert Kerwin) and MWRA has one as well (William McCauley), and we have been advised that we are more likely to get our investment back on this project through chapter 11 (MHL bankruptcy reorganization) than Chapter 7 (liquidation). "We simply have an obligation to do what's best. In fact, if we ignored our legal counsel, we'd be personally liable."

Sheets admitted that having an 80 percent complete shipyard sit idle while government agencies and legal teams battled for control was "very frustrating," likening it to the week

Quincy Hospital's affiliation celebration had to be cancelled when legislative squabbles temporarily cancelled needed funding.

But frustrated or no, Sheets is positive that the shipyard will become a success story for the city.

"We are going to end up with a shipyard that will be fully utilized for maritime use, providing solid union jobs and a tax base for the city," Sheets promised. "We have done so much to improve the Fore River Shipyard that there is probably one hundred times more interest in the yard, be it ship repair or other maritime uses."

Shipyard Loan Payment Takes First Bite Of City's CDBG Funds

The city's $7.8 million commitment to the Fore River Shipyard is making its first negative impact on city budgets and the Quincy Point CARD program and Quincy 2000 are the most affected.

Quincy's $7.8 million exposure on the now bankrupt shipyard comes in the form of Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) money allocated annually by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Speaking before the City Council Monday night, Planning Director Richard Meade and Principal Planner Angelito Santos explained that, although the CDBG allocation for Fiscal Year 2000-2001 was $2,441,000 -- down a mere $1,000 from the current year -- $330,000 of that money was now reserved to make a section 108 loan payment on the shipyard.

To make up the difference in the proposed budget, the Quincy Point CARD (Commercial Area Revitalization District) Phase II program was cut from its current $400,000 to $100,000.

And Quincy 2000, traditionally level-funded at $300,000, is slated for only $135,000 in the next fiscal year. The $135,000 is actually an increase from last year's funding of $90,000, a figure Santos described as an "aberration."

"We level-funded every item as best we could," Santos said at Monday night's meeting, "except for the $330,000 (for the shipyard)."

Mayor James Sheets, who by law is the only person authorized to make the HUD application, agreed with the figures but emphasized McCain Committee Focuses On Loans Was U.S. Deliberately Misled On Shipyard?

By CRAIG SALTERS

Did Massachusetts Heavy Industries (MHI) deliberately mislead the federal government when it obtained $55 million in Maritime Administration (MARAD) loan guarantees?

That's what federal investigators were looking into Tuesday as Senator John McCain (R-Arizona), chairman of the Senate's Commerce, Science, and Transportation Committee, opened hearings on the troubled Fore River Shipyard Project.

McCain was quoted as saying that the government should never have backed the project in the first place.

McCain's examination of possible mismanagement of the Fore River Shipyard, as well as his statement that a grand jury was investigating criminal wrongdoing, caused two longtime adversaries on the project, Mayor James Sheets and Council President Paul Harold, to agree on one very important issue: they both just want the truth.

When asked to comment Tuesday afternoon on that day's hearing and McCain's reference to a grand jury, Sheets repeated an earlier statement that he "had no knowledge of any such investigation."

But he was quick to add that he saw "absolutely nothing wrong with it, so long as it gets to the truth."

"I support any inquiry as it relates to all the parties involved," said Sheets, one of the staunchest advocates of a modernized shipyard.

"Does Senator McCain have

A Symbol Of 'The Greatest Generation' The Papile Family To Be Honored Saturday

By HENRY BOSWORTH

The Papile family, a Quincy symbol of "The Greatest Generation," will be honored by the city Saturday for their service to the community and country.

A granite stone with a plaque will be dedicated in the middle of a newly landscaped area on the Edwards St. side of Point-Webster Middle School at a 10 a.m. ceremony.

The plaque will honor Rafael and Lucia Papile and their 16 children, seven of whom served in the armed forces overseas during World War II.

The site is appropriate.

All of the children, except one who died at an early age, attended the Webster elementary school and Point Junior High School, now the Point-Webster Middle School.

And, the family lived on Harkins St. in the shadow of the school just across from where the plaque will be dedicated.

Among those participating in the ceremony will be:

Mayor James Sheets, state Rep. Ronald Mariano, family members James Papile, city assessor and one of the sons who went to war; Mary Papile, daughter and, at age 94, the oldest of the children; Carmen Mariano, grandson and Associate Dean of the Quincy College Plymouth campus; and Patricia Carter, granddaughter and fourth grade teacher at the Willard School.

BRAKING NEWS!

The brakes on today's vehicles work by means of either brake pads exerting friction on rotors (disc brakes) or brake shoes rubbing against drums (drum brakes). In either case, it is important to replace pads and shoes before they are so worn that their metal backing plates grind grooves into rotors and drums. To avoid the prospect of replacing relatively costly rotors and drums (in addition to pads and brake shoes), pay close attention to the braking action of your vehicle. If the pedal feels mushy, or if it takes more than average effort to slow the car, have the brakes inspected. An immediate inspection is called for if any squealing or grinding sounds arise.

If you have any questions about your brakes, or anything else related to your car, don't hesitate to ask any questions when you bring it into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO for servicing. We have modern test equipment, the right parts and the best ASE Certified service technicians available in the area. Let's get acquainted 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Making Quincy Cleaner, Greener

1,100 Volunteers Clean Up 80 Tons of Debris

More than 1,100 volunteers from throughout the city participated in the 11th annual Cleaner, Greener Quincy Saturday, cleaning 80 tons of debris from Quincy's beaches, parks, playgrounds, marshes and open spaces.

Crews from the Park and Public Works departments worked alongside volunteers.

Concentration this year was on Quincy's public beaches and coastline. Volunteers and city personnel cleaned beaches in Squantum, Wollaston, Merry-mount, Adams Shore, Post Island, Hough's Neck, Germantown and Quincy Point.

"The success of Cleaner, Greener Quincy can be measured by the commitment of the volunteers who give us their time and energy to help improve their neighborhoods every year," said Mayor James Sheets.

"The city of Quincy will continue the success from this day to ensure that our parks, beaches, playgrounds and open spaces are kept beautiful and enjoyed by our residents."

After the cleanup, more than 900 people attended an appreciation barbecue hosted by Sheets at the Richard J. Koch Family Park & Recreation Complex in Merry-mount Park. The Stop & Shop Supermarket Company donated the food and beverages for the cook-out. The Quincy Recreation Department, led by Director Barry Welch, organized the barbecue.

The Park Department will sponsor the third annual Neat Neighbors contest to recognize those residents who maintain their own properties in the spirit of a cleaner and greener Quincy. People can nominate a friend or resident by contacting the Park Department at 617-376-1254. Nominations will be open from Memorial Day through Labor Day.

"The Park Department hopes to acknowledge the hard work of those people who beautify their own yards," said Thomas P. Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

"We have found that property improvement seems to have a domino effect, and before you know it, the entire neighborhood is more beautiful. One person's work can have a positive effect on an entire neighborhood."

Health Care Crisis Coalition Topic May 24

Natasha Perez, director of the Coalition for Health Care, will discuss the current health care crisis and a proposed solution at a meeting Wednesday, May 24 at 7 p.m. in Fellowship Hall at the Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston.

Admission is free and open to all. The church is handicapped accessible.

The Coalition for Health Care's solution to the crisis is a binding referendum question that will appear on the fall ballot in Massachusetts which will assure all residents of high quality care and guarantee all patients and clinicians legally protected rights.

It would also place a moratorium on converting non-profit health care facilities to for-profit status.

The statewide initiative received ballot status when 99,000 signatures of voters were submitted last fall to city and town clerks in 99 percent of the 351 communities in the Commonwealth, including Quincy and every surrounding town.

To confirm ballot status, nearly 10,000 valid signatures of registered voters who did not sign the original petition will be gathered in the next six weeks.

The ballot question is supported by such diverse organizations as the League of Women Voters, Mass PIRG, the Massachusetts Nurses Association and the Massachusetts AFL-CIO.

For more information, call the Coalition for Health Care at 617-623-5545.

George Parker: A True Original

George Parker could be gruff, rough and tough. And, about as shy as a bulldozer.

But, a big hearted softy, too.

His tough side showed up when the spirit moved him. And, it often did. Like when it came to phonies. They got an earful and quickly learned to stay out of his way.

If elected officials were wondering about their job performance rating, he was only too happy to tell them. Usually in short, choice words.

They didn't need to take an opinion poll.

You always knew where he stood on a local or national issue. "No comment" wasn't in his vocabulary.

But those closest to him knew the other George Parker. The big Teddy Bear side there to help a worthy cause especially if it benefitted children.

George, who owned and operated the Yellow Cab Co. of Quincy for 35 years, died May 8 at Mass. Restorative Hospital in Braintree at age 65.

He had a heart as big as his fleet of Yellow cabs put together.

Fr. Daniel Graham, pastor, and friend, who celebrated the funeral Mass for George at St. Joseph's Church last Friday, noted his generosity to that parish and to other causes.

And probably summed him up best: "He could be crusty, but he was a diamond in the rough with a big heart underneath."

A long-time friend, John Gillis, Norfolk County Commissioner and former city clerk, spoke at the Mass.

"It was very difficult to measure him," Gillis said. "A lot of people didn't know how to take him. I didn't at first. You had to get to know him."

"But he was for the little guy and he was very generous. No one knows how really generous he was."

Gillis mentioned George's hefty donations to St. Jude's Hospital to help continue the research there for children stricken with cancer.

He also noted George's membership in the 100 Club of Massachusetts that aids families of police and firefighters who lose their lives in the line of duty.

And George's donations to the Muscular Dystrophy Association through The Quincy Sun.

GEORGE PARKER

FR. GRAHAM

GILLIS

Gillis served as an honorary pallbearer as did other long-time friends of George including City Clerk Joseph Shea and Wayne McCulley, an associate at Yellow Cab.

McCulley remembered that the very last check George wrote on the day before he entered the hospital. It was to sponsor a Quincy Youth Baseball team. "Typically George," said McCulley.

"He was such a character," smiled Shea. "A lovable character. If you really knew him, you had to love him."

George and this writer became friends in 1976 and for 23 years I was a witness to his generosity.

It was 1976 that The Sun became the Quincy-South Shore pledge center for the Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon.

George came in that first year with two $400 checks—one a company, the other personal. And for the next 10 years, it was an annual ritual at the pledge center. Two $400 checks every Labor Day.

And during those 10 years, the pledge center and committee raised over $1 million for Jerry's Kids thanks to a lot of nice people like George.

The pledge center had to end after 10 years because of physical limitations for it as The Sun grew.

But that didn't stop George. For the next 13 years he kept coming in with those checks anyway.

Last year, he had a little surprise. Instead of the traditional two $400 checks he brought two $500.

And that, if our arithmetic is correct, brought his 23-year total to $18,600 to help the battle against muscular dystrophy, one of the cruelest of diseases affecting children.

George kept coming back because he believed every kid should have the right to walk, run, ride a bike and take part in sports. And he wanted to do his "small part" to help them to be able to do it.

He didn't look for credit. He was pretty shy when it came to that.

He usually dropped the check off and ran. Didn't hang around for a "thank you."

Labor Day weekend isn't going to be quite the same anymore. And life among his friends won't be either although they have their treasury of "George stories" as fond memories.

George was a true original.

And you won't soon see a copy anywhere.

College Savings Plan Enrollment Underway

Senator Michael Morrissey reports the start of the 2000 enrollment period for the U. Plan, the state's pre-paid tuition program that allows families to lock in tomorrow's tuition at today's rates at 82 colleges and universities in Massachusetts.

This year's enrollment period will continue to June 15.

The U. Plan, which is sponsored by the state, is the only pre-paid tuition program in the country that "locks in tuition and mandatory fees" at current rates for both public and private colleges and universities, and is open to residents of any state, Morrissey noted. Since the plan was implemented in 1995, thousands of families have invested more than $95 million in U. Plan Tuition Certificates.

"With so many high school students preparing to graduate, families around the state are thinking about the opportunities and challenges presented by going to college," Morrissey said. "The U. Plan offers a special opportunity to hedge against the uncertainty of future tuition increases by locking in rates as they stand today. And with some of the finest public and private schools in the nation participating, the range of choices for families is unparalleled."

The U. Plan is administered by the Massachusetts Educational Financing Authority, a not-for-profit state authority whose mission is to promote the economic development of the higher education industry through low-cost financing alternatives, structured college savings programs, and by providing college financing expertise to students, families, colleges and universities.

In addition to the U. Plan Prepaid Tuition Program, MEFA also offers the Commonwealth's College Investing Program, The U. Fund. This program, managed in partnership with Fidelity Investments, enables families to save for qualified higher education expenses, such as tuition fees, room and board, books, supplies, etc., through a selected portfolio of professionally managed Fidelity mutual funds. The funds can be used at any accredited college or university in the country.

To learn more about the college savings programs, families can call 800-449-6332.

Three Cheers For Matt Moran

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I hope everyone has heard about young Matthew Moran, the eighth grade student from Atlantic Middle School in North Quincy.

On Friday, April 7 he participated in the state finals in the National Geographic Bee at Clark University in Worcester.

I've known Matt and his parents for over 10 years and anyone who knows Matt knew he was capable of winning in Worcester. He did and is now the state's geographic champ headed to Washington D.C. in late May to compete for the best geographic champ in the United States.

With all the bad news constantly in the media about schools and classroom violence, it is good news to see good news for a change. Because good things are happening.

Matt's skills in geography come from within but were surely helped by his parents and teachers at Atlantic Middle School and before that in elementary school. Matt's teacher at Atlantic Middle School is Philip Garufi. He was with him in Worcester and will be with him in Washington. Garufi says he knew Matt could win in Worcester.

"You just have to know him. He knows so much and he has a great interest in the subject."

Like Mr. Garufi, I've seen Matt and know he has a fighting chance to win in Washington, too. However, I'm sure Matt knows winning is great fun but his desire to learn makes him a real winner. No matter what happens in May, Matt should be proud of all that he has accomplished in his desire to learn. I join with his parents, family and friends in wishing him the best at the national finals.

Here's hoping Matt never loses his desire to learn. Here's hoping teachers like Mr. Garufi never lose their desire to teach. I salute Mr. Garufi whose encouragement along the way surely helped paved the way for this upcoming geography bee competition. Dedicated teachers helping their students and encouraging learning. Parents helping their children. Friends supporting one another.

This is a great moment in the life of Matthew Moran and a great moment for the Quincy Public Schools, too.

Daffodil Days Raise $140,000 For Cancer Society

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As the American Cancer Society's Regional Executive for Income Development, I would like to take this opportunity to express my appreciation to area supporters who helped make this year's Daffodil Days campaign such a success.

Thanks to the people of the South Shore area, $140,000 was raised for the American Cancer Society's service programs for cancer patients and their families. It is through the support and generosity of individuals, groups, organizations and businesses that the American Cancer Society can continue to fund research efforts, provide information and guidance, educational programs, transportation for cancer patients treatments and one-on-one support.

On behalf of the American Cancer Society, I would especially like to recognize the many volunteers who donated their time and energy to coordinate advance sales, promotion and delivery of the daffodils. In addition, I would like to thank this year's Daffodil Days Quincy event chair Hank Bradley as well as Bob Briggs, Helen Ireton, Kathryn Patch, Laurie Hall, Anne Fagan of the Milton schools and the Quincy school system that collectively raised more than $10,000.

The mission of the American Cancer Society is to eliminate cancer as a major health problem by preventing cancer, saving lives and diminishing suffering from cancer through research, education, advocacy and service. This community's dedication to the American Cancer Society demonstrates the commitment we all have to fight cancer and fulfill that mission. I am deeply grateful for the generosity of all our supporters.

Air Raid Drill Rated Satisfactory

By PAUL HAROLD

The city's first air raid drill since World War II was rated as satisfactory by city and state civil defense officials.

At 10:15 a.m. on Wednesday Civil Defense gave a yellow alert followed five minutes later by a red alert when sirens and whistles sounded throughout the city for three minutes. The all clear was given at 10:30.

Quincy Civil Defense Director Thomas MacDonald called the drill a total success. During the red alert pedestrians ran for shelter with all traffic coming to a halt while school children were led to designated areas.

Among those in the command headquarters at City Hall were Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, Deputy Chief of the Auxiliary Police Arnold Kaplan and George MacKenzie, a representative of the New England Telephone Company.

TENTH ANNIVERSARY FOR 'BIG MAMIE'

The Quincy-built USS Massachusetts, "Big Mamie," celebrated its 10th anniversary this week. It was one of the most famous war vessels in American naval history, launched at Fore River on Sept. 23, 1941 and commissioned in 1942.

It first saw action as the flag ship in the battle in which the Vichy French were defeated at Casablanca, allowing troops to land in North Africa (the prelude to the invasion of Italy.)

In the Pacific it helped take islands from Japan and prepared the way for the retaking of the Philippines.

TESTIMONIAL PLANNED FOR MSGR. LEACH

A testimonial was planned for Msgr. Walter Leach, pastor of St. Ann's. He had been assigned to the city for less than a year but he was well known for his visit to parishioners' homes, visits to the sick and shut-ins. Curate Rev. Thomas Daily said the committee list would be completed shortly.

Msgr. Leach was ordained in Rome and was named assistant chancellor by Cardinal William O'Connell and later vice chancellor by Archbishop Richard Cushing. During the war he celebrated Mass for the 500 Italian prisoners of war at Ft. Adams.

QUINCY-ISMS

Harry Van Dam, head of the Bargain Center, was elected president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce. Vice presidents were John Flavin, former city solicitor and Richard Parsons, president of the Quincy Electric Light Company.

There was a ground-breaking at Wollaston Baptist Church for a new wing. Ernest Blair was chairman of the board of trustees. Rep. Carter Lee was the only South Shore legislator to vote for the graduated income tax. He was one of five Republican representatives to do so. The Quincy Jewish Scholarship fund was headed up by Mrs. Morris Morse, with Ann Lubarsky as treasurer. The former Open Kettle at 543 Southern Artery was re-opened as Dunkin Donuts. Free cookies were given out with the purchase of a dozen donuts. On hand was company president William Rosenberg. The shop featured 25 varieties of donuts including their exclusive donut with a handle for dunking. The AAA Gun Battalion erected a 90 millimeter anti-aircraft gun at Pageant Field. Louis Cassani, Veterans' Council commander, oversaw plans for the Memorial Day parade. Grocery stores reported a shortage of potatoes. Part of the shortage was blamed on a black market of the scarce spuds. Some 3,000 youngsters traveled to Braves' Field for the ninth annual baseball outing sponsored by the mayor and city council. Leo Lamb of the Health Department headed up the outing that saw the Braves play the St. Louis Cardinals. Youngsters gathered at the fire station closest to their homes to be picked up by buses. Group two of Finnish Temperance Society met at the hall on Nelson St. Committee members included Mr. and Mrs. Toivo Tuori and Mr. and Mrs. Lauri Fagerlund. The Quincy Yacht Club on Palmer St. launched a 138-foot wooden mine sweeper for the Navy. The Kiwanis met at the Cliveden Building hall to hear Dr. Wesley Woll speak on Cerebral Palsy. He was introduced by Dr. Edmund Fitzgerald. Mrs. Laban Whittaker, Jr. had a lead role in the Wollaston Congregational's minstrel show sponsored by the Mr. and Mrs. Club.

Matthew Moran Off To National 'Geography Bee' Finals In D.C.

MATTHEW MORAN

Atlantic Middle School eighth grader Matthew Moran is the state champion of the National Geographic Society's "Geography Bee" and will represent Massachusetts in the national tournament May 23 and 24 in Washington, D.C.

Moran, along with Emma Groarke of the Sacred Heart School, represented Quincy in the state finals held April 7 at Clark College in Worcester. There Moran bested a field of 100 students to win $100 and an all-expenses-paid trip to the nation's capital along with a teacher escort, Atlantic Middle School Social Studies teacher Philip Garufi.

Matthew's dad Michael Moran was on hand for the state championship and will be right there for the finals, along with Matthew's mother Kathleen Sullivan-Moran, grandmothers Sue Sullivan and Jackie Moran, and aunt Lisa Sullivan.

Moran will also be accompanied by his unofficial "coach," Janet Hickey of Squantum, who has been tutoring the middle schooler since December.

Matthew's father called the Worcester victory nothing short of unforgettable. "It was stunning," the elder Moran said. "It was one of the most unbelievable feelings I've had in my life."

The two-day national event will begin with 57 students representing all 50 states as well as U.S. territories. That number will be whittled down to 10 finalists who will compete the following day in an event broadcast by PBS and hosted by Jeopardy star Alex Trebek.

The national champion will receive a $25,000 college scholarship and lifetime membership in the National Geographic Society. Scholarships of $15,000 and $10,000 will be awarded to the second and third-place finishers, respectively.

And, said his father, Matthew seems as level-headed going into the nationals as he did in the state finals. "I think he's fine with it," Michael Moran said. "I think he feels he belongs there so he's more comfortable with it. There's going to be some great competition, that's for sure."

"Honestly, I didn't think I was going to win the states," Moran said, although he did say he felt confident a top ten finish was within his reach.

As for the national contest, Moran is trying to stay focused but admits to a little distraction. "I want to go down and just have fun," Matthew said, "but there is a little more pressure, especially with the $25,000 scholarship."

Matthew thanked his family, friends, and school for their support throughout the entire competition.

According to his dad, Matthew's passion for geography most likely stemmed from a keen interest in boats, ships, and voyages. His favorite channels are the History Channel and the Travel Channel and he is also a frequent viewer of CNN.

As a gesture of goodwill, the Morans will pass out 60 copies of The Quincy Sun's "Historic Quincy" edition to all other "Geography Bee" participants.

The Moran party leaves for Washington D.C. Monday.

Preliminary Work Begins At Highpoint

By CRAIG SALTERS

Public Works Commissioner David Colton confirmed Tuesday that "prep work" had begun at the Highpoint site off Quarry Street and that preliminary clearing and fill work could begin as early as next week.

Mayor James Sheets said that, after careful legal review, the city determined the owners had the right to begin work, at which point he instructed Colton and Public Health Commissioner M. Jane Gallahue to draft a letter informing residents of the situation. "We did not want a replay of the original problem of bulldozers just appearing unannounced," Sheets said.

"They own the property," Sheets continued, "but we will absolutely be monitoring what is happening and make certain they comply with what the Law Department says they must."

Colton also emphasized that the project would be closely monitored to ensure that the developer, Congress Group Ventures, meets all the requirements set forth in its Special Permit with the city.

"They're mobilizing this week," said Colton, explaining further that the developer was installing the necessary rodent traps and constructing a wheelwash facility for its trucks. "They may start in earnest next week."

Colton said that the developer had passed in all the required submittals as of Monday and that he and Gallahue would meet Wednesday to give them careful review. "We will either request more information or give them the green light," Colton said. "I've seen nothing so far that gives me any reason to deny their start-up."

Two residents who do see a problem are Joseph

Coyne and Paul Bonoli, who are both plaintiffs in legal battles opposing construction, as is, at Highpoint. "We were told that nothing would be done until the abutters were notified by the developer," Coyne said. "But it was the city who wrote us a letter, and that wasn't until May 10th."

"And it's not 'prep work,' Coyne added. "They're uprooting trees."

Bonoli pointed to an April 14 letter sent by the developer to the city stipulating that "tree stumps and roots will be left in place," and emphasized that the hazardous materials in the dirt at Highpoint make uprooting extremely dangerous for residents.

Both Bonoli and Coyne insist there is already a front-end loader on site ready to begin work.

In response, Colton said he made an inspection of the site Monday night and did not see anything to warrant Bonoli and Coyne's claims. "There were some shrubs pushed over," Colton said, "but their (the developer's) intentions were actually good."

Colton said that the disruption of a small area was caused by the laying of stone to create a path for future clearing equipment, a move that is actually protective of the environment.

"I have reminded them that there is to be no uprooting of trees and they know that," Colton said.

In a letter dated May 15, Congress Group Ventures said that it was clearing the site now for several reasons, including: a more accurate visual inspection of the actual debris on-site; state environmental laws requiring clean fill to cover contaminated soils; and the advantage of cutting now before the summer growth months.

The letter, signed by CGV's Dean Stratouly, emphasized that no actual construction of buildings would take place and made note of the 24-hour hotline required by the Special Permit,

"We understand and respect the fact that many of our neighbors have concerns about the potential impacts from this work. We are committed to limiting these impacts and intend to follow the mitigation conditions outlined in the Special Permit, whether or not these are a legal obligation at the time."

The joint letter signed by both Colton and Gallahue informed residents that the developer was not proposing construction of buildings or site improvements but wanted to begin the clearing of vegetation and the delivery of clean fill to the property, with the clearing in compliance with "all of the conditions set forth in the Special Permit."

Prior to the commencement of any vegetation clearing, the developer has agreed to:

- Establish a 24-hour hotline and website providing information on the project.

- Send notice to all abutters describing work done and informing them of the hotline, website, and rodent control program.

- Submit a detailed rodent and insect control plan for review and approval by the Department of Public Health.

- Require the contractor to submit its occupational health and safety plan for review and approval by the Department of Public Health and, during all site activities, have personnel on-site who have completed a minimum 40-hour course on environmental and hazardous materials issues.

- Submit a noise monitoring plan for review and approval by the commissioners and ensure site clearing activities comply with noise and hours-of-operation restrictions.

- Implement all precautions required by the Order of Conditions issued by the Quincy Conservation Commission.

- Ensure that all heavy equipment will use the designated truck route for access to the site.

- Hire a private security patrol to be on-site during non-working hours while site activities are taking place.

With respect to fill, the developer has agreed to the following:

- All fill brought to the site must meet MCP S-1 standards and documentation regarding the source of fill and laboratory testing results will be obtained and submitted by the developer to the city.

- All locations where fill will be stockpiled will be designated in advance in consultation with Commissioner Colton and his representatives.

- Prior to stockpiling, the developer will submit a detailed air quality monitoring plan and dust control plan for review and approval by Commissioners Colton and Gallahue.

- Prior to stockpiling, the developer will submit a soil management plan for the clean fill for review and approval by the DPW, including plans to treat exposed stockpile slopes to prevent erosion.

- Street sweeping and wheel washing facilities shall be provided as described in Condition 23 of the Special Permit.

After months of angry talk and lawsuits, a compromise version of the Highpoint Development was agreed to by the City Council in December which called for 10 eight-story buildings for a total of 1,040 units.

Although the December agreement seemed to settle the dispute, the development has at least two pending legal challenges by city residents.

McCain Committee Investigators Focus On Shipyard Loans

all the information? I don't know, but there have been many forces involved with the shipyard and if this process identifies those forces and the roles they played, if it sheds more light as to what the facts are, then we as a country deserve to know."

That "right to know" attitude is shared by Harold, who has maintained for years that MHI and its owner, Sotirios Emmanouil, are not the ones to bring shipbuilding back to Quincy. Said Harold:

"I've been cooperating with law enforcement agencies at both the state and federal level for the past year and a half and the fact that the grand jury is investigating is no surprise."

"The entire leveraging of the $100 million for this project has been based on the viability of one contract for six ships. It's been my contention all along that it was never a viable contract and the grand jury inquiry and the committee hearings will tell us the truth about that viability."

The McCain hearings, part of a process to reauthorize the Maritime Administration, are looking into a shipyard project fraught with delays, cost overruns, and financial troubles.

Specifically, McCain is investigating the $47 million in loan guarantees that MARAD was forced to pay when MHI's loan was called in February.

MARAD officials took control of the shipyard and soon after MHI and its sister companies, all owned by Emmanouil, filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

MARAD now wants to foreclose on the property and liquidate its assets while MHI is still seeking new funds to return and complete the shipyard, a position supported by the city and the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) as creditors.

McCain has expressed doubt that the federal government will ever recoup its investments and has cited "serious mismanagement problems" with the project.

One key issue to be investigated is a 1996 change in MARAD guidelines specifically altered to qualify MHI for the federal loan guarantees.

The Papile Family To Be Honored Saturday

Guido Pettinelli, retired Quincy police safety officer, who was instrumental in bringing about the tribute, will give the opening remarks. Fr. Daniel Graham will give the invocation.

Raffael and Lucia Papile struggled through the Depression to feed and clothe their 16 children and then saw seven sons go off to war, scattered around the world, fearing they might not come back.

Seven sons and brothers in that war could be a record from one family.

In addition to James, who enlisted in the Coast Guard, the other six were:

William and Angelo, Army; Ralph, Albert and George, Navy; and Leo, Marines.

All seven came through the war safe and six of them resumed civilian lives. Albert stayed in the Navy for 26 years and saw service in two other wars: the Korean War and Vietnam.

William served as Ward 2 city councillor in 1948-49 and was a well known salesman at the former Quincy Motor Co.

James, the city assessor, still lives in the family home on Harkins St.

Leo is a retired MDC

police detective.

Ralph owns Chick's barbershop in Quincy Point.

Angelo returned to his job at the Charlestown Navy Yard and was active in the Quincy Lodge of Elks.

George is a retired letter carrier.

Other members of the family served the Quincy community.

Alfonzo "Pop" Papile was a Quincy Housing Authority commissioner, a founder of the Torre dei Passeri Mutual Benefit Society, and active in the Little League and senior citizen associations.

Pasadea "Sadie" Papile founded the Ladies de Passeri Mutual Benefit Society and was also active in the community.

John Papile was a member of the Quincy Board of Voter Registrars and superintendent of the Milton Post Office.

Of the 16 children, eight are still living and eight are deceased.

The eight living include four of the World War II veterans, Leo, Ralph, and George, in addition to James; Helen Mariano, Amelia Flaherty, Gloria Kelly, and Mary Papile.

Deceased are three of the veterans, William, Angelo, and Albert; Edward, John, Alfonso, Sadie, and Jenny.

The story of the Papile family was highlighted in The Quincy Sun's Sunbeams column in February, 1999, symbolizing the generation that grew up in the Great Depression and then patriotically went off to fight a world war.

The story set in motion the plans for Saturday's tribute to this most remarkable family.

PLAYING THE SPOILER

Grandparents often profess to love spoiling their grandchildren. And, according to recent surveys, they agree that their lives are enriched by the increased contact.

Studies have shown that staying in connection to family and friends helps improve one's quality of life to the fact that grandparents are living longer, fully 80% of today's children can expect to have at least two grandparents alive at age ten. Among the activities that grandparents and grandchildren most enjoy doing together according to a recent study are: eating at home (72%), eating out (65%), watching TV comedies (55%), sleeping over (54%), shopping for clothes (43%), exercising and playing sports (41%), watching educational TV (41%), and attending religious services (39%). Both grandparents and grandchildren would agree that their lives are enriched by the increased contact.

New Consumer Brochure Details Title 5 Regulations

The Massachusetts Association of Realtors® (MAR) and the office of Attorney General Thomas Reilly have produced an informative brochure for real estate professionals to provide to buyers and sellers detailing Title 5 regulations of the Massachusetts Environmental Code.

The newly released Title 5 brochure, entitled Facts for Consumers: Title 5 Septic System Regulations, provides information to homebuyers and sellers of the inspection upon transfer obligations mandated for all on-site sewage disposal systems under the Title 5 regulations. It details when an inspection is necessary and under what conditions it is not, and notes some telltale signs of conditions under which an inspection may fail. Inspector obligations are discussed as well as approximate costs for the inspection and repairs or upgrades that may be necessary.

To finance the cost of the repair or upgrade, eligible towns have betterment funds available, while home improvement loans are available through the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency, and the U.S. Rural Housing Service offers low-interest loans. Information on the state's Title 5 Tax Credit also is provided.

Two other consumer brochures recently produced cooperatively by MAR and Massachusetts Officer of Consumer Affairs include A Consumer Guide to Buying and Selling a Home in Massachusetts and A Consumer Guide to Landlord Rights and Responsibilities. The 12-page brochure on buying and selling a home explains agency relationships and the role and duties of the real estate agent, buyer's and seller's rights and responsibilities, and the process by which homes are marketed and sold.

The pamphlet on landlord rights is 24 pages and offers insight on finding a good tenant, the legalities for collecting and handling the security deposit and last month's rent, the eviction process, and other duties and remedies of the landlord.

The Title 5 and the buying/selling brochures are available in packages of 100 for $25 plus tax and shipping. The Guide to Landlord Rights and Responsibilities is available in packages of 100 for $40 plus tax and shipping. Real estate agents may call the MAR Bookstore at 781-890-3700 to place an order.

Spring HOME IMPROVEMENT

Transform the Bathroom Into A Room You Desire

(NU) — The bathroom is often one of the top rooms homeowners remodel. While aesthetics is the first change usually made, it doesn't take growing families long to realize that small bathrooms can make bath time a hassle, according to an independent study conducted for the American Society of Interior Designers.

It's no surprise that busy growing families want space, simplicity and calm — even in the bathroom where they take time to rejuvenate," said Jeannette Long, a marketing team leader at American Standard. "The key to helping families create their own special space is having the right mix of thoughtful planning, risk-free creativity and inspiring products — all centered around their personal needs."

While roomier bathrooms can make a parent's life a little easier, a roomier bathroom for just the adults can make for a relaxing oasis.

"By installing small luxuries, like putting in a whirlpool or upgrading the shower or just improving the cosmetic appearance with paint or wallpaper, clients can feel like their bathroom is a place to revitalize themselves," said Linda Kay DeMartini, ASID, a principal at Kay Designs in Burlingame, Calif.

But it's not always easy to find the space to increase a bathroom's size. An interior design consultant may be the key to making the space function correctly for your needs.

"We offer choices and solutions so clients can make educated decisions for their family's particular needs," DeMartini said. "Clients look to me as a designer to help them use their space efficiently and improve the overall look and comfort of their home."

Homeowners interested in redesigning their bathroom, or any other room in their home, can be sure they will get the right interior design consultant by contacting ASID's Worldwide Referral Service at 1-800-775-ASID or www.interiors.org.

Maintaining Your Room Air Conditioner

Regular maintenance of a room air conditioner can mean increased comfort during those sweltering days as well as big savings on energy bills -- up to 30 percent according to recent studies.

Here are several tips to help ensure that your room air conditioner is operating at peak efficiency:

- Make sure you seal the area between the window and the top and sides of the air conditioner. If the foam strip that came with the appliance has worn out, use adhesive backed weather stripping.

- Check the coolant level on a regular basis. A system that is 10 percent low on coolant will cost about 20 percent more to operate.

- Install an air conditioner so it's level, rather than positioning the unit at an angle.

- Draw blinds or drapes on the sunny side of the house to block out the sun's rays, keep the garage door shut and close all the windows in the house. By doing so, the house will stay cooler and you'll save money on cooling bills -- not to mention "wear and tear" on your air conditioner.

- At the end of the season, make sure you winterize your air conditioner. If you leave the unit in the window, wrap it with plastic and seal it with duct tape, or purchase an air conditioner cover.

- If you remove the air conditioner from the window, be careful not to bend or damage the cooling fins in the back. And do not store the unit on the garage floor, because it could come into contact with corrosive salts that can drip off car tires.

- Install a high efficiency filter, such as a Filtrete room air conditioner filter from 3M, and replace it after two months of use. The Filtrete room air conditioner filter captures up to 20 times more pollen, dust, dirt and other micro particles.

"BUCKLE UP" was the message at a pre-prom safety rally held at North Quincy High School. From left, Supt. Of Schools Eugene Creedon, Massachusetts MADD Executive Director Barbara Harrington, Registrar of Motor Vehicles Daniel Grabauskas, and Mayor James Sheets listen to the remarks of North Quincy Principal Louis Ioanilli, who urged his seniors to carry the safety lessons learned for the rest of their lives. (Quincy Sun Photo)

OFFICER JOHN CAPORALE, a traffic investigator for the Quincy Police Department, mans a seatbelt checkpoint at North Quincy High School and hands out safety brochures to the school's seniors. Message At North Quincy High Rally Clear: Buckle-Up

As the Registrar of Motor Vehicles, it was Daniel Grabauskas' job last Thursday to tell more than 300 seniors at a North Quincy pre-prom rally the life-saving importance of wearing seat belts.

But seeing as how Grabauskas is also the survivor of a head-on collision with a Russian truck requiring an emergency airlift from Lithuania to Finland and the wearing of a neck brace for four months, perhaps his words were taken a little more to heart by the audience of young adults.

Several years ago Grabauskas, of Lithuanian ancestry, was helping Lithuanians build a new government after the fall of Communism when a car he was a passenger in slid on a patch of ice and directly into the Russian truck.

"Five doctors told me that my seat belt saved my life that day," Grabauskas told the North Quincy seniors, adding later his relief that his spine had only been cracked, not broken.

Grabauskas was the guest of honor at a safety rally which also included

Mayor James Sheets, Supt. of Schools and North Quincy alumnus Eugene Creedon, and Barbara Harrington, executive director of Massachusetts Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD).

As part of a MADD program supported by the RMV, the seniors all signed pledge cards promising not only to wear seat belts themselves but to require that all passengers in their cars do the same.

To keep the mood light-hearted, a drawing of the pledge cards was held with the following student winners: Christian Vasquez, a limousine ride to the prom for him and seven of his friends courtesy of Sennett Limousine of Rockland; Martin McDonough, a $100 gift certificate from the Copley Plaza Mall in Boston; and Elaine Wong, four Red Sox tickets provided by South Shore Volvo.

Later, as the seniors drove out of the parking lot, Quincy police officers established a checkpoint, inspecting seatbelts and passing out safety brochures.

"Enjoy the prizes, enjoy the prom, but buckle up," said Grabauskas. "Wearing your safety belt can mean the difference between surviving a crash or not."

Mayor Sheets, recalling the parental worry he faced as the father of four teenagers with youthful feelings of invincibility, said it more plainly: "We love you very much. It's very important that you don't drink, that you wear your seatbelts, and that you have a good and safe time at the prom."

Creedon recognized the enormous efforts teachers and parents were making for the students' after-prom party and told the students that "these nine days should be the happiest days of your North Quincy experience."

And North Quincy Principal Louis Ioanilli reminded students to make buckling up part of their "lifelong learning experience" to take with them long after prom night.

According to MADD's Harrington, only 35 percent of Massachusetts teens and only 50 percent of Massachusetts adults buckle up, figures which rank the state as the second or third worst

"Traffic crashes are the greatest single cause of death for ages 6 to 28, and almost half of them are alcohol related," Harrington said. "Adults need to send clear 'no alcohol use before age 21' messages to our young people and we need to wear our seat belts every day, on every ride. Seat belts save young lives."

Grabauskas contrasted North Quincy's soft-sell approach, using prizes and brochures, with an earlier hard-sell approach at Quincy High, where students were surprised by an assembly featuring a "mock funeral" for a fictitious drunk-driving victim. "For some kids the hard-sell works and for some kids the soft-sell works, but the ultimate goal is the same: no drunk-driving and wear your safety belts."

When used properly, safety belts reduce the risk of death and serious injury by 50 percent.

Diabetes: The Leading Cause of Kidney Failure

(NU) - The focus on finding a cure for diabetes is applauded by many in the medical community, especially by nephrologists — doctors who specialize in the treatment of kidney disease.

Diabetes is the number one cause of kidney failure in the United States, accounting for more than 40 percent of the new cases of end-stage renal disease (ESRD), or total kidney failure, each year. People with ESRD require regular dialysis or a kidney transplant to stay alive.

The links between diabetes and kidney failure are not new, but as the incidence of diabetes increases, the number of ESRD cases also has increased dramatically. That number stands at close to 350,000 Americans with life-threatening ESRD, approximately 120,000 of them (or 34 percent) the result of diabetes.

These alarming numbers are cause for concern to members of the American Society of Nephrology, a not-for-profit organization of physicians and researchers that specializes in kidney diseases.

Diabetics and the Kidneys

Scientists know that high levels of blood sugar and hypertension (high blood pressure) increase the risk of people with diabetes developing ESRD. Hypertension is a particularly dangerous complication of diabetes because the regulation of blood pressure is a key function of the kidney. As hypertension progresses and damages the kidneys, the organs are less able to do the job of controlling blood pressure, triggering a dangerous cycle ending in severe kidney damage.

"People with diabetes need to be alert to the risk their condition poses to their kidneys," says ASN past President William M. Bennett, M.D. "Early detection of kidney disease and treatment of hypertension are essential for diabetics."

Maintain Kidney Health

In consultation with your doctor, there is much you can do to keep your kidneys healthy. A variety of drugs are available to lower blood pressure, thereby slowing the progression of kidney disease. Because excessive intake of protein may be harmful to certain diabetics with diminished kidney function, a low protein diet may be beneficial. In most diabetics, intensive management of blood sugar levels can be of great benefit to long-term kidney health.

If you have diabetes, be aware of the associated risk to your kidneys. Have your blood pressure checked regularly and follow your doctor's advice regarding your diabetes regimen.

kidney disease, visit the ASN web site at www.asn-online.com.

Raiders Fend Off Falmouth

By CHRIS POISSON

(Deep breathe) Whew!

The North Quincy baseball team and its fans collectively sighed relief Monday afternoon after the Red Raiders dodged disaster, holding on to a 7-4 win over Falmouth (5-9, 4-5) at Adams Field in the first game of a tortuous five-game week that could make or break the season.

North Quincy (7-6, 3-5) played at Bridgewater-Raynham Tuesday and then it hosted them yesterday (Wednesday). Tomorrow (Friday) it travels to Barnstable and Saturday it's at Silver Lake.

"We have a five-game week, so it's good to get the first one," said coach Larry Taglieri.

The first one didn't come easily, though.

Trailing 4-3 in the sixth with two outs and the bases loaded, junior Keith Doherty lifted a lazy fly ball that dropped in front of the left fielder, who got a late break on the ball, for two runs and the lead.

"When you put the bat on the ball things happen," Taglieri said. "[Doherty] batted the guy with the stick and put in play and caught a break."

Century 21 Richmond Associates (formerly Quincy P.A.L.) got its 2000 season underway after a couple of rainouts by defeating Kenny's Lock, 16-3.

John Murray pitched a complete game with 12 strikeouts, and he also had two base hits. John Benoit played a solid game behind the plate and Nicholas Poli made a nice play at third, and he also had two RBIs.

Glenn Peterson ripped a triple and double and had four RBIs. Also contributing offensively were Bobby Harrington, Tom Henry (hit, walk, two runs), Miah Foley (double, single, 2 RBIs), Brendan Foley (double, 2 runs) and Gary Uvanitte (hit, run).

For Kenny's Lock, Steve Salvatore had two hits and Jim Fulti and Jason Thomas played well.

Century 21 — 19
C.N.A.P.I. — 8

Derek Riihimaki picked up the win and he also had two triples. David Cordeiro earned the save with six strikeouts, including the final five batters. He also had three doubles.

Glenn Peterson was solid behind the plate, picking off a runner at second base. Dan Poggi played well at first base and added two hits and three runs scored. Peter Grillo shined at third base and had a hit. John Murray blasted a home run and had double, Justin Farnham had two singles and two runs and Mike Reilly had a walk and a run scored.

Yellow Cab — 11

After senior John Gavin followed with a huge two-run single to right for a 7-4 advantage, the Red Raiders appeared to have had this one locked up. But in the top of the seventh inning the pace-makers were pumping hard again.

Senior Dan O'Toole took the mound in relief of Doherty, who pitched six strong innings of four-run ball. After getting the first out, O'Toole gave up an in-field hit and then struggled with his command as he walked two to load the bases.

Senior Matt McCann relieved him and the next batter drilled a shot to center field that looked like it would sail over the head of sophomore Pat Bregoli.

With the runners going full speed, Bregoli tracked it down and quickly fired the ball back to the infield. The runner at first had passed his teammate at second and was called out when he ran out of the baseline trying to make his way back.

"We got a break with that, too," Taglieri said.

Falmouth took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on a single, great defensive game at first base.

AAA Baseball

For Local 2222, Shane Carlyle had three hits and Corey Lumaghini played well.

Local 2222 — 8

Ricky Bjork, Mike Ainsley, Joe Ceurvals and Justin Boyd all went deep in Yellow Cab's third straight win. Mike Saville came through with two clutch hits, and George Haines and Rob Mann made spectacular defensive plays. Ceurvals picked up the win.

For Local 2222, Mark Blowers and John Storella-Mullin both cracked their first Triple A hit. Shane Carlyle hit a mammoth three-run triple.

Kenny's Lock — 11
Quincy D.A.R.E. — 10

Kenny's Lock rallied from a 10-run deficit to pull out the win. Anthony Salvatore had a bases loaded triple to highlight a 10-run fifth inning.

Jeff Rackauskas earned the save for getting out of a jam in the sixth inning and he also had a triple. Anthony Saladis, who had a hit in the rally, picked up the win.

For D.A.R.E., Robert Leahy pitched well and had two hits. Erik Smith and Eric Moreschi also played well as they each reached base twice.

Local 2222 — 3

Johnathan Cahill went the distance to pick up the win. He also had three hits and four RBIs. Dominic McDougall, Sean Joyce and Bob Leahy also had clutch hits. Steve Nelson played a stolen base and a single. In the second, Falmouth reached Doherty for two more singles, but then the left-hander found a groove as fanned the next four batters, including the side in the third.

In the third, the bottom of the order provided an offensive spark for North Quincy. Gavin, hitting in seventh spot, led with a single and junior Chris Lockhead followed with a single to put runners on the corners. Lockhead stole second and with one out, Bregoli hit a sacrifice fly to tie the game.

Junior Chris Doherty provided the go-ahead runs when ripped one to right that got by the fielder and rolled all the way to the fence for an inside-the-park home run and a 3-1 lead.

Falmouth scored a run in the fifth and two more in the sixth to grab a 4-3 lead. It could've had more but North Quincy executed a perfect 7-5-2 relay throw to nail a runner at the plate to end the inning.

"It was a great play," Taglieri said. "Chris Walsh made a dynamic throw to Chris Doherty who made a strong feed to Brian Deptula who applied the tag."

For Local 2222, Shane Carlyle had three hits and Corey Lumaghini played well.

Kenny's Lock — 9

Rob Mann had three hits, including a home run, and also came on in relief to shut down a sixth-inning rally. Mike Ainsley had four hits and Mike Saville had three hits and two RBIs. Ricky Bjork and Matt Clifford each had a pair of hits.

For Kenny's Lock, Steve Salvatore had two hits and Jeff Rackauskas singled and scored three runs.

Yellow Cab — 16
Quincy D.A.R.E. — 5

Ten-year-old George Haines hit a lead-off home run in the second inning for the game-winning run as Yellow Cab won its fifth straight game. Joe Ceurvals batted out four hits and Justin Boyd and Mike Ainsley each had three hits.

For Quincy D.A.R.E., Sean Joyce tripled and scored while Steve Nelson and Mark Demelin played well.

Quincy D.A.R.E. — 6

Ten-year-old Nicholas Poli battled early control problems to pick up his first win, striking out nine in three innings. Bobby Harrington earned his first save with five strikeouts. Offensively, Tom Henry had a hit and scored two runs, Dan Poggi stroked two doubles and Gary Uvanitte had a huge two-run single. Poli also had a hit and scored the first run.

JOAN PIERCE, a Quincy resident and land acquisition agent with the Massachusetts Department of Fisheries and Wildlife, will lead visitors on a nature walk in Faxon Park Sunday at 2 p.m. as part of the Parks Department's Environmental Treasures Program. David Murphy of the Parks Department will handle the history portion of the tour, discussing topics such as the mysterious stone benches, like this one, hidden throughout the park.

Nature And History Walk Sunday At Faxon Park

The second monthly tour in the Environmental Treasures of Quincy Program will be a nature and history walk in Faxon Park Sunday at 2 p.m.

Joan Pierce, a resident of Quincy and a land acquisition agent with the Massachusetts Department of Fisheries and Wildlife, will point out the various trees and plants in the black oak forest and the scrub oak-pitch pine communities found in the park.

"This should be a great time to see spring flowering plants, such as the blueberry, shadbush, and Canada mayflower, and insects such as inchworms and azure butterflies," said Pierce. She added that participants on the walk will also experience some of the smells of spring such as the fragrant sweet fern.

David Murphy of the Quincy Park Department will lead the history portion of the walk, describing how the land has been used in the past, how the park was created, and the story behind the mysterious stone benches hidden in various nooks and crannies of the park.

The walk will be one to two hours. Because the trails are rocky and go through areas with poison ivy and briars, participants should wear proper footwear (sneakers or hiking boots), socks, and long pants. Light colored clothing is recommended in order to easily identify ticks.

The walk will start at the first parking lot on the right as one enters the playground.

In order to support environmentally-friendly transportation to the event, prizes will be given to the first 20 people to come to the park by foot, bike, or carpool. Participants coming by bike should lock their bikes to the playground equipment at the park entrance.

The event is free. Call the Park Department at 376-1254 for more information.

Final Mentoring Workshop At NQHS Monday

The final in a series of a mentor/Protégé Workshop will be held Monday at North Quincy High School. The workshop will begin at 3 p.m. in the auditorium with a talk by Dr. Carmen Mariano, associate dean of Quincy College in Plymouth. His speech is entitled, "Life in How You Look at It: So is Teaching!" At 4 p.m. a collation and awards for the 65 mentors and protégés will be presented in the cafeteria.

The Quincy Public Schools initiated a system Beginning Teacher Support Program last year that has enabled veteran teachers to act as mentors and establish learning conversation with 65 teacher protégés. The role of mentor was defined as a trusted guide who supports and inspires colleagues to thrive in their profession. The goals of the mentoring program was to nurture the confidence of new teachers, to raise the level of student achievement, to increase job satisfaction or veteran teachers, and to promote professional development through collegiality. Mentors can answer questions about the school routine, report cards, situations with children and other issues.

The veteran teachers picked to be mentors were volunteers from within the professional staff. Their selection was based on their proximity to the protégé within a building, on the similarity of their teaching assignment, and on their experience, professional esteem, enthusiasm and acceptance of varied teaching styles.

A Thought For The Week

What is liberty? . . . Some people say that liberty is the right to do whatever we want to do whenever we want to do it. . . . But this is not liberty; this is a license. In government it leads to anarchy. On the highway it leads to automobile accidents. In family life it leads to tears and disasters.

Liberty is not the right to do whatever we want to do whenever we want to do it.

The word liberty comes from a Latin word meaning free. But this Latin word in turn is derived from a Sanskrit word meaning "to grow up."

The free person is the person who has grown up -- especially the person who has grown up emotionally. The worst tyrant before whom we can ever bow is ourselves. The only person truly free is the man who has acquired self-control to such a degree that he is easily the master of his own impulses. The anarchist and libertine are not free. They are prisoners of their own worst selves. The free man is the man who has grown up-matured. He has learned how to live with ease and grace because he has learned how to control himself. . . . He is free. . . .

sized that the debt-service money is only a precaution and that social programs in the city have not and will not be jeopardized.

"First, we're not sure that any of that money will have to go towards debt-service," Sheets said, arguing that the shipyard is still viable, either through a Chapter 11 reorganization of shipyard owner Massachusetts Heavy Industries (MHI) or commercial interest from other parties.

As for the loan, Sheets reiterated that it was HUD money specifically targeted for economic development. "It's the economic development piece of the CDBG money," Sheets said. "It will never impact any city social programs."

Meade addressed the council and explained that, with the default of MHI, and barring a financial resolution of the situation such as a successful Chapter 11 reorganization or a liquidation of assets, the city would be making loan payments via CDBG money until the year 2016.

Meade added that the city was actually on its third year of the twenty-year loan but that payments until now had been made with a $1 million EDI grant attached to the Section 108 loan.

The city, Meade said, has loan payments due August 1 of this year and Feb. 1 of 2001 totaling $676,413; the $330,000 would make up the difference between the amount due and the money still left in the EDI grant account.

Meade emphasized that, even when loan payments reach their highest point, at roughly $750,000, only economic development monies would be used to make payments, per Mayor Sheets' original plan.

"The economic development monies (Quincy 2000, CARD) would absolutely meet the commitment of the 108 (loan) and not put public service monies (housing and social services) at risk," Meade said.

Council President Paul Harold questioned Meade on the current value of the shipyard, to which Meade offered various estimates, and the city's third-place position as creditor behind the federal and state governments.

Harold was particularly upset that Meade offered one estimated value of $250 million for what would be a completely functional shipyard. "That figure is not being used by anyone anymore," Harold said. "The federal estimate is closer to $40 or $50 million."

If that were the case, Harold warned, the federal government was likely to recoup its $47 million investment in the shipyard but Quincy, as third in line, stood "no chance."

"There will be no money for Brewers Corner," Harold said, referring to proposed commercial improvements in the area, "and the Quincy Point expansion has been reduced before it's really begun."

Harold's comments were disputed by Sheets, who said the city was already looking into "other sources" to complete the work begun in the Quincy Point area. "We fully intend to move forward with the Quincy Point/Washington Street project," Sheets said.

In his remarks before the council, Meade said that new HUD guidelines required that, CARD status or no, an area would have to prove 20 percent worth of code violations to be considered for commercial development funds.

Currently, Meade said, the city would revisit the three oldest CARD districts - Quincy Center, Wollaston, and North Quincy -- as well as areas like Brewer's Corner, and conduct "a structure by structure assessment" looking for said violations, saying that this would be the best possible way to obtain HUD funding in the future.

City Pays Special Tribute To A 'Greatest Generation'

The Papile Family: 'They Came To Give, Not To Take'

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Raffael Papile and Lucia DiLorenzo had been next door neighbors in Torre dei Passeri, Italy.

He came to the United States as a teenager at the turn of the century. And while living in Quincy in 1905, sent Lucia a photo of himself so she would remember him. She sent one of herself back to him.

He looked at it and realized she was the one for him. So he proposed to her by mail. And then sent her a boat ticket. Shrewdly, a one-way ticket.

They were married in 1906. He was 21 and she 17.

And that was the beginning of one of Quincy's outstanding and most respected families — one that should have, but did not make Tom Brokaw's best seller, "The Greatest Generation."

Raffael and Lucia became parents of 16 children, struggled to raise them during the Great Depression and saw seven of the sons go off to fight in World War II.

Last Saturday, Quincy had a special tribute, in a special place, for this special family.

"The Papile family," said Mayor James

Sheets, "represents the families of America. They came to give, not to take. They came to build, not to tear down."

"We are paying tribute to a family that is typical of the families that made America what it is today and what this city is."

And, he observed: "There is nothing that has taken place in the last 100 years more important than what is happening here today."

What was happening was the dedication to the Papile family of an inscribed memorial bronze plaque on a granite stone in a beautifully newly landscaped mini-like park area on the Edwards St. side of the Point Webster Middle School.

An appropriate site. Newly renovated as a middle school, it formerly housed both the Webster elementary and Point Junior High schools which most of the children attended nine years each, just walking across the street from their home on Harkins St.

Eight children survive and were there at Saturday's tribute: Mary Papile, the oldest at 94 and matriarch of the family; James, George, Leo and Ralph, four of the sons who served in World War II; Helen Mariano, Amelia Faberty and Gloria Kelly.

James Papile, now a city assessor, spoke for his brothers and sisters:

"When the United States government opened the doors to immigrants at the turn of the last century, I'm sure the government was hoping for people such as Lucia and Raffael Papile to migrate here. They were certainly the perfect immi-

Union, Non-Union Demonstrates Support Agree On 'Responsible Employer Ordinance'

By CRAIG SALTERS

Strong union and non-union support for a proposed "Responsible Employer Ordinance" at Monday night's public hearing prompted hopes of its adoption at the council's next meeting June 5.

The REO would essentially re-affirm and legislate an executive order issued by Mayor James Sheets in November of 1998 requiring contractors doing work on city projects over $100,000 to pay prevailing wages, train employees through apprentice programs, and provide such benefits as medical coverage and workmen's compensation. It would also, among other things, require a "best faith" effort on the parts of contractors to hire Quincy residents.

"We're just trying to level the playing field," said Gregory Hanley, chairman of the Ordinance Committee and co-sponsor of the ordinance with Councillor Daniel Raymond.

Union representation at the hearing was strong, with close to a dozen union members standing at the microphone to record their approval of the REO, but the real surprise was support from open-shop contractors

The department also held an awards night Tuesday in the second floor conference room at City Hall.

A Knotty Question For The City Council Can Property Owners Rightfully Pave Front Lawns For Parking?

By CRAIG SALTERS
The rights of the individual versus the rights of the community.

The power of government versus the American tradition of private property.

These may seem like abstract concepts reserved for some dusty Civics textbook, but they were front and center Monday night as the Ordinance Committee of the City Council tackled a rather embarrassing problem: some Quincy residents are paving their front lawns for increased parking.

In response to what in some neighborhoods is a near parking crisis, a minority of Quincy residents are blacktopping their front lawns in an effort to find more of that ever dwindling commodity: parking space.

Just how many were doing so and just what could be done about it became an immediate issue, so the hearing was recessed until a later date to gather input from Walter White, director of Inspectional Services, and Stephen McGrath, city solicitor, but not before the problem, and councillors' views on the problem, saw the light of day.

Some councillors, for the sake of the community, want to put a stop to the paving.

"This is clearly an issue of public health and safety," said Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott, who highlighted the problem last year as one of his neighborhood "blight" issues, which also included abandoned shopping carts and laundry lines.

McDermott and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond are co-sponsoring an ordinance which would require landscaping, and not asphalt, for front yards in the city, with a clear exception "for a driveway to access other required parking."

Raymond emphasized that the new ordinance would "restrict the ability"

The Patriot Ledger Is Up For Sale

The Patriot Ledger is up for sale.

James F. Plugh, company president and chief executive officer, announced Tuesday that the Quincy based regional newspaper, its sister publication, the Brockton Enterprise, and the Memorial Press Group weekly newspapers headquartered in Plymouth are being offered for sale.

Plugh, who is also publisher of the Ledger, said his decision to recommend the sale to company shareholders was due to recent ill health.

Plugh and Frank E. Richardson, New York financier, purchased the Ledger and MPG in 1998 from the Low family who had owned the Ledger for 129 years. Plugh and Richardson had purchased the Brockton (Cont'd on page 24)

Mayor's Grandson Dies After Long Illness

James Kempton Sheets, six-month old beloved grandson of Mayor James Sheets and his wife Joann, died early Tuesday morning in Rochester, NY, after a prolonged illness.

Born Nov. 24, 1999, James was the son of Stephanie Sheets and James Paul Sheets, eldest son of the mayor.

Besides parents and grandparents, James is survived by a sister, six-year old Laura Sheets.

As of press time, funeral arrangements were not available.

City Trees Hit By Canker Worms

The Park and Forestry Department reports that the tiny canker-worm is infesting trees throughout the city.

The small green worm is feasting on the leaves of a variety of shade trees and is also attracted to fruit trees.

The city's tree warden, working with outside arborists, has determined that the canker-worm should not affect the long-term health of the tree, unless there are previous, significant stresses on the tree, the department said. Despite the aesthetic nuisance, the canker-worms should not harm the long-term health of the urban forest. The City will not spray trees for canker-worms.

The effects of the canker-worm can be found in the leaves of the trees. The worms have comparatively large appetites for insects their size and holes can be found in the leaves that they affect. Due to the significant amount of droppings they produce, it is advised that cars not park under trees affected by canker-worms.

The canker-worm blight should run its course by early to mid-June. The worms will eventually develop into moths.

Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Department said, "The aesthetic blight caused by the canker-worm is disturbing, but we should be in good shape long-term. A bad year was predicted for the canker-worms and, based on what we've seen in various neighborhoods such as Wollaston Hill and others, they were right. We will continue to monitor this situation into the Fall to ensure that our trees maintain their health and vigor through next year and the years to come."

INTERGENERATIONAL TRAVEL

As people continue to live longer, more active lives, they are more apt to travel with several generations. In 1999, an estimated 17.6 million people spent a vacation that included a grandparent, parent and child. This intergenerational travel trend is likely to increase. Before planning a trip with family or friends who span several age groups, include everyone in the process. This will ensure that all travelers agree on the destination, price range and time schedule. Settle financial issues in advance and allow for any physical limitations that may affect someone during the trip. Because different generations have a wide range of interests, try to include activities and destinations that offer choices for both old and young to enjoy. Discover the difference a professional travel agent like PRIME TRAVEL can make in your next travel plans. Questions about vacationing with the family? We've got good ideas. grants."

He said his mother "was compassionate, and understanding toward relatives, friends and neighbors."

And, he added: "She was a very religious person — walking from this neighborhood to St. John's Church to attend daily Mass and Holy Communion. This, she felt, was a primary reason for the safe return of her seven sons from war."

Papile said that his father, a WPA construction foreman during the depression and later with a private firm was "a leader, proud, patriotic, a man's man and a generous man."

"There were times during the great depression or strikes at the shipyard that men would be waiting outside our door in the early A.M., seeking to be hired for work."

"He would hire as many as he thought would be allowed with the understanding that those who were hired would share the work week with those who may not be hired."

Papile had another reason why the site selected for the plaque was fitting.

He explained, with a smile, that the city took more than half of the family's land to build the Point and Webster schools.

"This dedication here today of this small valuable tract of land appears to be very appropriate in exchange for the large piece taken," he said.

Two of the Papile family grandchildren also spoke.

Carmen Mariano, Associate Dean of Quincy College, Plymouth campus, said of his grandparents: "They left a legacy of love. They deserve to live in memory forever and now they will."

Patricia Carter, former fourth grade teacher at Willard School who attended Point and Webster said the recognition site was most appropriate. Her grandparents, she said, stressed "the importance of education."

There were other tributes.

State Rep. and School

Committeeman Ronald Mariano said of the family: "They gave back to the country. They are a fitting representation of what this neighborhood is all about."

Fr. Daniel Graham, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, who gave the invocation, said the family has "given back a gift of love."

Guido Pettinelli, retired Quincy police officer, who lived on Edwards St. and has known the Papile family all his life, was the emcee at the dedication.

Pettinelli who played a major role in bringing about the tribute to the Papile family said to them: "I played with you. I prayed with you. I laughed with you. I cried with you."

The family thanked Mayor Sheets, School Supt. Eugene Creedon, Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park, Recreation and Cemetery Department, Representative Mariano and Pettinelli "for making this day possible."

The plaque, unveiled by Mayor Sheets and Mary Papile, is inscribed:

"In loving memory of the Raffael and Lucia Papile family. In recognition of their many years of dedication, patriotism and contribution of services to this school, community, city, state and country. Quincy Point-Webster Middle School May 2000."

The eight surviving children only wished their deceased parents and brothers and sisters — Alfonso, Sadie, Jenny, Edward and the other three World War II veterans, MAYOR JAMES SHEETS and Mary Papile, matriarch of the Papile family, unveil the plaque honoring the family at a dedication ceremony Saturday outside the Point Webster Middle School.

Quincy's Yesterdays Manet Lake Rink Proposed

By PAUL HAROLD

The Houghs Neck Community Council formed a committee to study the feasibility of building a year-round recreation facility at Manet Lake.

39 Years Ago

Community Council President Hugo Swanson appointed David Kneeland as head of the committee to explore the possibility of building an enclosed ice rink. The rink would be used for eight months of the year after which the lake would be drained for use as a summer recreational facility.

Other members of the study committee included Mrs. Richard Wainwright, Mrs. James Laing, Mrs. James Leslie and Mrs. Edward Radcliffe.

SHARP DECREASE IN PARKING REVENUES

At the request of Councillor Joseph LaRaia, City Auditor Alexander Smith compiled a record of parking meter receipts in Quincy Center for the first four months of 1961. The result showed a sharp decrease of $3,500 over the same period last year.

LaRaia said there could be different reasons for the shortfall: the competition from the new Braintree shopping plaza, the heavy snow storms earlier in the year and the trend toward more night shopping when the meters were not in use.

The results of Smith's report and Councillor Carl Anderson's proposal to abolish parking fees in the down were scheduled for discussion by city officials and business leaders at the headquarters of the Quincy-South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

BURKE CALLS FOR PLAYGROUND IMPROVEMENTS

Councillor George Burke, chairman of the council's Park and Recreation Committee, said he was "getting the run around" from the Park Board in his attempts to secure improvements to the city's parks and playgrounds.

He met with the board to present numerous copies of resolves he introduced for improvements to various park areas. He also questioned the board's policy of not replacing playground equipment that had been vandalized.

Urges Giarratani To Visit USS Salem

Editor, The Quincy Sun: I am responding to Sal Giarratani's letter about the USS Salem, which appeared in the April 6 issue of The Quincy Sun.

Mr. Giarratani suggests that the USS Salem doesn't belong in Quincy and should be sent to the Charlestown Navy Yard. He also says that the Salem isn't a tourist attraction and compares her to the SS Minnow from Gilligan's Island.

Mr. Giarratani, have you ever been aboard the USS Salem? Have you seen her freshly painted hull? Have you seen the 1959 time capsule that is in the interior of the ship? Or noticed the dedicated volunteers, some Quincy residents, some from other cities, some from other states, who put in thousands of hours per year to keep the ship in good shape? Many of these volunteers are former crewmen and former officers who served aboard the Salem, or who served on other ships in the Navy. Let me tell you a little about the USS Salem.

The USS Saint Paul Association has chosen the USS Salem to be its home for its memorial and artifacts. The US Navy Cruiser Sailors Association, a nationwide organization, holds its meetings aboard the Salem and has a large display in tribute to all US Navy cruisers and the men who served on them.

Every weekend from September through May, 100 to 300 Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts, Girl Scouts, and Explorer Scouts come on board to learn Naval history and to participate in activities that simulate Naval life. The US Naval Sea Cadet program also has regular meetings on board. The Naval Reserve holds drills on board so the seaman get to work on real equipment. The JACS job-training program loves to come on board since the Salem has many opportunities to expand their plumbing, painting, and carpentry skills.

Every October the volunteers put on a Haunted Ship, which is a major fund-raising tool to help support the museum. The Haunted Ship continues to grow at almost 100 percent a year and is so popular that at least one professional company was looking into running the event.

Last year two Tall Ships visited Quincy next to the USS Salem and have indicated that they want to come back again.

I wish to publicly thank former Executive Director Captain Duetsch for what he got accomplished in the last year and a half. Interim Director Joanne Condon-Walsh has also worked hard in paying off the old debt that kept the museum from progressing. Last December, a marketing director was hired. Her work should provide more income and funding to the museum. My wish is that a permanent director with museum experience be found quickly to take advantage of the USS Salem's opportunities to become known as one of the best Naval ship museums in the country.

So, Mr. Giarratani, want to come by and visit this unimportant, non-tourist attraction?

Millions Of Dollars Wasted

Editor, The Quincy Sun: Millions of dollars were lost and wasted in the Quincy Shipyard fiasco. A lot of time is gone that should have been used to develop the shipyard in another endeavor.

Right now I don't care whose fault it was to allow this situation to prolong so long. All I know is that the millions of dollars wasted could have been used to service Quincy residents, senior citizens, Quincy youth, public works, etc. Now, all the above will suffer needlessly.

Twenty-six flagpoles have been erected alongside the USS Salem. Mayor James Sheets will dedicate the corporate flags Friday afternoon at noon. Employees of the museum's Corporate Sponsors are invited on board the Salem at half price for the entire weekend. WJDA will broadcast live from the Salem Friday morning.

On Saturday, May 27, the Salem will host Family Day. Children will have the opportunity to visit the Salem for half price ($2) to discover what life was like on board a warship. There will also be other activities for children such as police horses, a fire truck, clown, face-painting and more.

On Sunday, May 28, the Salem will be transported back to the days of The Andrews Sisters, War Bonds, and Rosie The Riveter as the musical entourage "For Sentimental Reasons" recreates a 1940's USO Show on the deck of the Salem from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.

The group, consisting of six singers and three musicians, will also feature costume changes, impersonations, and music from that era. "For Sentimental Reasons" has toured the country for years, entertaining audiences from coast to coast. Admission is $6 for adults and $4 for children and seniors, which includes a tour of the USS Salem.

On Monday, May 29, the Salem will host a Memorial Day Service beginning at 8:30 a.m. with House Ways and Means Chairman Paul Haley as guest speaker. Haley, a career U.S. Navy Officer, was instrumental in securing a $2.05 million grant from the state for the restoration of the USS Salem. Mayor Sheets will present Haley with a U.S. Flag which will be flown by a former crew member over the Salem on Memorial Day. Sunday and Monday festivities will also include a reenactment by the 3rd Panzer Grenadier Company.

The USS Salem, a 17,000 ton heavy cruiser, was the 717-foot flagship of the U.S. Navy's Sixth Fleet. The Salem is located just off Rte. 3A, next to the Fore River Bridge. Use the main entrance off the bridge rotary near the Harbor Express.

BIG SISTER of the Year Ellen Weddleton of Quincy with Little Sister Brittany. Ellen was recently honored for her outstanding volunteer work in behalf of Big Sister Association of Greater Boston, Inc.

Ellen Weddleton Named Big Sister Of The Year

Ellen Weddleton of Quincy was recently honored as a Big Sister of the Year by the Big Sister Association of Greater Boston.

The award recognizes Weddleton's volunteer efforts on behalf of the organization, specifically her extraordinary commitment and dedication to her Little Sister, 11-year-old Brittany of Braintree.

First introduced to her Little Sister two years ago, Weddleton wanted to become a Big Sister to make a difference in a girl's life. "I noticed that there was such a need for kids to have attention, and it seemed like something I could provide," Ellen and Brittany see each other a couple of times a month, doing activities that range from going sailing and skiing to participating in community service activities sponsored by the Big Sister Association.

Ellen says she's noticed that Brittany has become more trusting and more relaxed in the time they have known each other, but Brittany is not the only one to benefit from their friendship. "It's been a wonderful experience for me," says Ellen. "I've gained a great relationship with a little girl. I add value to her life, and she adds value to mine."

Ellen's commitment to the Big Sister program extends beyond her relationship with Brittany. An enthusiastic spokesperson for the agency, Ellen, an audit consultant at John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company, has been very helpful in spreading the word about Big Sister as a recruitment and fund raising volunteer.

The Big Sister Association of Greater Boston matches girls ages 7 to 15 with women volunteers like Ellen who become their Big Sister. Big and Little Sisters meet regularly, and over time a friendship develops. The stability and consistency of these relationships offer girls opportunities to experience a broad range of life options, gain self-esteem, and have their voices heard.

In 1999, the Big Sister Association served almost 1,200 girls; there are currently 250 girls waiting for a Big Sister.

Orientations for women interested in learning more about Big Sister are held weekly at Big Sister's main office in Boston, and monthly in Big Sister's Quincy branch office.

For more information, contact Big Sister at 617-236-8060.

Bacon, Mushroom Quiche

I'm always looking for different things to cook and almost always one of our children will come up with a beauty.

And so it is in today's recipe for a delicious quiche that Rita had brought on Easter Sunday as part of our brunch. And let's forget the word cholesterol just for today!

It can be made ahead and it's fairly easy.

Bacon, mushroom quiche

3-4 strips bacon cooked and cut in pieces

2-3 large mushrooms cut in small slices (uncooked)

3 eggs (slightly beaten)

1 cup cream (Rita said this is a must)

Fry the bacon, drain and cut in small pieces. Set aside.

In a slightly greased quiche or pie plate, place the mushrooms, then the bacon. Add the eggs and then the cream. Mix just a little bit. Bake in a 325 degree oven for about 30 minutes.

Taylor Dennehey's Scrunchies Helps John Daley Memorial Scholarship

The John P. Daley Memorial Scholarship is $100 richer thanks to Taylor Dennehey, a fourth grade pupil at the Merrymount School and a student at Sandra Jean's Dance School.

She earned the money by making scrunchies and selling them for $1 apiece to friends and neighbors.

Two $1,000 scholarships are awarded each year to graduating seniors from Quincy High School in the name of John P. Daley, a nephew of Sandra Cavallo, owner of the dance school.

He was the class valedictorian of the 1992 class at Quincy High who died of a congenital heart problem at the age of 21.

The fifth annual Daley Memorial Golf Tournament to raise funds for the scholarship will be held Friday, May 26, at the Poquoy Brook Golf Club in Lakeville.

Anyone interested in donating a gift to raffle, sponsoring a hole or playing in the tournament should contact Kenney & McDonald, 13 East Chestnut St., Sharon 02067, or call Paul Kenney at 781-784-5756.

Sunrise Memorial Service At Sailors Home Cemetery

The Wollaston Legion Post will hold its 63rd annual Memorial Day sunrise service 7 a.m. at the Sailors Home Cemetery off Fenno St.

The service will be part of rededication ceremonies at the cemetery at which $10,000 in improvements will be unveiled. The efforts were designed to beautify the area, illuminate the cemetery's historic and cultural significance, and educate visitors.

"This is the perfect setting and perfect opportunity to announce meaningful improvements to one of our region's most picturesque Civil War burial sites," said Michelle Lydon, chairperson of the Sailors Cemetery Restoration Committee. "These efforts have been made to bring honor to our veterans as well as to educate neighbors, residents, and visitors of the role these brave men had in preserving our personal liberty and national unity."

The ceremony will include the unveiling of two granite stones detailing the story of 119 men buried at the six and one-half acre cemetery and another will list the names of seven forgotten men whose remains are buried in unmarked grave sites on the property.

In addition, United States

flags will be presented to Laurel Oster, the great-great-granddaughter of John Powers, a veteran buried in Sailors Cemetery, and members of the Wollaston Legion Post who have perpetuated the memory and legacy of our city's veterans.

"Memorial Day is a natural time to reflect and pay tribute to the men and women who have served this country and this community," said Lydon. "We hope visitors will come and respect this sacred area and take the time to learn about the important role these veterans have played in our country's history."

The stone monuments, interpretative signs, freshly painted fence and flagpole, and landscaping improvements resulted from a year-long effort which raised more than $10,000 necessary to restore and preserve the history of Sailors Home Cemetery near Wollaston Beach.

The committee raised funds to purchase a stone memorial describing the cemetery's history and its veterans who lie within as well as interpretative signs visible from Fenno St. The funds ensured a re-painted flagpole and fence that surrounds the cemetery. Efforts continue to research and accurately identify all veterans buried at the cemetery.

In addition, historical information obtained by the committee has been incorporated into a book about the salt water marsh nature trail that was recently updated by the Beechwood Knoll School.

In conjunction with the Committee's work, Quincy resident Harold S. Crowley, Jr., has created a chronology of the National Sailors' Home which provided respite for infirm and aged veterans of Naval service on more than 100 acres in the Beechwood Knoll area of Quincy from 1865-1931. The chronology is available at the Thomas Crane Public Library and Quincy Historical Society.

The schedule of events is as follows: Bag pipes; invocation by Fr. Garrett Barry, St. Ann's Church; Wollaston Legion Post Ceremony; Arthur Senter, "Reflections of the Sailors Home;" Michelle Lydon, "About the Committee and its Objectives;" Unveiling of the stones by Mayor James Sheets; Presentation of flags; Firing Squad; "Taps;" Announcement -- Breakfast at the Custom House; Benediction by Fr. Garrett Barry, St. Ann's Church.

Millie Felci Helping To Raise Awareness About Alpha I Disease

By TOM HENSHAW

Fifteen years ago a blood test showed that it was the debilitating disease known as Alpha 1-antitrypsin deficiency (A1AD) and not chronic pulmonary disease that gave Millie Felci all that trouble breathing for so long.

"A lot of physicians and health care people have no clue to Alpha 1," said Felci, now 50, who lived in Quincy Point when the disease was discovered but moved to an apartment in Weymouth when the house on Hanna Street became too much for her.

That's why she is joining local patients who have been diagnosed with the severe genetic enzyme deficiency to raise the awareness of doctors and the public alike to A1AD during Alpha 1 Awareness Month in May.

There are at least 45 patients in Quincy alone and 4,000 in the country, although there might be as many as 100,000 if physicians and nurses were familiar with how to test for the disease and diagnose it correctly.

A1AD is an inherited metabolic disease caused by the absence of a protein in the blood stream that protects tissues from being damaged by substances in the white blood cells. It can lead to emphysema in adults and liver disease in children.

When it was diagnosed, Millie Felci, the wife of WJDA ad salesman Jim MILLIE FELCI IS doing her part to help raise awareness about the disease Alpha 1.

Felci, was sent home with a tank of oxygen to help her breathe. Now she is also on Prolastin, an expensive drug that slows down the progression of organ damage. She takes it intravenously every two weeks.

"It helps me to maintain my life-style," she said. "I'm not going to let the disease get the best of me. You can live with it but it is hard."

She carries around a handful of literature for people who ask her what is wrong.

"The important thing is to get word out into the community and educate the public and the health care givers," she said. "There is no known cure for Alpha 1-antitrypsin deficiency but they are working on it."

In the meantime, people like Millie Felci, with the help of the American Lung Association of Greater Norfolk County, are trying to identify fellow Alphas and encourage them as well as family members to be tested for the disease.

The signs are a shortness of breath, decreased exercise tolerance, family history of lung or infant liver disease, non-responsive asthma, year round allergies, recurring lung infections, awareness of breathing, deterioration of the lower lung and limited smoking history.

The ALA runs a local education and awareness group for patients and their families which meets every other month in Needham. For more information, call the association at 508-668-6729.

If you have been already diagnosed with A1AD and would like more information on Prolastin therapy, call 800-305-7881.

McCauley Offers Compromise On City Council Salaries

Going into Tuesday night's budget session, Councillor Frank McCauley said he would offer a $17,500 compromise proposal for city councillor salaries.

McCauley, chairman of the Finance Committee, said the figure, down $2,000 from Mayor James Sheets' recommendation of $19,500, was a good place for councillors to begin discussion on the controversial issue. "It may win favor with the council, it may not," McCauley explained. "It's always a hard issue, voting to raise your own salary."

Since any raise would not go into effect until January 1st, the total savings under McCauley's plan would be $9,000.

McCauley emphasized that the City Council has gone the longest of any group in terms of a salary increase, its last being in July of 1995. He also defended the work of his colleagues by listing some of the council's accomplishments: the renovated library, the school upgrades, Community Policing, and the home rule petition for what is now Quincy Medical Center.

"Sometimes the substantial accomplishments of the council get submerged with the discussion of lesser issues, like postage," McCauley said.

One thing McCauley is certain of: all nine councillors will vote on the pay raise. "Every councillor will be on record," McCauley promised. "No one will take a walk."

McCauley said he expected other items on the agenda -- Public Works, Police, salary increases for department heads and that of the mayor, which he supports -- to go smoothly.

The current salary for a city councillor is $12,607.

Council Approves $20,000 For Quincy After School Day Care

The City Council voted unanimously last week to appropriate $20,000 to the Quincy After School Day Care program.

The annual appropriation, requested by Councillor Stephen Durkin and recommended by Mayor James Sheets, will be paid for through additional lottery funds.

Durkin, a 10-year member and president of the organization's board of trustees, thanked his colleagues for their speed in handling the matter. He said the 13-year old program has involved in eight elementary schools across the city and was providing all-day kindergarten at some.

The original program, said Durkin, was initiated during the administration of Mayor Frank McCauley on the recommendation of the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women.

Spring HOME IMPROVEMENT

Add Beauty, Comfort And Value With New Windows

For many homeowners, the advantage of energy-efficient, safe windows is as clear as glass. Add quality and style and homeowners may have a whole new view on replacing worn out windows.

That's why the popularity of one window manufacturer is growing. The manufacturer, Simonton Windows, has a range of vinyl replacement and new construction windows that combine desirable practical features, superior performance and long-lasting beauty.

Good examples of Simonton's durable and well-designed windows are the Impressions™ models.

The Simonton Impressions window has a coveted design feature, a fusion-welded frame and sash, a Denny Clip™ pivot system for perfect sash alignment, a contoured lift rail and a triple-stepped sill that is sloped to promote faster water runoff. A coil spring balance system provides constant tension to hold the window open no matter what position it's in.

"Simonton Impressions™ also feature a tilt-in/lift out sash, so cleaning glass is easier than ever," said Tom Latourette, director of corporate marketing for Simonton Windows.

The windows are crafted to be some of the most energy efficient windows on the market today. Air flow is dramatically diminished by a seal that features weather stripping and by insulation that creates dead air chambers inside the frame.

"The optional Sensor Glass package is also available. This package acts like a shield to protect heated and cooled air in the home," said Latourette. "The result is energy savings for our customers."

The Super Sensor Glass Package means that homeowners don't have to choose between energy efficiency and safety when buying windows. If broken, the laminated KeepSafe glass stays relatively in place, so no shards are scattered. A PVB inner layer filters out the sun's ultra-violet rays.

The insertion of Krypton, an inert gas, increases the overall energy efficiency and sound-deadening quality of the windows.

Simonton offers the windows in eight styles, including Double Hung, Slider, Casement, Picture, Bay, Bow and Geometric. Color options include tan, white, honey oak woodgrain and amber oak woodgrain.

To learn more to buy Simonton Impressions™ windows or for more information, call 1-800-542-9118.

Can Property Owners Rightfully Pave Front Lawns For Parking?

of property owners in terms of landscaping just as current ordinances restrict owners from parking on their front lawns, for both aesthetic and safety reasons.

"There really is no reason to hot-top a front lawn," Raymond told his fellow councillors. "There is an increasing situation where property owners are paving their front yards. It looks lousy and makes everything look more urban."

Along with Raymond and McDermott, Councillors Stephen Durkin and Michael D'Amico reported lawn paving incidents and complaints in their respective wards. "It really does detract from the neighborhood," said Durkin, who nevertheless raised a fairness and legal issue by asking whether the proposed ordinance would be selective, prohibiting paving on smaller lots while possibly permitting, he said, circular driveways at some of the homes on Adams St.

David Murphy, Quincy

resident and member of the city's Beautification Committee, voiced his approval and brought a letter from Thomas Koch, chairman of the committee and executive director of the Park, Forestry, and Cemetery Department, who also lent his support to the measure.

"These are the aesthetic issues that keep people in the city," Murphy said.

McDermott summed up the view of ordinance proponents: "It (the ordinance) does not infringe on any property rights but is in the best interest of the community."

But other councillors, and other residents, weren't so sure.

"Are we entering a 'Big Brother' mode?" Councillor Frank McCauley asked his fellow councillors. "Are we going to start telling people what to do with their front lawns?"

McCauley told a story of one of his neighbors who blacktopped some unsightly hedges and actually improved the look of his property. "Who are we to tell people what to do?" McCauley asked, adding that it was the council itself which was against such things as off-street parking, curb-cutting, and the like.

Patrick Conroy of Billings St., who also owns rental property in the city, accused the council of not looking at the big picture, of legislating front lawns when, he said, larger issues like the shipyard went unnoticed.

Conroy emphasized that a majority of homeowners, for simple property value reasons, would never pave over their front lawns, but if they did, it was their business.

"I think you should leave private property alone," Conroy told the council. "Enforce existing ordinances but stay away from private property."

Councillor Timothy Cahill urged caution on the whole issue. "We have to be careful on this," Cahill warned, adding that he was undecided on the matter and wanted more information from White and McGrath. "Some people hate grass. Some people hate trees. But you can't legislate what is good taste and what is bad taste."

Raymondi Targets Open Space Parcels For Ward 2

Councillor Daniel Raymondi, citing a dire need for greenspace in Quincy Point and other neighborhoods, wants to create more open space parcels in Ward 2.

And, fresh from a victory creating the city's first ever revenue stream specifically targeted for open space acquisition, he's working on a plan to do just that.

Raymondi proposed three zoning ordinances at last week's council meeting which, if approved and implemented, would create a total of 154,641 square feet of open space in his ward.

The items were referred to both the Planning Department and the council's Ordinance Committee, which will hold public hearings on all three Monday, June 12, beginning at 6:15 p.m. in the council chambers at City Hall.

"This is an historic opportunity," Raymondi said. "These are fairly good sized parcels and would create a significant amount of open space. It would be in the long-term, best interests of the neighborhoods."

The three properties in

question are:

- 123,938 square feet of space "on the northeasterly side of Cleverly Court from street No. 5 to 49," currently owned by the MWRA, to be re-zoned from Business B to Open Space.

- 22,536 square feet of space "on the southwesterly side of South St. from street No. 271 to 281," currently owned by Mass Electric, to be re-zoned from P.U.D. to Open Space.

- 8,167 square feet of space "on the southerly side of Water St. from street No. 2 to 12 and the northwesterly side of Faxon Lane from street No. 3 to 9," currently owned by Mass Electric, to be re-zoned from Business B to Open Space.

The funds to eventually purchase these sites, Raymondi said, would come from the expected local room occupancy tax adopted by the council and awaiting approval by the state Legislature.

Gradually imposed and beginning in July of 2001, the motel/hotel tax could generate as much as $1 million annually, with 85 percent earmarked for Open Space and 15 percent slated for city tourism promotion.

"Without the hotel/motel tax, none of this would be possible," Raymondi said.

Raymondi emphasized that these properties, once purchased and re-zoned, could add much to a very industrialized and developed part of the city, especially the site off Cleverly Court.

"This is a huge parcel of land," Raymondi said. "It could hold baseball, softball, or soccer fields or provide passive recreation. It's much needed in that area."

The South St. parcel, although a fifth the size of the Cleverly Court parcel, was important, Raymondi said, because it is currently zoned P.U.D. in an area already facing severe traffic problems, as witnessed by the new set of lights at the intersection of South St. and Southern Artery.

According to Raymondi, the site could provide a quiet lot for residents while removing the fear that a future development might add to the congestion.

As for the smallest parcel, at the intersection of Water St. and Faxon Lane, Raymondi called it little more than "an asphalt surface" adjacent to "a fine residential neighborhood." "Mass Electric would have difficulty developing that property," Raymondi said, "but we could develop it into a gateway for that residential community."

After much discussion and compromise with the business community, the council voted in favor of the local room occupancy tax May 1.

SPRING CAR CARE

Memorial Day Car Tips For Safe, Smart Driving

Memorial Day weekend ushers in the start of the summer travel season meaning more cars on the roads and the need to drive smart. The Shell Oil Company has compiled the following list of 10 tips to help drivers avoid accidents this weekend and through the summer:

• If your tire blows out. don't slam on the brakes. You could lose control completely. Instead, take your foot off the gas pedal and concentrate on staying in your lane. Slow down gradually and pull off the road to a safe location.

• If you car starts to skid. take your foot off the gas pedal and turn the steering wheel in the direction you want the front of the car to go.

• If you're involved in the accident. stay calm, move out of traffic and find a safe place to wait for the police and emergency crews.

Sometimes the safest place to be is in your car. Warn other motorists by turning on your flashers and raising your hood or trunk, and watch for traffic, fire and wires. Also, turn off the ignition.

• When transporting children, always use seatbelts. Properly used, child safety belts are life preservers. They reduce the risk of death to infants by 69 percent, and that of toddlers by 47 percent. More than 1,000 children die every year because they are not buckled in.

• The safest place in the car for children is the back seat — in the center, if you have center belts — and in an appropriate vehicle seat. The general rule is that the greater the distance from the point of impact, the greater the protection.

• If you come upon an accident, pass well beyond the scene and out of harm's way.

• If emergency crews are racing to a crash ahead of you, pull over and let them safely pass. And don't assume the first ambulance or police car you see will be the only one. Watch for other emergency vehicles following closely behind the first.

• Prevent driver fatigue on long trips by:

- Avoiding night travel, as the glare of the lights outside and from the dashboard increases the chance of highway hypnosis;

- Keeping the car temperature cool;

- Snacking frequently, and

- Taking frequent breaks

• To help avoid being cut off, make sure you're not driving in another driver's blind spot. Glance into their rearview mirror. If you can't see their face, assume they can't see you.

• When following trucks, don't tailgate. Trucks typically can't see anything less than 30 feet behind the trailer. Stay 100 to 250 feet back or follow the four-second rule: If you pass the same fixed point as a truck before reaching the count of four, you're following too closely. And when passing a truck, change lanes on when you can see both of the truck's headlights in your review mirror.

Additives Advance Into 21st Century

OK, it's the 21st century and George Jetson's flying car hasn't become a reality — yet. But that hasn't stopped additive manufacturers from introducing products that make people think their vehicles are airborne.

One fuel additive that's helping motorists fly into the new millennium is 104+ Octane Boost® with Acceleron™. The advanced formula restores horsepower and improves the performance of today's tight tolerance engines. The state-of-the-art power additive places 104+ on the cutting edge of fuel technology — familiar territory for the product that first introduced octane enhancement to American car owners some 25 years ago.

Unlike old-fashioned gas treatments, new 104+ Octane Boost with Acceleron delivers safe, long lasting results. It's specifically engineered to help motorists get the best performance as possible from any vehicle. In older cars, it modifies and removes power-robbing engine deposits, while cleaning injectors and intake valves.

BACK IN CIRCULATION

The water/antifreeze mixture in your vehicle's coolant system is circulated throughout the engine by the water pump. The coolant is then pushed through the upper radiator hose into the radiator, where it dissipates heat into the surrounding air. Coolant at the bottom of the radiator is pulled into the water pump through the upper radiator hose and circulated through the engine to pick up heat, after which the cyclical process begins again. As part of the cooling system, the water pump should be regularly checked for leaks. Most pumps have a small vent hole on the underside of their housing, just below the pump shaft. A leaking water pump will force noticeable amounts of coolant out of this hole.

Regularly scheduled maintenance, including the cooling system, can greatly extend the life of your car. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, we want you to be well informed about every system in your car. Our friendly, ASE Certified, professional service staff here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550) will gladly answer all your questions. Give us a try. We'll earn your trust! We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Count on us for propane for grills, motor homes and converted vehicles.

HINT: A vehicle's cooling system can be tested for leaks by placing the system under pressure with a cooling-system pressure tester.

For 110th Anniversary Celebration

Quincy Medical Center Looking For Your Stories

By TAMARA ERDLEY

On June 17, 1890, the City Hospital of Quincy opened for service as a 25-bed facility, "for the purpose of establishing and maintaining a hospital for the reception and treatment of persons...during temporary sickness or injury," according to the First Annual Report of the Trustees of the City Hospital of Quincy.

Exactly 110 years later, that same hospital, now called Quincy Medical Center, still stands. Providing high quality medical care for people in the community for over 100 years, Quincy Medical Center has stood the test of time.

Many people, both staff and patients, have passed through these halls over the years and each has left their mark in some way. And over the years, some pretty amazing things have happened at this hospital.

For instance, a woman once traveled all the way from Bosnia to Quincy so that she could give birth to her child at Quincy Medical Center. And through the years, there have even been several wedding ceremonies performed right here in our hospital. There are many wonderful happenings and experiences that came about as a result of this hospital and the people who work here. While we know some of these stories, we'd like to know more — we'd like to hear your stories.

Quincy Medical Center, formerly Quincy Hospital, will celebrate its 110th year of providing quality medical care to the community this June. As part of the festivities, the hospital is looking for stories from you, the community, about your positive experiences at the hospital over the years. Examples might include: generations of families born at the hospital, patients or staff who met their future spouse at the hospital, a major life altering experience or even a simple, yet special event in your life that happened at or because of this hospital.

If you have an interesting and positive story to tell about the hospital, write it down and mail it to: Quincy Medical Center Public Relations Department, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy, MA 02169. If you have any questions, please call Quincy Medical Center at (617) 376-4016.

Veterans' Memorial Flags Sought For Flag Day Parade

The Quincy Flag Day Parade Committee, in conjunction with Keohane Funeral Homes, is soliciting veterans' memorial flags to be displayed in the 49th annual Quincy Flag Day Parade.

Flags will be displayed on a "Quincy Salutes Its Veterans" float within the parade. Last year, more than 100 veterans' memorial flags were displayed during the parade.

Interested parties may drop their veterans' memorial flags off at the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston, before June 9. Each flag will have a ribbon attached with the appropriate veteran's name. All program participants will be asked to sign a participation waiver.

This year's Flag Day Parade and Celebration will be held Saturday, June 10.

The parade steps off at 7 p.m., followed by a flag-raising ceremony and fireworks display.

"The veterans' flag display allows us to pay homage to those men and women who have served our country and protected the flag to which we pay homage," said Ed Keohane, Quincy Partnership chairman and proprietor of Keohane Funeral Homes. "The veterans' flag display is an appropriate way to thank those veterans who have fought to give us the freedoms that our flag represents."

The veterans' flags have been displayed along the parade route in past parades. This year, they will be secured to a Flag Day Committee float within the parade, according to the Flag Day Committee float within the parade, affording the Flag Day Committee a higher level of security for the flags.

For more information on the Flag Day Parade or the veterans' flag display, call (617) 376-1254.

Lessons Learned From Columbine Seminar

Creating Safer Communities, Focus Of South Shore Mental Health Program

What would you do in response to a community disaster...like the one at Columbine High School?

South Shore Mental Health, in collaboration with McLean Hospital and the Department of Mental Health, invites both the public and health care providers to learn from those who have been involved in the Columbine tragedy and how they can help us understand ways to build a safer community.

The second annual Dennis J. McCrory Seminar will present "Lessons Learned from Columbine" Thursday, May 25 at Lombardo's in Randolph. The morning long program is designed to identify ways to create safer communities for our children. It will discuss how various community representatives can contribute to creating a safe environment, and to learn how to respond to a school disaster.

Keynote speakers will include Jo Anne Doherty, MS, RN, CNS, chief operating officer of the Jefferson Center for Mental Health, whose staff responded on-site within two hours after the Columbine shootings, and Betty Fitzpatrick, RN, MS, SNP, manager of student health services and crisis response for the Jefferson County Schools, who was also on-site after the shootings.

Topics will include the importance of community collaboration, identification of at-risk students, potential warning signs, the value of a media response plan, and the need for a credentialed and trained volunteer staff.

Facilitated by Dennis J. McCrory, MD, "Lessons Learned from Columbine" will also present an overview by Harry Shulman, LICSW, president and CEO of South Shore Mental Health.

"This seminar is of particular importance whereas May has been designated as Mental Health Month," Shulman said. "We are honored to have with us two people who were an actual part of the Columbine tragedy, and to have the opportunity to hear their thoughts on why it all happened and how we can use that information to help build a safer community for our children."

The seminar will also include input from panelists Janet Powell, director of Pupil Personnel Service, Quincy Public Schools; Linda Grillo, project director, Adoptive Families Together; Joan Mikula, assistant commissioner for Child/Adolescent Services, Department of Mental Health; and Chazy Dowaliby, editor, The Patriot Ledger.

"Lessons Learned from Columbine" will take place from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Lombardo's in Randolph, 6 Billings St., Rte 28. Registration fee is $50 for professional participants and $25 for parent/family participants.

Checks payable to South Shore Mental Health can be sent to Amy Katz, South Shore Mental Health, 6 Fort St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Space is limited and pre-registration is advised. For more information, contact Amy Katz at (617) 847-1901.

REAL ESTATE

Common Sense, Golden Rule Ensure Fair Customer Treatment

By CAROL BULMAN,
President

Conway Financial Services

The Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination recently announced a plan to pay closer attention to the real estate industry's treatment of customers under the Equal Housing Opportunity Act of 1968, which states that all customers be treated fairly during their search for a home.

Later this year, the MCAD plans to send anonymous

"testers" into the real estate marketplace in order to detect any practices of discrimination.

This has historically been an important issue for the Jack Conway Company, which prides itself on educating sales agents in all aspects of the law, especially equal-housing regulations.

At the Conway annual "Spring Rally," held recently at the Company Theatre in Norwell, our sales agents reviewed the important issues surrounding equal and fair treatment of customers looking to buy, sell or rent a home.

Our chief counsel, Jay Chaisson, reminded the audience that in servicing the public, we must be mindful to protect the rights of all citizens. As a result, I began thinking about the laws that protect the consumer in a mortgage transaction.

The mortgage industry is governed by the Equal Credit Opportunity Act (ECOA), or Regulation B, in regard to the equal and fair treatment of customers.

The goal of the ECOA is to eliminate discrimination in the evaluation of an applicant's creditworthiness and to make credit equally available to all creditworthy applicants. Regulation B prohibits discrimination on any of the following bases: race, color, religion, national origin, sex, marital status, age (as long as the applicant is old enough to enter into a binding contract or is not declared mentally incompetent), receipt of public assistance benefits, and the applicant's good faith exercise of rights under the Consumer Credit Protection Act. These nine considerations apply to all aspects of a credit transaction.

Discrimination may be defined as the treatment of one applicant or group of applicants more or less favorably than another applicant or group of applicants for any of the reasons listed above.

For example, ECOA specifically requires that, within 30 days of completing an application, all customers be notified of the answer to their request for funds. The notice of "Adverse Action and Notification Rights" details whether the loan was approved or whether other action is suggested. If the loan is denied on the terms originally requested, this is considered an "adverse action."

At this point there are two options for a creditor — issue a counteroffer with the terms under which the loan will be made, or send a notice that indicates the reason for denial. This notice must be in writing and include instructions for the applicant to contact the appropriate government agency if he or she feels that discriminatory practices have occurred.

Borrowers also must receive a written statement of provisions of the ECOA so they have an understanding of how they are protected under its terms.

The law further identifies specific areas and issues that cannot be discussed with a consumer, as the information requested could be construed as discriminatory. For example:

1. A creditor may not inquire about any income derived from alimony, child support, or separate maintenance payments, unless the applicant has indicated a desire to use the income as part of their total income considered in underwriting the loan.

2. Only the terms "married, unmarried or separated" may be used when making inquiries concerning marital status. Unmarried includes single, divorced or widowed. In Massachusetts, a creditor cannot, however, ask whether a person is divorced or single.

3. A creditor may not gather information about an applicant's spouse unless the spouse will be contractually liable for the loan or the income of the spouse is being relied upon for underwriting the loan.

The ECOA is broad in scope and is extremely important in the measurement of the treatment of a prospective borrower.

To me, the substance of the law is simple and based on common sense, and if a creditor is ever unsure as to how to respond in a potentially discriminatory situation, the Golden Rule is a good guideline to follow.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Want a Second Chance To Get Healthy?

(NU) - Are you a junk food addict? Does your first meal of the day consist of coffee, coffee and more coffee? Do you run to the nearest fast food restaurant during your lunch break? If you answered yes to any of these questions, then you could probably use a serious health makeover.

Eating healthy is a way of life, and it influences you in more ways than you realize. It gives you more energy, helps you lose weight, wards off sickness, and disease to help you live longer, and gives you an all around sense of self-worth and self-esteem. It's no wonder some of the most successful people in the world are health nuts.

What? You say it's too late to get healthy? Wrong. Most health experts say it's never too late. That's because every day offers you another chance to do something healthy. The easiest way to start is by cutting some of the most unhealthy habits out of your diet.

For instance, skip the coffee and substitute it with fruit juice. Besides too much caffeine, coffee drains all of the vitamins and nutrients out of your body. For lunch, eat lean meats and vegetables. And don't forget to take your vitamins to make sure you're getting all the crucial minerals in your diet.

Still need help? You're in luck because now you can use the Internet to help you get healthy. Just visit www.GeoHealth.com, a Web site linking together some of the best health-related sites on the Web. It can help you get started on a new, healthier you.

The site advises you on what you should and shouldn't eat. Plus, it gives you the inside word on all the latest vitamins and supplements. It also shows you how to maintain peace and tranquility in a fast-paced world.

Obey Traffic Laws, Wear Helmets Among Bike Safety Tips

Football players wear helmets, rock climbers wear helmets, hockey players wear helmets, and for good reason — each sport presents a risk of head injury. Bicycling presents a similar hazard and requires similar precautions. Bike season is here and the clinicians of the Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital Network remind you about the benefits of helmet safety.

About 800 Americans die each year from bicycle head injuries. Riding into curbs, poles, and the pavement also impairs many cyclists. Scrapes and broken bones heal, but brain injuries may not. These tragedies are preventable. About 680 deaths annually could be prevented by wearing a helmet. The simple precaution of wearing a bicycle helmet will save a life — yours.

Many serious bicycle accidents happen on residential streets, in parking lots, and on bike paths. A large number (90%) of bicycle accidents don't even involve automobiles. Accidents are not just for beginner riders. Experience riders, young riders, and older riders need to wear helmets.

There are other benefits to helmet use. Most helmets are brightly colored so that drivers can see you better. A helmet also provides protection from weather, including sun and rain. The main reason to wear a helmet is to protect your brain. Compared to the lifetime cost of a head injury, the cost of a bike helmet is cheap. Think about tomorrow, buy and wear a helmet today.

Tips for safe bicycling:

- Always wear a properly fitted and fastened helmet.
- Replace your helmet if it has been damaged or after five years of use.
- Obey traffic laws and signals that apply to motor vehicles and yield to pedestrians.

trians.

- Use hand signals to indicate turning and stopping.
- Ride on the right, single file, with the flow of traffic.
- Keep both hands on the handlebars — use a basket, rack or backpack to carry packages.
- Wear light-colored clothing with reflective markings.
- Equip your bike with a full set of reflectors.
- Be aware of cars coming out of driveways and side streets.
- Prepare for doors opening from parked cars.
- Avoid potholes, sand and sewer drains.

Selecting a helmet:

- Look for ANSI Z90.4, ASTM, or Snell Memorial Foundation certification inside the helmet.
- The best helmet has good ventilation, a nylon chinstrap, and a strong buckle.
- Try the helmet on before you buy it (adjust the chinstrap firmly but comfortably and use the foam pads that come with the helmet to adjust the fit).
- Try another helmet size or design if simple hand pressure shifts the helmet significantly on your head.
- A properly fitted and fastened helmet will sit low on your forehead, just above the eyebrows.
- Children are more likely to wear a helmet they help to select.

Raiders Clinch Berth In Division 1 Tourney

By CHRIS POISSON

Around 6:15 Monday evening, T.J. Bell and Keith Doherty remained on Adams Field to cut a promo for the North Quincy baseball team with a camera man from Hometown Sports.

Although their performance in front of the camera wasn't Oscar-worthy, their performance on the diamond certainly was MVP-worthy.

Bell ignited a five-run fourth-inning rally with a two-run double and Doherty set down 13 of the final 14 batters as North Quincy topped Plymouth South, 7-4, to lock up a spot in the Division 1 state tournament for the third time in four years.

Last year, the Red Raiders missed the tourney by two games and this season they wrapped it up with three games left. Tuesday, they traveled to Silver Lake and yesterday (Wednesday) they hosted Braintree. Today (Thursday) they close out the regular season against rival Quincy at 7 p.m. They have beaten all three teams this season.

"The goal now is to win a few more games and hopefully try to get a home game," said coach Larry Taglieri. "We would like to play a home game here."

The victory over Plymouth South (11-6, 7-5) was impressive because North Quincy (10-7, 6-6) was able to come back against one of the league's premier pitchers — Mike Gates. Gates, who dismantled North Quincy in an 11-3 win earlier in the season, strutted into the game with a 6-1 record and 2.48 ERA with 57 strikeouts in 48 innings.

After flashing leather in the top of the fourth when senior Rob Celata made a tumbling catch to take away a hit and Doherty picked a runner off first, North Quincy sent nine men to the plate in the bottom half and produced five runs.

Doherty (walk) and senior Brian Deptula (hit by pitch) reached base for Bell, who drilled a 3-2 pitch over the center fielder's head for a two-run double. Senior co-captain Joe Flynn walked and sophomore Pat Bregoli reached on an infield hit to load the bases. Flynn scored on a passed ball to tie the game at 4. With runners at second and third and two outs, Celata slapped a single between third and short to plate the go-ahead runs.

"That was huge," Doherty said. "We definitely pulled through with the sticks. If you had asked me in the first inning, I didn't think it would happen. Gates is a good pitcher. We faced him last time and he shut us down. But we got to him this time."

"[Gates] is a solid pitcher," Taglieri said. "We battled against him. We got the bats on him early. Although we didn't get many runs out of it, I think it gave the kids confidence. We kept going at him. T.J. Bell had a big hit and Rob Celata had a big hit."

After the offensive outburst, Doherty seemed to turn it up a notch on the mound. The junior southpaw retired the final nine batters, five via the strikeout. Doherty finished with 10 punchouts, allowing only two earned runs on seven hits in the complete-game effort.

"The first couple of innings my arm was kind of tight and I didn't have my curveball going that good," Doherty said. "But as the game went on my arm got loose and my curveball and fastball were working good. I just felt smooth."

The Red Raiders added an insurance run in the sixth when junior Chris Lockhead led with a single, moved to second on a sacrifice bunt, and scored on a passed ball that the catcher couldn't find.

Plymouth South scored two runs in the first and one in the second for a 3-0 lead. North Quincy got on the board in the second on Lockhead's RBI double. Plymouth South got the run back in the third for a 4-1 lead.

Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run For ALS June 10

The third annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS will be held Saturday, June 10 with a 10 a.m. start from Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The event is affectionately dubbed "The Squirrel Run" in honor of Jimmy "Squirrel" Kennedy, a Quincy native, husband and father who died in 1997 at age 31 of Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis (ALS).

Kennedy was an academic and athletic standout at North Quincy High School and Northeastern University, a graduate of Georgetown Law School, and a practicing attorney before being stricken with ALS. His father, Christopher, Quincy school committee member and former Dean of Students at Northeastern University, also died from ALS.

ALS is best known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, named after the New York Yankee legend whose death from the disease first brought it to the world's attention in 1938. It is a progressive disease that attacks nerve cells called motor neurons, which control movement of voluntary muscles. As these cells are destroyed, victims gradually lose the ability to stand, walk, speak and swallow. The disease is invariably fatal.

ALS claims more than 5,000 victims every year, with approximately 13 new cases diagnosed each day. An estimated 300,000 Americans, who are alive and apparently well today, will die from ALS. In 90 percent of cases, victims have no family history of the disease.

In support of the Squirrel Run, Mayor James Sheets has proclaimed the week of June 5-11 as "ALS Awareness Week" in the city. This year's event includes a five-mile run, a 2.5-mile fitness walk, children's activities, music and food.

Jimmy's brother, Richard Kennedy, and family friend, Martin Levenson, established the Squirrel Run to raise awareness of ALS and to raise funds for research. So far over $50,000 has been raised and the goal this year is to break the $100,000 mark.

All funds raised will go directly to the Cecil B. Day Center for Neuromuscular Research at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. The Day Lab is at the forefront of the battle against ALS, and world-renowned for research into its cause and cure.

Last year over 700 participated in the event, including former Olympian and four-time Boston and New York City Marathon winner Bill Rodgers and former Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis. This year, Rodgers and Dukakis have signed on as Honorary Co-Chairs.

To make a contribution, sign up for the race or walk, or donate time or services, call Martin Levenson (800-993-9989, ext. 385, e-mail: mlevenson@macgray.com).

Cynthia Russell, Patricia Sullivan and Jack Weir, all of Quincy, are also members of the ARC's Board of Directors.

Other committee members include: Jean and Lou Bailey of Cohasset; Robert N. Gramm; Frank S. Lagrotteria, Wilfred Mathewson, Normand Racicot, all of Weymouth; and George Mathieson, formerly of Quincy.

Anyone interested in participating should contact South Shore ARC at (781) 335-3023, ext. 120.

year, not only in Quincy but all over the South Shore," said Loretta M. Oliva of Quincy, vice president/loan servicing officer for South Shore Savings Bank who is tournament co-chair with Kathleen Bailey of Cohasset.

Funds raised will help underwrite services provided by South Shore ARC of Weymouth (Association for Retarded Citizens).

"Our goal is to outdo last year's tournament by having more fun and raising even more money for South Shore ARC," Bailey said.

Council Approves $53,900 For Quincy Point Drain Design

The City Council unanimously approved a $53,900 appropriation last week for the DPW to address flooding concerns in the Quincy Point neighborhood.

Specifically, the funds will finance the design of certain drain improvements to stop flooding at the low lying residences of James, Lancaster, and Grafton Sts.

In a letter to Mayor James Sheets dated April 26, DPW Commissioner David Colton explained that the undersized drain line currently servicing the area runs "cross-country through back yards" and could not be "rehabilitated in place."

Therefore, Colton said, a new drain would have to be constructed at an approximate cost of $500,000.

Colton said he intends to award the design contract to BETA Engineering of Norwood and expected the design phase to take 16 weeks.

The appropriation will be funded through the city's Sewer Rehabilitation Fund.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

On this Memorial Day let us remember that this day signifies, perhaps more deeply than any other patriotic observance, the soul of America. The patriots to be remembered on this day represent every generation of Americans. They fell in battles widely separated by distance and time. Some came from families long established in America; many others were new to the land. These patriots differed in color, in religious beliefs, in political faith and other ways which historically have divided the human family.

Yet, all this in common: they loved their country and they died to make men free.

And so, on this Memorial Day, let us solemnly pay tribute to these fallen heroes... Let us spare a prayer of thanksgiving that there have always been men and women willing to offer the ultimate sacrifice so that our national ideals could endure...

John Sullivan Manager South Shore Co-operative New South Quincy Branch

South Shore Co-operative Bank has named John L. Sullivan as its newest Assistant Vice President. Sullivan's main duties will be as branch manager of SSCB's new office now open in Quincy at 30 Franklin St.

The branch is the third location, in addition to offices in East Bridgewater and its headquarters in Weymouth.

"South Shore Co-operative Bank is a positive banking alternative for Quincy because we offer the flexibility of larger institutions with a level of service only a community bank can provide," said John J. O'Brien, SSCB's President and CEO. "John's banking experience will enable us to achieve our goal of serving as a financial partner to all our personal and commercial banking customers."

As SSCB's Quincy branch manager, Sullivan, a long-time resident of Quincy, will oversee a staff offering a full complement of commercial and personal banking services. The office also includes both lobby and drive-through ATM access, as well as a drive-up teller window. Additionally, night deposit services are available for commercial banking customers. The facility features an extensive customer service area to allow SSCB Sales Associates to meet with customers in individual consultations.

"With our Quincy branch open, we are 100 percent ready to meet the banking needs of local families and businesses," said O'Brien. "John's leadership will help us be continually responsive to customer and community needs as we develop an increased presence in the area."

Agreement On 'Responsible Employer Ordinance'

themselves who testified that the proposed ordinance did not place them out of contention in bidding for public works projects.

"This REO does not limit competition," said Joseph Harold III, president of Sagamore Plumbing and Heating, a major merit-based "open-shop" contractor on the South Shore. "It opens the field to fair competition."

Harold, whose company has worked on Quincy projects such as the addition to the Crane Public Library and the Point Webster School and employs over 150 plumbers and pipefitters, detailed the apprentice training and benefits his company provides to its workers, emphasizing that the REO rewarded not just union contractors but responsible contractors.

Kyle Maleski, a representative for the Associated Builders and Contractors (ABC), also offered qualified support of the proposal. "We are not here to dispute that a properly trained workforce is not in the best interests of Quincy and Massachusetts," Maleski said.

Although Maleski raised questions about the language of the ordinance concerning apprentice programs and medical coverage, especially as it related to smaller contractors, and many were unfamiliar with a "Harmony Clause" amendment proposed that night by Michael Cheney, a union consultant, no one at the hearing stood in opposition to the ordinance.

"This has always been played as union versus non-union," said Raymond, who thanked Harold and Maleski for their remarks. "But this public hearing shows that this is not the case, that it is about protecting workers. We've finally set the record straight: there is no substantive objection to this ordinance."

Cheney, although he disagreed several times with some of the assertions made by ABC's Maleski, echoed Raymond's statements and the union position when he said, "People who are in organized labor want to bring everyone's standard of living up, not bring someone else's down."

"We think everyone deserves an apprentice program," added Cheney, citing long-term benefits in cost, safety, and quality-of-work.

Councillor Frank McCauley, who said that "competition" had always been a watchword for him, admitted that he was swayed by the testimony of a major open-shop plumbing contractor and an ABC representative. "I'm confident that we can live with this," McCauley said. "I'm confident that this city will not be put in peril with it (in terms of competition)."

McCauley added his belief that one of the city's biggest contracts in quite some time, the $50 million new Quincy High School project, would still be open for competition beneficial to Quincy taxpayers.

Reached Tuesday, Mayor James Sheets said the contract for the new Quincy High School would most likely be awarded in one to two years.

The committee voted 8-0 to recommend adoption of the ordinance, with Councillor Stephen Durkin absent for that particular vote. The committee also voted to re-advertise as amended because of a error in the original advertising which declared the contract limit at $1 million instead of the correct $100,000 cut-off.

The details of the actual language and the "Harmony Amendment" will be hammered out at the June 5 meeting of the Ordinance Committee, and Raymond is hopeful of council approval that night. "This issue has become non-controversial and I really appreciate that we're coming together to make this happen," Raymond said.

The proposed "Harmony Amendment" states that "the presence of any subcontractor's employees shall not result in any picket line, work stoppage, or any other labor demonstration engaged in by any other employees on the job site or labor organizations representing the trades and/or crafts of the employees on the job sites."

Despite Injunction Loss, Opposition Still Confident

High Point Developer Sees Green Light Ahead

A state Land Court's decision last week to deny an injunction against Highpoint Developer Congress Group Ventures (CGV) has buoyed the hopes of CGV President Dean Stratouly of a final legal victory in September.

"I am very excited by the ruling," Stratouly said of Judge Leon Lombardi's decision to deny the Mt. Ararat Association's request to order CGV to stop site-clearing work at the $200 million Highpoint apartment development on Quarry St. "I feel confident, having been issued this decision, that we will go on in the fall to prevail on the overall appeal of the project."

Stratouly said that the recent decision of Lombardi, the same judge who will hear the case in September, means that Mt. Ararat could not demonstrate that irreparable damage would be done to the site or that the appeal against the city's council's permit authorization would eventually succeed.

Business Leaders' Advice To Council:

'Start Saving For Bad Times Coming'

By CRAIG SALTERS

City councillors aren't using long-term "business sense" when it comes to important decisions, some members of the Quincy Business Council claim.

And their fear, they say, is that an economic downturn could expose city weaknesses hidden by the current boom time.

At a QBC meeting Friday with Councillors Patrick McDermott and Michael D'Amico, business leaders cited such examples as the Highpoint development, the debate to fund tourism in the city, and the December tax rate increase to demonstrate that the advice of business was being ignored by the council at a cost to the city.

"Many people are worried about the economic future of this country and the recessions which are bound to come," warned Edward Keohane, owner of Keohane Funeral Home and president of the Quincy Partnership. "The party's just about over but the mayor and the City Council don't understand that."

Anthony Agnitti, chairman of the QBC, argued

EDWARD KEOHANE
 "The party's just about over"

ANTHONY AGNITTI
 "Time to zero-fund the budget" that the current economic good times were a perfect time to "zero-fund" or freeze the budget, pay down the city's debt and financial commitments to Quincy Medical Center, and let the city grow into a healthier fiscal outlook.

"If you 'zero-fund' the budget, then an increase in one area means a decrease in another," said Agnitti. "You prioritize. And if you raise taxes on the citizens of Quincy as well the businesses, then show budgetary restraint on your part."

Instead, business leaders say, the city is taking on more responsibility and bonding more, with the near $100 million renovation of the public schools as one example, and the proposed Fiscal Year 2001 budget of $183,427,366 reflects

Almost 6 Months Later, Tax Vote Still Stings

It's been six months since the City Council voted to increase the tax classification on commercial property from 169 percent to the legal maximum of 175 percent.

And the business community, especially upset at not being allowed to speak at a special meeting to reconsider the issue, has neither forgiven nor forgotten.

Sparks flew at a Friday meeting of the Quincy Business Council, the local arm of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, when Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, an invited guest along with Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott, admitted that the council had not handled the tax rate increase well. "I believe I was wrong in not seeking additional input on that issue," D'Amico said. "I do not think closing that meeting so early was appropriate."

D'Amico's comment brought forth a passionate response on the part of Robert Curry, owner of Curry/Ace Hardware. "We're the ones who pay for your mistakes, Michael," Curry said, referring to the tax increase. "Pretty soon they (the business owners) are going to stop supporting charities, or donating money to councillors. We're still upset about that tax vote."

When D'Amico later defended himself and the actions of his fellow councillors by pointing out that the council's intent was to lessen the tax burden of the already hard-hit resident, QBC Chairman Anthony Agnitti responded, "Yeah, but that was never articulated. You crammed it down our throat, put a bag over our head, and told us to get the hell out of there."

Edward Keohane, owner of Keohane Funeral Home and president of the Quincy Partnership, was equally upset about what he perceived as a lukewarm reception by councillors for tourism expert Daniel Yeager during the local room occupancy tax debate.

Keohane called some councillors' failure to listen to Yeager "a slap in the face."

"The Koch Club has always emphasized the importance of providing recreational opportunities for youngsters over competition. Memorial Day Speaker: 'Each Flag Behind Me Marks A Hero'

Captain Michael Chaplain, Chief of Operations for the 1st Coast Guard District, was the guest speaker at the city's Memorial Day ceremonies held Monday morning at the World War II Podium of Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

Chaplain thanked the crowd for allowing him to share this "very special day across our nation" with them and recounted two differing versions of the beginning of Memorial Day: "One version holds that, in 1864, Miss Emma Hunter of Boalsburg, PA, began the tradition when she visited the National Cemetery in Gettysburg and placed flowers on the grave of her father, Col. James Hunter, who had commanded the 49th Pennsylvania Regiment and had died in that battle.

"Another well-known version credits four southern women from Columbus, MS, with having started the Memorial Day tradition on April 26, 1866. Visiting the Friendship Cemetery on that day, the ladies scattered flowers over the graves of the 1500 Confederate and 100 Union soldiers buried there after the Battle of Shiloh. When this kindly act became known in the North, it received much attention, was covered in the press, and inspired much well-being in a time when there was not much well being between the North and South.

"Personally, I believe both of these versions. And I believe that these events inspired Gen. John J. Logan, US Army, to proclaim May 30, 1868 Decoration Day 'designated for the purpose of strewing flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in the defense of their country..."

"For what can be more natural, more human, and more necessary, than to remember our forefathers and the actions they took to secure our freedom. This is not a need that varies with what region of the country we come from. And it does not vary with politics or religion. As humans, we need to remember."

Chaplain praised the sacrifices made by such heroes as the Gold Star Mothers and PFC William Caddy, US Marine Corps Reserve, and PFC Frederick Murphy, US Army, the two Medal of Honor recipients from Quincy, but he added that they are just some of the hundreds of heroes that Quincy has given our country. "For I suggest that each flag behind me marks and memorializes a hero," Chaplain said.

Chaplain read from President and Commander-in-Chief Clinton's call for a "National Moment of Remembrance" at 3 p.m. and observed a minute of silence then and there for the fallen veterans.

Chaplain ended his remarks by dedicating a poem to the veterans written by Joyce Kilmer, a World War I veteran who was killed in action in France.

The last stanza of the four-stanza poem reads: "May we, their grateful children, learn/Their strength, who lie beneath the sod/Who went through fire and death to earn/At last, the accolade of God."

City Adds 5 Residential Household Hazardous Waste Drop-Off Dates

The Quincy Department of Public Works will hold five more dates for residential household hazardous waste drop-off.

They are:

- Wednesday, June 7, 3:30 to 6:30 p.m.
- Wednesday, July 12, 3:30 to 6:30 p.m.
- Wednesday, Aug. 16, 3:30 to 6:30 p.m.
- Saturday, Sept. 30, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m.
- Saturday, Oct. 28, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m.

To make this service more accessible for Quincy residents who may find weekends not convenient to drop off material, three of the six dates will take place on Wednesday, late afternoon into early evening. The other three dates take place Saturday mornings.

Residents will be directed to the newly constructed Hazardous Waste Facility area within the DPW complex at 55 Sea St. Residents do not have to leave their vehicles as materials will be taken from the car for them.

This service is for household hazardous product only, not toxic hazardous waste and is residential only -- not for commercial use. Also, due to recent landfill bans, televisions and computer monitors can no longer be picked up curbside. Residents may bring them to the Hazardous Waste Drop-Off for disposal.

For more information, call the DPW's 24-hour hot-line: 617-770-BINS (770-2467). Calls are returned Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Be sure to ask your question and leave your telephone number so that the DPW can call back with the proper information.

Mayoral Run For McCauley?

Does Frank McCauley have a yearning to return to the mayor's office?

There's speculation he does.

And some think he might even be looking at next year for a possible run. Which would pit him against incumbent Jim Sheets.

Is he really thinking about it?

Ask the man himself and he says:

"No comment on that."

Translation: He isn't saying "yes." But he also isn't saying "no."

He does sound like a possible candidate though when he adds:

"I will say this. There is a definite need for a good mayor's race next year with a responsible candidate who can raise and discuss issues."

McCauley, who is now a city councillor and served four terms as mayor, would fit that bill.

He says the last good mayoral election was back in 1989, the year he announced he was stepping down with his famed "Sayonara" farewell.

McCAULEY

That set off a four-candidate race to succeed him: Jim Sheets, Joseph LaRaia, Steve McGrath and Peter O'Connell.

SHEETS

McGRATH

Sheets and O'Connell won the nominations and Sheets the final election.

Since moving into the mayor's office Sheets has had token opposition and three free rides to re-election.

He is now in an historic sixth term and has said he will go for No. 7 next year.

City Council President Paul Harold and Sheets appeared to be on a collision course for next year with Harold as Sheets' first major opponent since taking office in 1990.

But Harold took a sudden detour, opting to run for Norfolk County Register of Deeds this year. Win or lose that race, he is out of the 2001 mayoral picture.

McCauley makes no bones about the fact he is among those disappointed in Harold's decision not to run for mayor.

Councillors Tim Cahill and Dan Raymondi, both of whom have mayoral aspirations, appear willing to bide their time until Sheets decides to step down.

That apparently leaves him without a major challenger again next year.

Unless.

Unless McCauley himself decides to step up to the plate to make that "good mayor's race" he feels the city needs.

It would be healthy for the city, he believes, in that it would get people thinking, talking--and voting. Automatic mayoral wins over a long period of time dulls the civic interest, he feels.

During his eight years in the mayor's office

McCauley built a reputation as a tight-fisted chief executive. He left the city in good financial shape when he departed from City Hall.

Now as a city councillor and finance committee chairman, he still has that penny pinching image.

McCauley doesn't find fault with spending money in good times for city needs but doesn't think it should be overdone.

He feels something should be set aside for the rainy days sure to come.

"We could use a little belt tightening," he says.

McCauley was against trying to revive shipbuilding at the Fore River shipyard as too risky a business with today's keen competition abroad. He was an early advocate of an alternative or a mix use for the 130-acre facility.

Have former mayors come back to that office?

McCauley, considered the city's political historian, quickly rattles off three names: Gustave Bates, Charles Ross and Thomas Burgin.

Bates left in 1916 and returned in 1923. Ross went out in 1935 and came back in 1943. Burgin left in 1942 to enter World War II and came back as the city's first Plan E mayor in 1950.

Question waiting for a final answer: Is McCauley seriously thinking of coming back?

JOHN GILLIS, long-time city clerk and now a Norfolk County commissioner, turned a young 75 the other day.

Gillis and close friend, Bill Draicchio, member of the Board of Voter Registrars, both served with the Marines in World War II.

So, Draicchio had little trouble coming up with an appropriate birthday gift: a Marine symbol tie clasp. (Once a Marine, always a Marine.)

FRANK and SANDRA McCauley proudly welcomed their 12th grandchild: Katharine Olivia Logue, born to daughter Jennifer and son-in-law David Logue of Wollaston May 20 at South Shore Hospital. Katharine arrived at 10 pounds, 3 1/2 ounces. The Logues have two other children: Samantha, 7, and Bryan, 11.

SHE CERTAINLY DOESN'T look it (or act it) but Maralin Manning, the energetic executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association is a grandmother--for the 14th time!

The new arrival, Michael Liam Manning, Jr., was born to Maralin's son, Michael, and daughter-in-law Susan (Carolann) Manning May 4 at Mass. General Hospital. He weighed in 7 pounds, 14 ounces.

Malarin is looking forward to No. 15.

IF A POPULARITY contest was held at City Hall, Edie Corey, principal clerk in the City Election Department, would be up there as one of the top vote-getters.

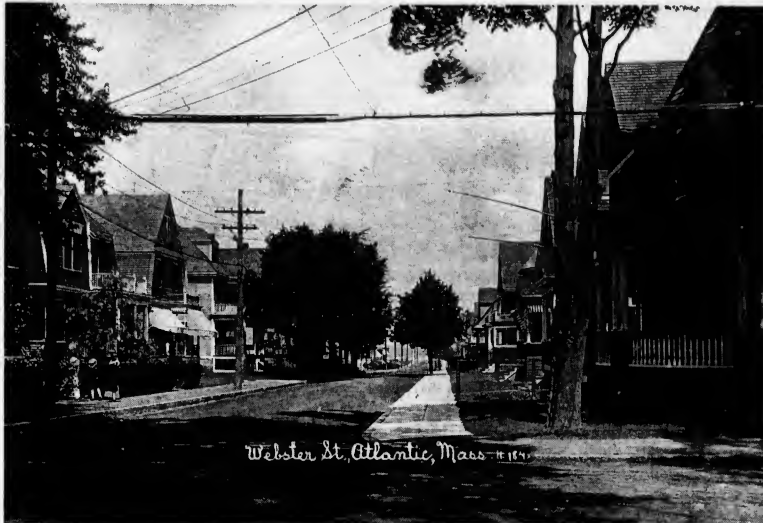

Edie just marked her 30th anniversary in the department and received a beautiful bouquet of flowers from colleagues: Asst. City Clerk Maureen Hallen, Michelle Bertoldi, Donna McDonough, Cindy Manning, Nicole Crispo, Lisa Adams, Carol Damiano, Brenda Fernandez

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920's postcard view of Webster Street in Atlantic. The view is from East Squantum Street looking to the ocean. This area of Atlantic was developed after the boulevard was built about 10 years before this picture was taken. This street only went about two-thirds of the way down to the boulevard because marshland at the far end flooded on high tides. Over the years, seawalls and filling in of the marsh have allowed for the improvements of house lots on what was open space there. The Barron Souvenir Company published this postcard. They published many postcard views of Quincy for tourists and visitors.

Groups Make Mock Funeral A Success

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
On behalf of the Quincy Police Department, I would like to thank the following groups for their assistance in making the recent mock funeral at Quincy High School a success.

• Scott Deware of Deware Funeral Home, 516 Hancock St., Wollaston. Scott not only provided the essential props for the mock funeral, but also provided an organist for the program.

• Jack Scanlon and the Quincy High Drama Club, particularly Amy Papile, Fallon Healy and Eric Wass, who played their parts very well.

• The Quincy Police Chaplains, Rev. Anderson Rearick and Fr. Bob Monagle. Both of these gentlemen did a great job.

• Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti, who provided Deputy Sheriff Jim Wells and many pictures of drunk driving accidents.

We are extremely fortunate, in Quincy, to have individuals who are concerned and dedicated enough to step forward and volunteer their time and services to help make Quincy a safer and better place in which to live.

Montclair School Community Thanks Stop & Shop

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
As we near the end of the traditional academic year it is an opportune time to give thanks and recognition to all those who participate in the greatest and most important difficulty of human effort, the education of our children. In truth the future survival and prosperity of our nation depends on their effort.

It is an unfortunate reality that many, if not most who engage in the collaborative effort of training and educating our children receive little of the acknowledgment they justly deserve. In Quincy, an integral and often overlooked component of the educational infrastructure are the many school/business partners.

We at the Montclair

School are tremendously fortunate to be partnered with the Newport Avenue Stop & Shop under the management of Paul McEachern. Paul and his staff have been more than generous to us throughout the years even prior to the recent formalizing of our partnership. We couldn't begin in this space to enumerate the requests that been so graciously filled.

We salute Paul, his staff and Stop & Shop and look forward to the many years to come in the mutually rewarding collaboration of caring for and nurturing our most precious natural resource, our children.

Groundbreaking For World War II Memorial Will Be A Momentous Occasion For Veterans

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
According to law, all funds to build the national World War II Memorial in Washington, D.C., had to be collected by May of this year. Through the combined efforts of donors and Congress, the goal of $100 million has been met.

Betsy Glick, director of Communications for the American Battle Monuments Commission (ABMC), stated that groundbreaking is anticipated Veterans Day, 2000.

This will be a momentous occasion for all veterans of World War II and their families plus the millions of tourists who visit Washington every year.

The VFW is to be congratulated for contributing 50 cents for every $1 donated to its World War II Memorial Matching Gift Program.

Serpos Clinic Opened In Houghs Neck

By PAUL HAROLD

The dream of Turkish immigrant Ercan Serpos was realized this week with the opening of the Elizabeth Serpos clinic at the Atherton Hough School.

Association, but they were unable to fulfill the purpose of the gift so the city took over and set up a clinic that would operate from the interest from the estate.

Among those on hand for the opening ceremonies was Mrs. George Shelley, chairman of the citizens' committee.

SACRED HEART CHURCH CELEBRATES GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

Archbishop Richard Cushing celebrated Mass at Sacred Heart Church as part of the church's golden anniversary.

The church was founded in 1878 as a mission church of St. John's and with the increase in population in North Quincy it was set off as a separate parish in 1912, with Rev. J.P. Cuffe, a former assistant at St. John's, as pastor. Rev. Thomas Coghlan succeeded Rev. Cuffe acquiring the land on the Hancock St. land for the church. In 1922 Cardinal O'Connell appointed Rev. John Casey as pastor, under whose leadership the church was built in 1924 with the establishment of a chapel for the convenience of the Squantum residents on the peninsula.

Rev. Irving Gifford was the fourth pastor and rebuilt the burned church in 1949.

CAR WASH IN COURT

Quincy District Court issued a complaint against a Southern Artery car wash that opened on Memorial Day, in violation of the state's Sunday opening laws. Even though Memorial Day didn't fall on Sunday, it was included in the Sunday Blue Laws.

Police Chief William Ferrazzi blocked the entrance to the car wash with his car until the operator was closed at 9 a.m. under orders by Captain Walter Kemp. However, it was alleged in the city's complaint that the car wash opened again for business at 9:30 a.m.

Apricot-Blueberry Crisp

With fresh blueberries abundantly available at the markets, here is a great recipe I found for an apricot-blueberry crisp. It's so easy and can be made ahead.

Apricot-Blueberry Crisp

Filling

3 cups dried apricots
1 cup fresh blueberries
1/4 cup sugar

Topping

1/2 cup dark brown sugar
1/2 cup white sugar
2 1/2 cups flour

1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
2 sticks unsalted butter (melted and cooled)

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Butter an eight inch baking dish.

Combine all filling ingredients and place in baking dish.

For the topping, combine all the dry ingredients together. Stir in the butter a little at a time until crumbly. Evenly top the filling with the dough and bake for one hour or until top is golden brown. Serve with a favorite ice cream.

South Shore Co-operative Holds Grand Opening At New Quincy Branch

South Shore Co-operative Bank held the Grand Opening of its new Quincy branch office at 30 Franklin St. last week.

Mayor James Sheets cut the ribbon at the ceremony attended by representatives of the bank and the community.

"We've built this branch from the ground up on the principle that families and small businesses deserve individual attention for their financial needs," said John J. O'Brien, Jr., President and CEO of South Shore Co-operative Bank (SSCB). "Our new Quincy office is an extension of the great service and competitive banking products we've long been known for."

The new branch provides

SSCB customers with both lobby and drive-through ATM access, as well as a drive-up teller window. Numerous specialized financial services, including night deposit services, are available for commercial banking customers. The facility also features an extensive customer service area to allow SSCB Sales Associates to meet with customers in individual consultations.

"We're proud to be in Quincy, and proud of the outstanding banking services we offer," O'Brien said.

"We look forward to contributing in many ways as we bring excellence in community banking to local families and businesses."

The new branch is the third area location for SSCB, which, in addition to its headquarters in Weymouth, operates an office in East Bridgewater following its merger with East Bridgewater Co-operative Bank. South Shore Co-operative Bank, with assets in excess of $100 million, was founded in Weymouth in 1890.

Winifred Lancy In Tribute To Her Son And Other Veterans At 101, Gold Star Mother Still Comes Home For Memorial Day

By CRAIG SALTERS

On August 4, 1944, Winifred Lancy of Quincy's South Walnut St. became part of an extremely respected group, but one that she, like thousands of women like her, prayed she would never be eligible to join.

On August 4, 1944, Winifred Lancy became a Gold Star Mother.

That was the day her 20-year old son Norman Lancy, a graduate of Quincy High School, was flying his 25th and last mission as a Radio Operator in a four-engine B-24.

Norman's plane was the lead bomber in a run against a German submarine base and anti-aircraft fire had knocked out the radio and made an emergency landing necessary.

With the radio out, the pilot instructed Lancy to go back and inform the tail gunner to leave his position, since a crash landing in that position would mean certain death.

As Lancy was moving back to the tail gunner, two machine gunners stood back to back, blocking Lancy's path. One of the machine gunners stepped aside and Lancy stepped forward, only to be killed as flak shot up at that spot through the belly of the plane.

Lancy was the only casualty on that plane, and Winifred, anxious for her son's expected return, instead received a telegram from the War Department a few days later.

Now 101, Winifred Lancy wears the gold star -- the symbol of a mother who has lost a son in war -- on the wedding ring given to her by her late husband George. The mother of six, she has two surviving daughters, Olive Ann Lancy Norris and June Quinn, whom she lives with in Plantation, FL.

And every May, even since her move to Florida in the early 60's, Lancy has taken part in the city's Memorial Day Parade to honor veterans like her son, who is buried in a family lot in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery. "My son is buried there," Lancy says simply. "I brought him home."

Lancy's son was originally buried in Cambridge, England but was returned to Quincy in 1948.

Gold Star Mothers, Lancy said, were given a choice: the government would pay for one trip to see the grave or pay to have the grave shipped home; Lancy chose the latter. "His last letter talked about how he couldn't wait to get back to 'good ol' American Terra Firma,'" Lancy recalled, remembering his play on words that, for him as an airman, the more "firmer," the less "terror."

"I was honoring his last wish," Lancy said.

Lancy is the first to point out that the pain she felt -- feels -- over the loss of a son in war was nothing exceptional back in the days of World War II. She recalls that, of the six boys whom her son Norman played football and baseball with every day in their Quincy Point neighborhood, only two returned from the war.

What is exceptional is that Lancy, at 101, is one of a few thousand World War II Gold Star Mothers from a group that at one time numbered over 300,000. In fact, Lancy was the only Gold Star Mother to take part in this year's parade (Quincy's Nellie Barasso, a Gold Star Mother whose son George Barasso was killed in the Korean War, could not attend due to illness).

"She's as sharp as the day is long," says close family friend Fran Andronico, who grew up with the Lancys on South Walnut St. "She remembers everything. She can tell you stories about her grandfather who fought in the Civil War. She's like a second mother to me."

Andronico told of the tiny flags Lancy makes out of pins for veterans and the love that she carries to this day for her son Norman. "She wouldn't think of missing," said Andronico.

Lancy admits that, although the years have passed, some of the pain has not. She remembers walking through an actual B-24 plane during a show in Florida during the early 1990's. "It broke my heart when I saw where he sat," she said.

But another memory of that day, she said, is her daughter requesting a place for her to sit and rest while the line of over 200 people waited to walk through the plane. "No Gold Star Mother ever stands in this line," the B-24 owner declared, and she was ushered in for a personal tour without a hint of complaint from the other patrons.

When asked how one could best honor her son, Lancy's answer, and that of daughter June Quinn beside her, was unequivocal: support the World War Memorial currently being built in Washington, D.C.

"I can't believe that we have no national memorial for the soldiers of World War II," Quinn said. "We should honor all of those veterans."

But until that time, and almost assuredly after, Winifred Lancy will make the trip every May to attend the city's Memorial Day Parade and ceremonies, returning to Quincy to honor the memory of a son who could not.

Correction

In last week's article on the tribute to the Papile family, the name of the late John Papile, one of the 16 children, was inadvertently omitted. Mr. Papile was a member of the Quincy Board of Registrars.

QRTA Awards $102,200 In Scholarships

More than 200 members of the Quincy Retired Teachers Association (QRTA) gathered at the Neighborhood Club recently to award 34 scholarships to deserving seniors from Quincy and North Quincy High Schools.

The 34 scholarships, ranging from $1000 to $8000, amounted to a total of $102,200 awarded.

Mary Bozoian, president of the Scholarship Committee, and Robert Mattson, treasurer, announced that, from 1981 through 2000, the Scholarship Committee will have awarded 334 scholarships with a total monetary value of $454,000.

The dramatic growth of the Scholarship Fund is due primarily to the $1.2 million bequest received a year ago from the estate of Harry A. and Louisa P. Beede. Beede was a former principal of Broad Meadows Junior High School.

The QRTA will celebrate the 50th anniversary of its founding next October. Jean Ann Phinney will serve as chairman for this gala celebration.

The Scholarship Committee hopes to top the $2 million mark in invested capital on that occasion.

Ward 4 Meeting June 6 To Discuss Swingles Landfill

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico has scheduled a neighborhood meeting Tuesday, June 6, at 7 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., to discuss the filling of Swingles Quarry.

D'Amico said he was "upset" by recent newspaper reports asserting that the quarry filling took place with hazardous fill. "The Mass Department of Environmental Protection has monitored this filling from day one," said D'Amico, "and affirms the fill is not harmful to our neighborhood."

D'Amico has invited representatives from the Mayor's Office, the Quarry Hills Association, the DPW, the Department of Health, and the Quarry Hills Advisory Committee, as well as J.F. White, project contractor, and representatives from the Mass Department of Environmental Protection.

County Mosquito Spraying Begins This Week In Quincy

Application of a pesticide to control adult mosquitoes was scheduled to begin this week in areas of Quincy where it is deemed necessary and when weather conditions permit.

Fogging operations using the pesticide Resmethrin will be conducted between the hours of 3 a.m. and 6 a.m. on Thursday mornings and will continue until Sept. 15.

In case of inclement weather (high winds, rain or low temperatures) equipment failure, the application will be added to the next scheduled day.

The pesticide Resmethrin is used due to its compatibility with the environment, very low toxicity to mammals, low irritation levels and the fact it does not harm other wildlife.

For further information, call the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project at (781) 762-3681 or the Project's web site at <http://www.ultranet.com/~nmcnp>.

If you would like to see a map of the areas to be treated, click on "Quincy":current ULV Spray Schedule & Town Maps. ULV maps will be posted by 3:30 p.m. the day before the application.

PETRA, JORDAN - AMAZINGLY ANCIENT

Many people have seen Petra, Jordan only in movies like "Lawrence of Arabia" or "Indiana Jones." A 2,000-year-old archaeological treasure, the city was named a World Heritage Site in 1985 to preserve its antiquity. Jordan's Queen Noor has made Petra's restoration a top priority and tourism is increasing. Petra was formed when a huge earthquake split a chain of hills, creating a mile-long, narrow gorge. Visitors horseback ride to its opening, then travel through on foot or horse-drawn carriage. The effort is rewarded immediately upon exit - el Khazneh or the Treasury, soars 140 feet high and is the first thing to be seen. Built to honor a former king, the Treasury took nearly 40 years to carve from solid rock.

QMC's Christine Cadegan Runs Free Care Clinic Mondays

By CRAIG SALTERS

Christine Cadegan can't solve America's health care crisis.

But Monday evenings, in her own small section of the world, she eases some of the suffering caused by it.

Cadegan, NP, a nurse practitioner and program director of Occupational Health at Quincy Medical Center, runs a Free Care Clinic Mondays from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. at the Southwest Community Center, 388 Granite St.

The clinic offers free medical care to any adult without health insurance.

Besides routine procedures such as physicals and blood pressure screenings, the clinic provides free mammograms and pap smears for women.

Cadegan opened the clinic in November of 1998 and treated 158 patients the first year.

The need for the clinic, Cadegan said, became apparent through her role at the hospital. "I deal with a lot of working people," Cadegan said. "I started to notice people working two or three jobs with no health insurance, or people who couldn't afford the $75 needed for a pre-employment physical."

Thus, the clinic, staffed by herself and assisted by, on any given Monday: William Connors, a nurse technician at QMC; Karen Kraez, a former medical secretary; or Cadegan's mom Helen.

Dr. Thomas Winters, QMC's medical director of Occupational Health, is the Free Care Clinic's supervising physician.

Those individuals, Cadegan said, keep the clinic up and running. However, when she needs more help or one of her patients needs special attention, Cadegan is not afraid to make use of her contacts in the medical community. "I beg and borrow," she said. "The local doctors have been just wonderful. No one's ever turned me down."

CHRISTINE CADEGAN, NP, runs a Free Care Clinic for uninsured adults Mondays from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. at the Southwest Community Center, 388 Granite Street.

Cadegan is particularly proud of the clinic's pap smear and mammogram services, done in conjunction with the Breast and Cervical Cancer Initiative of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health and with the assistance of the Manet Health Center and QMC, respectively.

"Sometimes a woman will come in for a physical, or maybe she has a sore throat, and I'll suggest that she get checked," Cadegan said. "I've noticed that women will take care of their children before they'll take care of themselves, so I just try to keep them in the loop."

Cadegan said her first experience providing medical assistance to those in need came while still a nursing student at the University of Massachusetts at Boston. "I did a clinical rotation at the Pine Street Inn and just fell in love with that type of nursing," she said. "I just feel I've been very fortunate and I'm glad I can return the favor."

Cadegan grew up in North Quincy and is a 1970 graduate of North Quincy High. She earned her RN degree at the University of Massachusetts-Boston and received her Masters in Nursing from Simmons College.

As a nurse practitioner, Cadegan is qualified to, among other things, conduct physicals and prescribe medicine.

She has one teenage son named Michael who, she says, is involved in volunteer work of his own, last year in Washington, D.C., and this summer in Tijuana, Mexico.

"I think he's taken to it," Cadegan said.

For more information on the clinic, call 376-5506.

QCAP Homebuyer Workshop

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. is sponsoring a free First-Time Homebuyer Workshop open to anyone interested in purchasing their first home.

The three-part workshop is scheduled June 6, 13 and 15 from 6 to 8:45 p.m. at Quincy City Hall, second floor conference room.

QCAP is waiving the regular $40 workshop fee for the series. "We are very pleased to offer the community this important educational resource free of charge as a way to promote successful homeownership," said QCAP Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo.

QCAP is a certified US Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency (MHFA) Housing Counseling agency offering current and prospective homeowners and renters a variety of services including educational workshops, down payment and mortgage default counseling, landlord education, and credit and budget counseling.

"As a certified housing counseling agency, QCAP is in the unique position to provide workshop participants with Certificates of Completion that they can take to lenders and municipalities for reduce and low cost loan products, and down payment and closing cost assistance. This distinguishes us from other first time homebuyer education programs offered in the community," Strollo said.

Workshop participants must attend all three sessions in order to receive a Certificate of Completion.

A variety of homebuying professionals will present a range of topics to workshop participants. Topics include choosing a mortgage program; qualifying for a mortgage; working with a real estate agent; submitting an offer and signing a purchase and sales agreement; obtaining a home inspection; and what to expect at the closing.

Advance registration required. For more information, call Susan Fitzpatrick at (617) 479-8181 ext. 100, or leave a message at ext. 172.

Tips For A Best Dressed Home

Before putting your home on the market, it's best to make sure that it's dressed for success.

In other words, try to have your home looking spectacular for potential buyers who will be entering your home during showings. To simplify, follow these tips to help ensure a successful showing of your home.

Clean: Filth is everywhere, whether it is hidden or visible. Make sure to clean under sinks, the bottoms of drawers and cabinets, curtains and blinds, and both sides of every window.

Repair: Stop the drips. Paint over the old, drab coat. Tighten any loose doorknobs. Fixing minor problems in your home in advance will be a major relief to you during the transaction.

"Declutterize:" To help make your home appear more open and spacious, throw anything away that you don't use anymore. Avoid stuffing your closet full of your belongings, because buyers will probably want to see every part of your home. You may want to temporarily rent a storage space or ask a friend or neighbor to store any obstructing clutter for a "clutter-free" home.

Neutralize: Remember, not all buyers have the same decorative plans as you do. It's best to paint your walls a neutral color, and put away any accessories that are bright in color and busy in design.

SPRING CAR CARE

How Motorists And Motorcyclists Can Share The Road

The Governor's Highway Safety Bureau urges motorists and motorcyclists to use common courtesy and offers tips to better share the road. A driver can avoid a mishap with a motorcyclist by following these tips:

- Always follow and pass a motorcyclist at a safe distance.
- Never share a lane of roadway with a driver.
- Be alert for a motorcyclist at intersections, especially when making left turns — look twice to save a life! A motorcyclist can better share the road with a driver by using these tips:

- Clearly signal your intentions to a driver, but never assume the right of way.
- Wear a DOT-standard helmet, eye protection, and full riding gear with reflective stripes to be more visible to drivers.
- Ride straight — about 52 percent of fatal motorcycle crashes involve riders who were impaired by alcohol or other drugs.

IDLE TALK

If you are in the habit of letting your car idle for long periods to warm up in the morning, you may want to rethink this strategy. It is far better to idle your vehicle for no more than 30 seconds and then drive at a casual speed for the first few miles. Once the engine oil starts circulating, you might as well warm your engine most effectively by driving it slowly. Not only does this bring the engine to operating temperature more quickly than sitting at idle in the driveway, but it also (obviously) makes a bigger contribution to your vehicle's miles-per-gallon numbers. Regardless, it is never a good idea to rev the engine during warm up.

With the price of gasoline at or near an all-time high it makes sense to watch your driving habits and keep your car in top condition. From simple maintenance to major repairs, LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550) is your local full service center offering our customers only the finest in service. Do-It-Yourself Tune Up Kit Striking the right chord with a growing number of motorists is a do-it-yourself tune up kit that is reported to result in improved power, performance and fuel economy.

The kit, marketed under the name Exite™ was developed by Winner International, the maker and marketer of the Club® vehicle anti-theft device.

"There are more than 100 million fuel injected vehicles in the United States past their warranty periods," reports Winner President William Bechner. "Unlike other one-step products, Exite allows you to perform a tune-up and get instant driveability results with improved power, performance, fuel economy and without rough idling, hard starts and harmful emissions."

The tune-up kit contains three very distinct products: an air intake system cleaner, a combustion chamber deposit cleaner and a fuel injection deposit cleaner.

Step One - Air Intake Cleaner - cleans the vehicle's air intake throttle plate up to 100 percent by removing burnt carbon deposits.

Step Two - Intake Valve and Combustion Chamber Cleaner - dissolves up to 64 percent of intake valve deposits.

Step Three - Fuel Injector & Fuel System Cleaner - removes 100 percent of deposits from the fuel injectors.

The product, which is the first to be available outside of professional outlets, also contains a strong anti-rust formula. This provides excellent corrosion protection and lubrication that helps prevent scoring of close tolerance injector parts.

The product is also registered by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and meets the highest testing standards.

Consumers in the New York and New Jersey metro areas can find the do-it-yourself tune-up kit at Strauss Discount Auto stores and Auto Barn retail stores. The product is now just being expanded on a national basis and will be sold at other automotive parts, supply and retail stores.

Summer Safety For Families

Save-A-Life Summer Tips From Red Cross

Although this year's summer season has not officially begun, some Eastern Massachusetts residents have already experienced untimely deaths from water accidents.

The American Red Cross announces the third annual Save-A-Life Summer campaign, an educational initiative that reaches out to families with important information about CPR and first aid training, water safety tips and other lifesaving information.

"Lives can be saved this summer if people learn to swim, use caution in, on and around water and learn how to perform CPR is an emergency does occur," said Patricia Deyton, CEO of the American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay.

In the summer months, deaths from drownings dramatically increase. Drowning is the second leading cause of death from unintentional injuries for youths ages 5 to 24, according to the National Safety Council's 1996 Accident Facts Report. The American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay offers quick tips as part of its "Save-A-Life Summer" campaign. Highlights include:

- Learn to swim -- It sounds basic, but it's the best thing anyone can do to stay safe in and around the water.
- Never swim alone -- Swimming with a buddy, and only in supervised areas, keeps swimmers safe in all types of water.

• Watch out for the "dangerous too's" -- People who are tired, too cold or too far from safety should get out of the water. People who have had too much sun or strenuous activity should stay out until rested.

• Never leave children unattended around water -- Keep your eyes on your children at all times. If a child is missing, check the water first.

"Save-A-Life Summer" encourages Boston area neighbors to take part in making their communities safer. Contact the Red Cross at 1-800-564-1234 for more information.

Prescription Drugs Available At Low Cost

Is your medication too expensive for your budget? If so information in a new booklet might help.

The Cost Containment Research Institute in Washington, DC has published a 32-page booklet, "Free & Low Cost Prescription Drugs." The revised fourth edition booklet gives information on how and where to get free and low cost prescription drugs.

"Many major drug companies provide free or low cost medication, but rarely, if ever publicize the programs," says Allen Nichols, director of The Institute. "We've publicized an A to Z listing of all drugs that are available to certain qualified groups for free or at very low cost directly from the manufacturer."

Consumers can receive a copy by sending $5 to cover the cost of printing, postage and handling to: Institute Fulfillment Center, Booklet #: PD-370, P.O. Box 462, Elmira, NY 14902-0462.

North Holds Off Quincy; Presidents Win Finale

By CHRIS POISSON

Like a poker player with a bad hand, the Quincy baseball team could have laid its cards down on the table and folded last Thursday night at Adams Field.

No one would have blamed them.

The Presidents had fallen behind 5-0 against their more talented neighbors, tournament-bound North Quincy, and considering they had scored five runs or more only three times the entire season, it looked like a huge hole to climb out of. They were facing a pitcher who overpowered them in the first meeting, and they hadn't won a game all year.

With that in mind, the odds of upsetting their city rivals were as slim as winning the Big Game. Quincy, though, tossed in chip after chip and, like a stain, would not go away.

But as well as Quincy (1-17, 1-14) played, North Quincy was simply better. The Red Raiders (11-9, 7-7) thwarted the Presidents' late-inning rallies and held on for a tough 6-5 victory to sweep the season series, 2-0.

"The kids played a great game," said Quincy coach Michael Draicchio. "We've been playing great baseball. We've come a long way from the beginning of the year. We were down 5-0. You have to give the kids credit. They could've folded but they didn't. That's the way they're playing and that's what you want."

And that type of work

JUNIOR DAVE CENTRELLA pulls up into third base in last Thursday's 6-5 loss to rival North Quincy at Adams field. The speedy leadoff hitter had two infield hits, a stolen base and a run. In the season finale last Friday, a 5-4 triumph over Plymouth South for Quincy's first victory of the year, Centrella recorded the final four outs to save the win for starter Pete Turowski.

SENIOR T.J. BELL takes a hack at a pitch against Quincy. Bell had an RBI single in the first inning that scored North Quincy's third run of the game.

Turowski was out trying to reach third from first. Junior Joe Duffy walked and junior Mark Robertson beat out an infield hit to load the bases with two outs. But McCann got out of the jam when the next batter grounded out to first.

In the seventh, Centrella reached base with one out when his grounder to first bounced off the bag past senior T.J. Bell. Centrella then stole second and moved to third on junior John Lupo's grounder to short.

Once again, McCann escaped danger as he struck out the next batter on three pitcher to end the game.

"It could've went either way," Draicchio said. "We had a guy in scoring position to tie it. McCann, you have to give the kid credit. He came out of a situation where he's going seven innings and he's pitching against another senior that got a hit off him earlier. You have a guy on third and he strikes him out. That's baseball."

"Quincy came out to play as usual," said North Quincy coach Larry Taglieri. "They played a great game. It came down to the last pitch of the game. You can't get any closer than that. I know the outsider that looks at their record doesn't see the improvements they've made during the season."

North Quincy grabbed a quick 3-0 lead in the first inning when it sent eight men to the plate against Lupo. Senior Chris Walsh led off the game with an infield single and senior John Gavin followed with a walk. Senior Rob Celata knocked in Walsh with a base hit up the middle and junior Keith Doherty drove in Gavin when he roped one past a diving John Cooper at second. Bell stroked

North Quincy At Braintree

The North Quincy baseball team will travel to Braintree today (Thursday) at 4 p.m. for the first round of the Division I South sectional tournament as the tournament pairings were announced Tuesday.

This will be the second time this week and third time this year that North Quincy (11-9 overall, 7-7 Old Colony League) has met Braintree on the diamond. On Sunday, the Red Raiders dropped a 3-2 game at Adams Field. In the first meeting of the season, North Quincy took a 10-4 win at Braintree. Senior Matt McCann picked up the win on the mound.

Quincy finally paid off. In the final game of the season last Friday, Quincy scored a 5-4 win over Plymouth South for its first W of the season. Junior Pete Turowski picked up the win and he also drove in the winning runs with a bases loaded double. Dave Centrella (RBI single) got the last four outs for the save.

In the North Quincy game, Quincy scored a run in the sixth inning to cut the lead to 6-5. Senior co-captain Tim Pezzullo struck out and reached first when the ball got by the catcher, and moved to second on a balk. Turowski reached on an infield single to put men on the corners with one out for senior co-captain Joe Tower.

Tower singled home Pezzullo, but on the play

No Decision Yet On Quincy Football Coach

A decision has not yet been made as to who will be the head coach of the Quincy High School football team this upcoming season.

A coach is expected to be named before the end of the school year, June 16, according to Quincy athletic director Ed Miller Tuesday.

Last August, Bob Noble was named interim head coach for one season with the idea that at the end of the year an interview process for the position would be held. In late March, the position was posted to follow the rules of the Quincy Educational Association.

Quincy finished 1-10 last season with the lone win coming against North Quincy in the Thanksgiving Day game.

A Thought For The Week

SCOTT DEWARE

The touch in a handshake can mean "Hello," "Goodbye," "Congratulations," "Sympathy" and a lot of other things. Because man has a soul, his touch differs from the pawing touch of an animal. Man combines the touch of the physical with the spiritual. The loving touch of a mother's hand can ease the pain of a child's bruise. A slap can inflict pain physically and spiritually. There are contrasts in both the physical and spiritual touch. Some are pleasant. Some are painful. In a spiritual sense, every body touches the lives of other everyday by what we say...what we do...how we act. The touch of others can be good or bad. It can bring a touch of happiness or unhappiness. It can bring a touch of moderation and mercy; a touch of harshness or hatred. All of us touch someone with nearly everything we say or do everyday.

And, incidentally, we sometimes wonder how - or if - the weekly thoughts you read here, reach out to "Touch you" as we hope they do?

MEMORIAL ERECTED at Sailors Home Cemetery by The Sailors Home Cemetery Committee, dedicated Memorial Day, 2000. It reads: This cemetery, the last remnant of the National Sailors Home in Quincy, contains the remains of at least 119 veterans of this country's Civil War. The Home, located on six and one-half acres in Wollaston, operated as a farm for 66 years, from 1866 until 1931. Established primarily for veteran sailors and marines, the home also provided a refuge for former soldiers. These survivors of our most deadly war lived and worked together and eventually were laid to rest together in the soil they once tilled.

According to Stratouly, that bodes well for a green-light on the project in September.

Paul Bonoli, Churchill Rd. resident and one of the Mt. Ararat Association plaintiffs, concedes the injunction victory to Stratouly but contests whether it means anything in the big picture.

"To gain the injunction, we had to prove two criteria," Bonoli said, "irreparable harm to the site and our chance of success in the overall appeal. Yes, it was incredibly difficult to prove the irreparable damage claim, but he (Judge Lombardi) did not indicate one way or the other why he made the decision."

And, Bonoli said, the court proceedings suggested it was the irreparable damage criterion, and not the overall worthiness of the appeal, which lost the injunction battle.

Put more simply, Bonoli and his fellow plaintiffs, like Stratouly in his camp, remain confident of a September victory.

In the meantime, Bonoli said that the Mt. Ararat Association is more concerned with potential water runoff and airborne pollutants from the contaminated site. "Now that he's deforested 50 acres of a 75 acre property, there's no vegetative cover to handle water runoff or the wind-blown dust of the summer," said Bonoli, who added that Stratouly's mitigation plan for the tree-clearing mentioned nothing about dust control.

The Mt. Ararat Association is appealing the city's legal settlement with Stratouly in Land Court. Last December, the city council voted to approve a compromise deal for 1,040 units to keep Stratouly from pursuing a much larger affordable-housing project at the Highpoint site.

"The Comprehensive Permit is a slam-dunk, and I don't think anyone would disagree," said Michael Cheney, former president of the Quincy City Council and now a consultant for the South Shore Building and Trades Council. "The 1400-1600 units would have meant the city building at least one elementary school and putting an addition on a middle school. The education cost on the affordable housing alternative alone would be $4 million annually."

The tree clearing operation on the 75-acre former municipal landfill site began last week and is currently 80 percent completed. Stratouly said that only 55 acres of the land will actually be cleared, leaving a buffer zone of trees and underbrush to be left along the edges of the property close to the existing homes. Once the site is cleared, Stratouly said, construction debris, metals, and other materials on the surface will be removed. Pre-inspected clean fill will then be brought up to the site as part of the $8 million cleanup. "When we have completed, the site will be environmentally safe and aesthetically pleasing," said Stratouly.

Stratouly continued: "I would rather have spent money on neighborhood improvements that we can all enjoy rather than on litigation. It is a shame we could not have worked out our differences. Nonetheless, we are your neighbors and we will continue to demonstrate that we are good neighbors."

Cheney agreed that both time and money were wasted on both sides and blamed the political process.

"The decision to fight (the development) and not cooperate was political, in my opinion," said Cheney. "I wish I could say the end result was an improvement but I can't. As a former public official, having dealt with Wal-Mart, Roche Bros., the Nut Island Sewer Plant, I think the city would have been better served by negotiation rather than political posturing."

Cheney said the new Highpoint development means "1500 union jobs over a period of four years" and emphasized Stratouly's commitment to hire local Quincy workers.

Cheney also said that the two major arguments behind

Mt. Ararat's appeal were traffic congestion and environmental concerns, two issues, Cheney said, which were decided upon before the City Council's authorization of the permit. Said Cheney:

"The city hired three separate environmental consultants and they all agreed that Congress Group Ventures' engineering plan was sound. And the final traffic plan was approved by the city's traffic engineer. In terms of environmental and traffic concerns, it will be difficult to punch holes in all of the consultants for both the city and CGV in the Final Permit."

Council Advised To Start Saving For Bad Times

roughly a $9 million increase from the previous year's total spending.

And the recent salary increases for department heads, councillors, and the mayor, although not contested, were said to be a case of "very bad timing."

"What would we ever do if we hit some economic hard times?" asked Robert Curry, owner of Curry/Ace Hardware in West Quincy.

"We'd be in serious trouble. It's time to start spending your money, be it postage or whatever, as if it were your own money."

Donald McNally of Granite City Self-Storage also questioned the council's sense of priorities, referring to a meeting he watched where councillors argued over whether the city could afford new turnout gear for Quincy firefighters while at the same time allocating funds for postage. "I was disgusted," McNally said.

June 15 Deadline Looms Budget Sent Back To Committee

By CRAIG SALTERS

With a June 15 deadline looming, the amended Fiscal Year 2001 budget was sent back to the City Council's Finance Committee Monday night by a 5-3 vote.

The next council meeting is scheduled for Monday, June 19, four days after the deadline, meaning the Mayor's original budget of $183,427,366 would go into effect automatically without the $45,900 in cuts approved last week by the Finance Committee.

Of those cuts, $9,000 came from reductions in the salaries of councillors themselves.

Councillor Daniel Raymond, who proposed the motion, said he wanted clarity from the council's Ordinance Committee concerning proposed pay raises for three members of council staff, saying that councillors were working on different drafts of the salary schedules.

Raymond also argued the extra time would allow Mayor Sheets to include a second set of turnout gear, as well as washers and dryers for station houses, in the budget (the council passed a resolve that night requesting the mayor to look into the issue).

Councillor Frank McCauley, chairman of the Finance Committee, accused Raymond of "holding the budget hostage" to redirect budget monies from one area to another, a move McCauley argued was plainly illegal.

Voting in favor of the move back to the Finance Committee were: Raymond, along with Council-

Calls For Crackdown Hanley Cites $665,000 In Unpaid Boat Taxes

By CRAIG SALTERS

The city is owed $665,064 in unpaid boat excise taxes, reported Ward 1 Councillor Gregory Hanley at Monday night's City Council meeting.

From Fiscal Years 1995 through 1999 alone, Hanley said, the city is owed $271,196 in "deferred revenue" from boaters docked in Quincy who have not paid their taxes.

"All of this uncollected revenue is out there," said Hanley, who added that he received his figures on bills both paid and unpaid from the Auditor's Office. "With just half of those funds, we could fund the entire build-out of Hurley's landing."

Hanley introduced a resolve at the council meeting calling upon Treasurer James Chicco to issue warrants on delinquent boaters and authorizing Harbormaster Bernie Reisberg to enforce those warrants and prohibit scofflaws from docking in Quincy waters.

The resolve passed easily and was sent to Mayor Sheets for his signature.

Warrants on unpaid boat excise taxes, Hanley said, have not been issued in at least seven years.

"It's important to note that 50 percent of those excise taxes can go towards marine projects," said Hanley, who has made the renovation of Houghs Neck's Hurley's Landing, the city's only public landing, a top priority. "However, after one year, that money reverts back to the general fund."

In other words, Hanley is placing keen emphasis on the 2586 boater tax bills sent out in Fiscal Year 2000, which would generate $168,621 in revenue, half of which could go toward said marine projects.

Other figures, according to Hanley and the Auditor's Office, include: 1689 tax bills sent out in FY 1998, with $26,662 outstanding and $79,644 collected; 2367 tax bills sent out in FY 1999, with $108,908 outstanding and $43,900 paid.

Other unpaid balances include: $49,289 in FY (Cont'd on page 36)

Phillips said Adams will receive the Applegate-Dorros Peace and International Understanding Award at the National Education Association's Human and Civil Rights Awards Dinner in Chicago July 2 during the NEA annual Representative Assembly.

Budget Back To Committee As Deadline Looms

lors Michael D'Amico, Stephen Durkin, Gregory Hanley, and Joseph Newton.

Voting against the motion were: McCauley, Councillor Timothy Cahill, and Council President Paul Harold.

The Finance Committee approved the amended budget last Wednesday. One amendment was the cutting of councillor salaries from $19,500 to $17,500, which would go into effect January 1 and result in a total budget savings of $9,000.

But that night a Raymond resolution passed 7-1, with McCauley the lone vote against, that budget approval be contingent upon three council staff members receiving $3,000 raises each.

There was some confusion Monday night as John Keenan, executive secretary to Mayor Sheets, introduced a draft of the salaries which he said "now matches the municipal budget" and does not include the $9,000 in salary increases. The copy was referred to the Ordinance Committee, but not before Raymond and other councillors complained that they were reading outdated versions or had no versions at all.

Mayor Sheets spoke to The Sun Tuesday and confirmed that no raises were included in the draft and that he had sent a letter indicating that no such financial order would be sent.

Sheets was not against the raises per se, calling the three office workers "maybe the most deserving of anyone" because of their hard work and continued service, but he emphasized that the proper procedure must be followed.

"If the council is interested in giving raises to these three individuals, we'll look into it very seriously," the mayor promised. "But that has to be done after the budget has passed and it should go through the normal process."

By law, the mayor is the only official with the authority to recommend an increase.

Sheets did not agree with McCauley's assertion that the budget was being "held hostage," but did admit it was "getting very late in the budget process."

"It's a good council, and they've worked very hard on this budget," Sheets said. "I'm very confident that we'll arrive at a solution (before the June 15 deadline)."

Sheets called the firefighters' need for washers and dryers a "non-issue" because, he said, Twin Rivers (the fatty acid plant in Quincy Point with numerous safety incidents) had already verbally committed to their purchase and installation.

As for the turnout gear, Sheets said he has been clear from the very beginning: "Turnout gear is a very expensive item, and we're up against the levy limit. It was never my plan to add an additional $100,000 or $200,000 or $300,000, whatever, to the budget all at once."

"The money for new radios and gear will come out of free cash and lottery money and we have to wait until the end of June to know exactly how much we have. After that, we will pursue a systematic purchase of turnout gear over a number of years."

McCauley was clearly upset by the move, arguing that both the needs of firefighters and the proposed salaries could be handled easily "outside the budget process."

"The mayor can send down an appropriation (for those items) any time," McCauley said. "This type of thing should be done in committee and once you tinker, the whole thing falls apart."

By law, McCauley added, the council can only cut the budget and has no power to increase or redirect funds.

"They're hoping the mayor will cave in," McCauley said simply. "But the mayor holds the trump card on this one. If it's not handled by June 15, the mayor's budget becomes law. He doesn't have to change a thing."

Raymond took exception to McCauley's assertions and said that clarity and firefighter safety were his driving motives. "This is why I voted to postpone the budget," Raymond said, referring to the turnout gear and fears of the city's firefighters concerning Twin Rivers. "I'm looking for some direction by the Mayor on this issue by the next council meeting. This budget did not add those items (which the firefighters requested) and I think the City Council should push the envelope a bit."

Later Raymond declared that the reasons he gave for postponing the budget were "much more substantive than what Councillor McCauley suggested."

Harold said that the only solution now was, pay raise or no, to call an emergency meeting of the council. "We're going to have to settle upon some agreement among the councillors and call an emergency meeting," Harold said.

If adopted, the Finance Committee's amended budget for Fiscal Year 2001 would be $183,381,916, a decrease of $45,900 from the mayor's proposal.

If there is no emergency session or if the council cannot reach an agreement, then the mayor's budget will stand as written, which includes the original $7,000 increase in councillor salaries as opposed to the amended compromise increase of $5,000 per councillor.

Quincy 2000 Selects Consultant For Brewers Corner Revitalization Plan

The Quincy 2000 Corporation, Quincy's public/private partnership for economic development, recently hired Community Design Partnership to serve as consultants to assist the preparation of a revitalization plan for Brewers Corner in Quincy.

Quincy 2000's Brewers Corner Action Plan will generate redevelopment strategies that stimulate private and public investments in this Quincy neighborhood business district, according to Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino.

"There are a number of real estate opportunities in this area," he said. "Community Design Partnership's principals, Larissa Brown and Jon Seward, bring a wealth of planning, market analysis, and architectural experience to the project. Their expertise will compliment the work of Quincy 2000 in developing the Action Plan for Brewers Corner."

Other relevant projects Community Design Partnership has worked on include: Wellesley Hills Square Improvements in Wellesley; Jewelry District Concept Plan, Providence, R.I.; Southside/Broad Street Market Analysis and Economic Strategy also in Providence; and Bowdoin/Geneva Main Street Design Charrette, Boston.

Councillor Michael D'Amico has assembled a planning committee comprised of area residents, business and property owners to work with Quincy 2000 and Community Design Partnership.

"The implementation of the plan will require a coordinated effort on behalf of all stakeholders in the district," Mannarino said. "We want to stimulate both commercial and residential rehabilitation, attract new businesses and new residents to the area, making the district better for the entire community."

Quincy 2000 prepared similar Action Plans for Quincy Center in 1996 and Quincy Point in 1998. Quincy 2000 continues to assist the city, businesses, and property owners in the implementation of those plans.

The Action Plan will be completed in early July. The plan is funded through the City of Quincy's Community Development Block Grant Program. For more information, call Quincy 2000 at (617) 847-1454.

Street to Merrymount Parkway and end at Adams Field.

After the parade there will be the raising of a 30' by 60' version of Old Glory at Pageant Field followed by a fantastic fireworks display from Pageant Field over Black's Creek.

55 And Older Age-Restricted Housing Approved By Council

The City Council Monday night unanimously passed a zoning ordinance amendment which creates a new category of PUD housing strictly for the elderly, allowing age-restricted housing for occupants 55 years of age or older.

Attorney Dennis Harrington, who represents Roseland/Faxon Woods LLC, a company seeking a permit to build such a site off Falls Blvd., said the new ordinance meets all state and federal regulations, such as a five-acre minimum, and grants no special exemptions in terms of taxes or parking.

No one spoke in opposition to the amendment.

Roseland/Faxon Woods is scheduled to seek a permit before the council, acting as the city's Special PUD granting authority, on Monday, June 19, at 6:30 p.m.

The proposal calls for an 196-unit independent living campus to be constructed on a 6.7 acre site.

The apparent shooter, Palestinian Sirhan Sirhan, had a smoking .22 revolver wrested from his grip and was promptly arrested. On the morning of June 6, Kennedy died... On June 8, 1986, at the end of a controversial campaign marked by allegations that he had participated in Nazi atrocities during World War II, former United Nations Secretary General Kurt Waldheim was elected to the ceremonial office of president of Austria... On June 11, 1986, the U.S. Supreme Court voted to strike down a Pennsylvania state law severely restricting abortion by a narrow margin, thus holding up the high court's controversial 1973 ruling that legalized abortion.

Business Community Candidates?

Quincy business leaders and city councillors sat down together at a recent series of morning powwows trying to talk things out over their still lingering sharp differences.

The sessions, sponsored by the Quincy Business Council arm of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, seemed to clear the air a little.

But that air is still chilly.

No one suggested the time had come to send out for a peace pipe and a pound of peace pipe tobacco.

There are still hard feelings in the business community over the maximum 175 percent tax classification on commercial property voted by the council last December.

Business leaders feel it "came out of the blue" without warning and got rammed through.

But what really got their dander up was being shut off from speaking at a special meeting called to reconsider the classification vote. They feel they were rudely and completely ignored.

And nearly a half-year later they still bristle at what they consider was insulting treatment.

As Tony Agnitti, chairman of the Quincy Business Council, bluntly put it at the last QBC-council session:

"You crammed it down our throat, put a bag over our head and told us to get the hell out of here."

There are other differences such as the city council's vote to allocate only 15 percent instead of 30 percent of the revenue from the hotel occupancy tax revenue for tourism promotion.

But the tax classification scenario is like an open sore that won't heal.

So much so that the business community appears determined to play much more of a role in city elections beginning with the one coming up next year. By actively as well as financially supporting candidates they fell deserving. And by saying "no" to those they feel aren't.

There's even some speculation that there could be a city council candidate or two from the business community next year.

And, later on, maybe one for mayor.

Some political figures sometimes seem to forget that there are Quincy business owners who do live here and vote here. They are not all "outsiders."

And among those who do live here are those with deep roots, a passionate affection for their hometown and a genuine concern for its future.

Names like Bob Curry, Ed Keohane and Tom Galvin come to mind.

GALVIN

There's no indication -- not at the moment anyway -- that they would consider running for office.

But they, or others like them, would make respected and pretty strong candidates.

A FUND-RAISING brunch for Paul Harold, candidate for Norfolk County Register of Deeds, will be held Sunday, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center.

Tickets are $15 and will be available at the door. For more information, contact Mike Linnane at 770-0166.

And, speaking of Harold, he notes he is the only candidate for the office to file nomination papers from all of the 28 communities in the county. His signatures totaled 3,000--three times the required number.

SMALL WORLD DEPT.: Former Quincy resident Joe Fasci, who moved to Granbury, Tex. in 1992, was back home recently for a visit.

And brought back this small-world story:

He decided to drop in at a country dancing seminar in Granbury. Someone asked him where he was from and he said, Quincy, Mass.

"Oh," he was informed. "There's someone else from Quincy, Mass. here."

Turned out to be Marty Kennealy who had moved to Granbury around the same time Joe did. They got to talking and discovered: they both had worked in the pipe shop at the Fore River shipyard, lived near one another in both Quincy and Weymouth and had a lot of mutual friends.

But, they laughed, they had to go all the way to Texas before they met. Both are living in Granbury to be near their daughters.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1920'S POSTCARD is entitled: A Glimpse of the Boulevard, Wollaston, MA. This view was taken from the end of the Squantum Yacht Club boardwalk looking towards Atlantic. Aphorp Street comes out between the second and third houses. The Metropolitan Commission erected the post and rail fence along most of the Boulevard when it was built about 10 years before this picture. Remnants of it survive to this day.

Believes Shopping Cart Problem Is Getting Worse

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
I have never written a letter to an editor of a newspaper, but I feel that this topic really needs to be addressed again. The subject is super-market shopping carts.

Monday through Friday I take the train at Wollaston station. I park my car at my mother's house on Arlington Street. I see at least six shopping carts on my five-minute walk to the station. The carts are in the street, in front of homes, in front of the Atlantic Redemption Center and at the entrance to the T station.

These carts are being used to transport bottles and cans to the redemption center, used as strollers by individuals and used to bring their groceries to their homes. This is wrong!

I have been following the stories about how supermarkets are going to be fined for these abandoned carts, but I don't think they should be fined. I think if someone takes a cart off of the supermarket's parking lot, then this is stealing. If someone steals then they should be punished no matter who they are. These shopping carts do not belong to individuals—they belong to the store.

These shopping carts are an eyesore to the community and a hazard to individuals. The fact that these carts are out in the elements mean that they get rusted and the stores need to replace them, and also the store must hire personnel to pick these carts off the streets. This, in turn, drives the prices of groceries up. This is unfair and as I have said before, why aren't the individuals who are taking these carts being fined or punished in some way!

I would like to see something happen about this. The situation is getting worse and I believe that since nothing is happening to the people that are taking these carts then they just continue to take them as their own personal carts!

I think there needs to be some kind of committee to address this issue. Even though the carts say "DO NOT REMOVE FROM PARKING LOTS" on them, it is not enough. We need to teach people right from wrong and let them know that they are STEALING!

Taste Of The Sea Gala

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
On Monday, May 22 Marina Place, an independent and assisted living community located at Marina Bay, hosted "Taste of the Sea."

More than 200 people attended this seafood and wine tasting gala where they enjoyed wine from National Wine & Liquors and a sampling of specialty seafood dishes from The Clam Box, X & O's European Trattoria, Pacini's Italian Eatery, Captain Fishbones, Amelia's and Matilda's. A sumptuous spread was also provided by Victory Supermarkets; desserts were compliments of Bread & Circus; and delicious appetizers were offered from Marina Place's Fitz Vogt Food Service.

The event was unique because there was no admission or ticket cost. Instead of a specified donation, guests were asked to bring career clothes that they no longer wear to the event. The donated clothing benefited The Career Closet, a program of Interfaith Social Services in Quincy. The Career Closet is a shop that assists women re-entering the workforce by providing them with free suits and other career attire including accessories. On behalf of the women served by The Career Closet, I thank all the people who donated their career clothes.

I am very thankful to Marina Place for hosting "Taste of the Sea and greatly appreciate the restaurants, food stores and wine shop for contributing to the success of the event.

MACDONALD SETS EMPLOYMENT RECORD AT SHIPYARD

Neil MacDonald of Trescott St. set a record at the Fore River shipyard with 34 years of continuous employment. He was assistant foreman of the hull steel trades.

He was twice assigned outside the yard, once in Canada as a submarine builder and once at Newport News as an instructor for chippers, chaulkers, drillers and riveters.

When he enlisted in the service for World War I, he was pulled out of line at the Quincy railroad station because he was needed at the shipyard for the war effort.

It was said of MacDonald, "Although he was brought up in the knockdown, drag out blood and thunder school of shipbuilding, he never practiced it and a result was highly respected."

Atlantic's Matthew Moran Shines In National 'Geography Bee'

By CRAIG SALTERS
Besides establishing himself as one of the top 10 geography students in the nation, Atlantic Middle School's Matthew Moran recently had a wonderful trip with his family in Washington D.C.

Highlights included meeting Jeopardy's Alex Trebek, who hosted the National Geographic Society's national "Geography Bee" May 23 and 24, meeting Congressman Joseph Moakley, and visiting all the historic sites the city has to offer.

As the state champion of the society's "Geography Bee," Moran, family and friends, and Atlantic Social Studies teacher Philip Garufi traveled to the nation's capital for a two-day national competition featuring a total of 57 contestants.

Moran made it through the first-day competition, when the field of contestants was whittled to 10, then finished eighth overall the following day to earn a prize of $500, which the eighth grader promises to save.

But what Moran will treasure most, he says, is the first-class treatment his family received on the part of National Geographic and the experiences he had with students who share his passion for geography.

"I had a great time," Moran said of the whole experience. "We took a tour of all the historic sites and the embassies. National Geographic has been doing this (hosting the bee) for 12 years now so they really thought of everything."

Moran, who will attend Boston College High School next year, said his favorite site was the Washington Monument.

Another plus, Moran said, was getting to know the other contestants, especially a student from Pennsylvania and his roommate from Mississippi. Moran has exchanged emails with the two and intends to keep in touch.

When Moran was asked where he might want to travel someday, the answer was typical of a student who has already absorbed a good portion of mountain heights, ocean depths, current speeds, and river lengths for most of the globe: "Everywhere," he said.

Moran later shortened his list from everywhere to Hong Kong, Australia, and various countries of Western Europe.

All of which are quite reasonable goals for an eighth grader who, with an extensive knowledge of geography, has done his part to put Quincy on the map.

THE QUINCY CARNIVAL at Marina Bay continues until Sunday with amusements for the whole family, including rides, children's rides, a fun house, a challenging midway, and plenty of carnival foods. Admission and parking are free.

Public Works Offers Yardwaste Disposal For Residents

The Quincy Department of Public Works reminds residents of the availability of the DPW for yardwaste drop-off.

For the past several years, the city has contracted with BFI for 10 weeks of curbside yard waste pickup. The spring collection has been during the month of May and the fall collection from late November through December.

In an effort to further service the needs of Quincy residents, the Department of Public Works offers a supplemental program to the curbside collection. Residents may bring their grass clippings, leaves, twigs mixed together and dispose of them to the rear of the DPW administration building where they will be incorporated into the compost process.

The program was initiated due to the state's banning of these materials from landfills. The ban prohibits BFI from picking up the materials and mixing them in with the trash. It also created a challenge for the city to find a way that residents could get rid of the yard waste and for the city to recycle the material into beneficial use.

Tree branches and hedges or brush should be kept separate from the grass and leaves. They are disposed of in a separate pile at the DPW and are ground into wood chips for municipal use. Residents are asked to remove all dirt and root balls, as they tend to clog the tub grinder that processes the brush materials.

The "backyard" is currently open Monday through Saturday, 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. Bring proof of Quincy residence (drivers license will suffice). For more information, residents may call the 24-hour hotline 770-BINS (2467). Calls will be returned Monday through Friday during regular business hours.

Manet Community Health Center provides

53,700 primary care visits a year and another 3,500 special program services

Annually it provides 33,000 visits to 8,000 individuals who are uninsured with additional services to people who are often underinsured.

Congress, led by Rep. William Delahunt and Sen. Edward Kennedy, has increased by $100 million national funding for community health centers over the past two years.

Manet Community Health Center provides access to health care for the low income and uninsured populations at three sites in Quincy and one in Hull. Two hundred and fifty new patients a month, half of them uninsured, seek assistance.

"These additional resources will help us face the continuing increases in the cost of providing high quality comprehensive health care for the uninsured," said Hafer.

'Quincy Has Become Very Important To Me' McCullough Lecture Raises $25,000 For Library Addition

By CRAIG SALTERS

The Crane Public Library's community fund-raising campaign is $25,000 richer because, as well as being one of America's pre-eminent historians, David McCullough happens to be a man of his word.

McCullough, the Pulitzer-Prize winning author of Truman and host of PBS' "The American Experience," made a rare speaking engagement at the library last Thursday to support what he called "one of America's greatest resources: public libraries."

"It was really a wonderful stroke of luck," said Ann McLaughlin, director of the Quincy Public Library. "He's just a lovely, lovely man."

McLaughlin explained that she had attended a presentation at the Boston Public Library recently where McCullough, a trustee of the BPL, announced that he would "help any library, anywhere, anytime."

"So I took a shot," said McLaughlin, who wrote McCullough a letter asking him to speak to raise funds for the Crane's recent addition, which is slated to open in October.

McCullough responded that he would be glad to help, adding that "Quincy has become very important to me as I've been working on my new book (a history of John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, due out next year)."

The $24,750 McCullough raised, through a $50 apiece lecture on the Adams Family and a $500 per person reception, will be added to the campaign fund of the library's board of trustees, which has made a $1 million commitment, above city and state funds, to purchase furnishings and additional equipment for the extension.

But more than the funds raised, it was McCullough's remarks which put a stamp of approval on the city's library efforts, and the city itself, which could not be bought at any price.

"I know I'm somewhat biased," the winner of both the Pulitzer Prize and the National Book Award began, "but I believe that the John Adams House (Adams Mansion) is the most fascinating, overall, of all of the presidential homes."

The reason, McCullough said, was that "everything there is the real thing."

McCullough added that the four generations of noted Adams who lived there also added to the site's authenticity. "It's a geological cross-section of the layers of time and the pattern and the story of our country," McCullough said. "It's a national treasure."

DAVID McCULLOUGH delivers his lecture of John and Abigail Adams, who feature prominently in his upcoming book on Presidents John Adams and Thomas Jefferson. The noted historian read the first few pages of the new book to the enthusiastic reaction of the audience.

MRS. HOBART HOLLY, wife of the late Quincy Historical Society historian, is escorted for the lecture in a tent on the library lawn by David McCullough and Mayor James Sheets.

McCullough spoke of getting a real sense of history by climbing the very outcropping of rock at Penn's Hill where Abigail Adams and her son John Quincy Adams watched the smoke from Bunker Hill. He marveled at seeing the lilac bushes the first lady planted herself at the mansion.

He also remarked of the wonderful living traditions of the Adams Mansion, such as the flight of stairs where, to this day, only a member of the Adams family is allowed to climb.

McCullough told the story of CNN's Judy Woodruff ignoring the advice of a National Park Service ranger and trying to climb the stairs, only to be stopped dead in her tracks. "I'm serious," the ranger told her politely but firmly.

At one point during the lecture McCullough, who had earlier expressed a hope to "do justice" to the material, read the first few pages of his upcoming book and asked the audience, "Well, what do you think?"

The response: thunderous applause.

Mayor James Sheets, who was born eight miles away from the site of the subject of one of McCullough's more famous books, The Johnstown Flood, praised the historian not only for his intellect but for his "deep sense of people" which, the mayor said, was conveyed in all McCullough's writing.

As for McCullough, he made no bones as to just how important he thought libraries were to the fabric of American society. Said McCullough:

"Free public libraries are one of this country's greatest resources. It is a world of pure democracy. In theory or in fact, one could become as educated as anyone from the finest universities in the world just by attending the public library."

He also said he was reassured by the fact that "there are still more public libraries than McDonald's" in the country.

The Crane Library presented McCullough with an historic afghan of the city, bearing the image of the library, as well as a tote bag and T-shirts for McCullough's family, including his 15 grandchildren.

Nantucket's Robert Mooney, a member of the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners, also presented McCullough with a Toby Mug bearing the likeness of John Adams.

After the Crane addition opens in October, the old section of the library is due for a mostly cosmetic renovation which should be complete by the end of the year.

"The Thomas Crane Public Library will become the significant building and institution in Quincy Center," Sheets said. "It will be used by the high schools, the colleges, City Hall, and all of the businesses."

"This is just tremen-

Teacher Ron Adams Selected For National Honor

"thrilled" at receiving the national honor.

"The QEA is pleased and honored to have nominated Ron Adams for this award," Phillips said. "Ron is nationally known for using language arts teaching to give kids a voice in the world."

On the local front, Phillips noted that Adams has organized letter writing and speaking campaigns to help his students conduct the "Winnie The Welder" campaign that led to the acquisition of the USS Salem as the centerpiece of the U.S. Navy Shipbuilding Museum at the Fore River Shipyard.

And on the world front, his students raised $147,000 to build the "School For Iqbal" in Pakistan.

Iqbal, a 12-year-old former child labor slave, visited Adams' students at Broad Meadows in 1994 and asked them to help fight child labor. A year later he was murdered on his return to Pakistan.

The Broad Meadows students kept their promise to him to fight child labor abuse through their campaign to build the school and with continuing efforts.

Currently the students are involved in a campaign to have clothing sold with labels certifying that no child labor was used in the production.

On being selected for the National Education Association award, Adams told The Sun:

"I'm thrilled. I am very grateful to the QEA for the nomination because all my career I've been pro-union. This Peace and Understanding Award from the national teacher's union will bring a positive spotlight not only on the fabulous students at Broad Meadows Middle School, but also to colleagues, parents and the community as well. Awards go to individuals, but individuals are part of a system. I'm blessed to be part of a great school system and a great city."

The NEA's Applegate-Dorros Award goes to a group or organization or teacher-member of the National Education Association who has made a significant contribution to international understanding among Americans.

"Middle school students frequently feel as if they have no voice in the world, that no one listens to their ideas, concerns and beliefs," Phillips said. "Through letter writing, and making speeches in Quincy, in Washington, and even at the United Nations, Ron Adams' students know that their voices are powerful, indeed."

"How many middle school kids can say they helped build a school half a world away? Ron Adams' students can say that. Learning the power of language and activism, and making their issues and beliefs come true gives these students an invaluable gift."

Phillips added:

"The Quincy Education Association is exceptionally proud of Ron Adams. He exemplifies our motto: 'Teachers care!'"

Long pants are commended and participants should wear shoes and clothes that you don't mind getting dirty. Meet at the gravel parking lot on Merymount Parkway, near Black's Creek. No pre-registration is required for this event.

Squantum's Squaw Rock Park - Sunday, June 11, 5 to 6 p.m. Hosted by Tom Palmer of the Neponset River Watershed Association, participants will learn how to use field guides to identify various plants and tree species at one of Quincy's best kept secrets. Meet at the parking lot at the end of Dorchester St. in Squantum. No pre-registration required.

Biodiversity Picnic Celebration at Squaw Rock Park - Sunday, June 11, 6:30 p.m. Join other participants of the Biodiversity Days program to celebrate the accomplishments of the weekend's tours. Bring your own picnic dinner and enjoy breathtaking views of Boston Harbor and the city skyline from Squaw Rock Park. Dessert will be provided by the Quincy Park Department.

"Biodiversity is the key to a healthy ecosystem. Each species, from the largest to the smallest, has its place in the web," said Environmental Secretary Bob Durand. "The first step to ensure biodiversity is to find out just how many different species we have in our communities."

The Environmental Treasures of Quincy program began in April as an effort to educate Quincy residents about the unique and important natural and habitat areas in Quincy.

"We hope to build upon the success of our first two events and attract people of varying interests for our Biodiversity Days celebration," said Dave Murphy, program manager for the Quincy Park Department.

"From the advanced naturalist to the regular citizen, this schedule offers varying degrees of participation so that everyone of all abilities and interests can participate. You will be surprised at the amount of varying species of plants and wildlife that we share a city with," Murphy said.

Massachusetts Biodiversity Days is a state-wide celebration sponsored by the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs and conducted by local organizations.

For more information on the Environmental Treasures of Quincy Program and Biodiversity Days, call the Quincy Park Department at (617) 376-1254.

Nominations Open For Park Dept.'s 'Neat Neighbors' Contest

The Quincy Park Department has opened nominations for the third annual "Neat Neighbors" contest.

Residents can nominate a friend, relative or neighbor who maintains their yard or property in the spirit of a Cleaner, Greener Quincy by calling the Park Department at (617) 376-1254. Nominations will be open through Labor Day.

The Neat Neighbors contest will honor 25 Quincy residents who have beautified their yard or property throughout the past year. Winners will be chosen in September.

New to the contest this year will be a separate category for businesses that maintain their commercial properties with various trees, flowers, shrubs and other plantings.

"The Neat Neighbors contest was initiated to recognize those residents who toil every day through the spring and summer to beautify their properties, and subsequently the entire neighborhood," said Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park Forestry and Cemetery Departments. "We find that property beautification can often have a domino effect where neighbors often work hard to keep up with each other. The result is a much more beautiful and livable city."

During the course of the summer, Park Department personnel will check the nominated properties to ensure that they meet the minimum contest requirements. A total of 25 Neat Neighbors will be chosen at random from all those who meet the contest requirements.

For more information on the Neat Neighbors contest, call the Park Department at (617) 376-1254.

Telematics: Helping Drivers Make The Most Of Time

Americans spend 500 million hours a week in their vehicles, according to transportation experts. But U.S. automakers and other companies are helping drivers make the most of that time with new in-vehicle features that gather traffic updates from the Internet, use wireless communications to summon roadside assistance or to locate an ATM and even play movies for rambunctious children in the back seats. These new in-vehicle communications, information and entertainment features, known collectively as telematics, could be as exciting to consumers as the first car radios, which appeared in the 1920s, according to the Intelligent Transportation Society of America (ITS America.)

DETAILING INFORMATION

If you have washed your car shiny clean, the finish is in good shape, right? Not necessarily. A vehicle's finish may look glossy, but the paint may be dulling so gradually that it is not readily perceptible to the eye. Car owners should use more than their eyes to evaluate their car's finishes. By running their clean, dry hands over the finish, vehicle owners can feel whether or not the finish is contaminated with tree sap, road grime or oxidation. A finish should be as smooth as glass. Otherwise, any roughness may be due to oxidation. When this is found, it is a good idea to have a professional detailer refurbish the finish to nearly new condition.

Professional detailing is a great way to keep your car, van or SUV looking new. If you are having any problems or have questions, bring it into AILEO & WALT'S SUNOCO for servicing. We have modern test equipment and the best ASE Certified service technicians in the area. We also use the AllData CD-ROM based system for the very latest in maintenance and service bulletins for all makes of cars. Let's get acquainted at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Brantree (781-843-1550). The number of drivers with access to telematics services is expected to climb to 11 million by 2004. Many of the telematic devices will feature voice-activated and text-to-speech software to ensure drivers are able to operate their vehicles safely.

Revenue from telematics devices is expected to reach more than 41.7 billion in 2004. The telematics market is developing around drivers who want wireless communications for reaching emergency response or roadside assistance and tracking stolen vehicles.

Also, drivers say they are looking for real-time traffic information to avoid delays or reschedule their commutes. "We need an inexpensive way to collect data on all roads and in all areas. Right now, there is a data gap with plenty of data in some areas and no data at all in others," said ITS America Board member Marius Zenios.

Providing drivers with better information will reduce the time that vehicles are idled by congestion or creep ahead in stop-and-go traffic, and a smoother traffic flow has been shown to reduce air pollution.

DaimlerChrysler, Ford and General Motors are preparing to include telematics features as standard equipment.

In the near future, service centers will be able to perform a remote diagnosis of a car's performance using the wireless communications aspect of telematics.

Drivers will be able to send and receive E-mail or be linked to personalized Web pages that contain business, weather or sports updates.

A recent study reported that 87 percent of current telematic users thought their systems were good or excellent, and more than 50 percent would recommend them to others.

ITS America is an educational and scientific public-private partnership of 1,000 member organizations promoting the use of advanced technologies in surface transportation. Home Appraisal Key To Obtaining Mortgage Approval

By CAROL BULMAN
Conway Financial Services

You've found your dream home and are ready to apply for a mortgage. There has been much talk about income and debt ratios, credit scores and closing costs, you have the savings you need for the downpayment, or you have located a family member willing to extend a gift for this purpose.

Either way, you feel prepared for the transaction.

As a potential buyer, you are concerned with your ability to repay a loan and whether your credit history is acceptable. But looming early during the processing of your mortgage application will be the challenge of determining whether the house you chose will be acceptable to support the mortgage.

Once a borrower applies for a mortgage, an independent appraiser is hired to inspect the property. The appraiser estimates the value of the home based upon his or her opinion of the property's condition, quality and appeal. An appraiser reports the findings on the Uniform Residential Appraisal Report (URAR), an industry-accepted and approved form.

The URAR gives the appraiser a standard format to fully describe the property, noting factors that will both positively and negatively affect value.

The lending institution relies upon the appraisal report to determine whether the property is adequate collateral of the loan. As the lender reviews the report, he or she considers whether the appraiser has made any notes about unusual situations, whether the estimate of value is consistent with the description of the property and whether the value is supported by the prices of similar homes that have recently sold.

CAROL BULMAN
President
Conway Financial Services

The front side of the appraisal report is broken down into several sections, which include descriptions of the site, the neighborhood, any improvements that have been made, as well as a place to add additional comments about unique and unusual situations. The reverse side of the report details the comparable properties or sales that were used to formulate the estimate of value.

Normally, three comparables are chosen, based on their similarity and proximity to the subject. The comparable properties are then adjusted to look as much like the subject as possible — for example, the appraiser would adjust the value if a comparable home had more square feet of living space or a larger lot size.

The appraiser considers all of these factors and estimates the home's current market value, which is defined as the price that a willing buyer would pay and a willing seller would accept without any undue pressures. This figure is placed on the bottom-most portion of the report.

Although it's often a "behind the scenes" aspect of the mortgage process, the appraisal is critical to the success of a mortgage application.

So, be mindful that the key word with regard to the analysis of the subject property is value. There are two definitions of value that must be considered: first, what this property is worth to the buyer in this market, and second, what the property is worth to the lender as collateral.

The appraisal process will determine whether a lender has the collateral it needs to make the loan, but the appraisal report also is important to the buyer, since it will affirm whether the buyer is paying an appropriate market place for the property.

Once the appraisal hurdle is successfully cleared, you are well on your way to home ownership.

Carol Bulman is president of Norwell-based Conway Financial Services, a mortgage brokerage firm owned by Jack Conway & Co, that maintains correspondent lending relationships with some of the top lenders in the East and originates a full line of mortgage products. Home Investments That Pay

By WILLIAM C. RIDDLE
Real Estate Solutions

For those homeowners whose property is "underimproved" for their neighborhood, extensive work may be warranted to bring the property up to the level of the surrounding homes. Although many homeowners are reluctant to tackle such projects, upgrading can be the key to realizing your home's potential.

Be careful not to push your home above the value of the neighborhood. It is rare that a house sells for more than 15% above the neighborhood median, regardless of the extent of the improvements. The following is a listing of common improvements and their typical return on investment for a 25 year-old three bedroom 1.5 bath ranch. The estimates are based on Practical Homeowner's How To Increase Your Home's Value. They are intended to be general guidelines. Each situation is unique. Beyond the return financially, you should consider whether it is worth the aggravation and/or whether you intend to stay long enough to enjoy the improvements yourself. Feel free to call me at 617-472-8181.

Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run For ALS Saturday

10 AM Start From Veterans Stadium

The third annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS will be held Saturday with a 10 a.m. start from Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The event is affectionately dubbed "The Squirrel Run" in honor of Jimmy "Squirrel" Kennedy, a Quincy native, husband and father who died in 1997 at age 31 of Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis (ALS).

Kennedy was an academic and athletic standout at North Quincy High School and Northeastern University, a graduate of Georgetown Law School, and a practicing attorney before being stricken with ALS. His father, Christopher, Quincy school committeeman and former Dean of Students at Northeastern University, also died from ALS.

ALS is best known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, named after the New York Yankee legend whose death from the disease first brought it to the world's attention in 1938. It is a progressive disease that attacks nerve cells called motor neurons, which control movement of voluntary muscles. As these cells are destroyed, victims gradually lose the ability to stand, walk, speak and swallow. The disease is invariably fatal.

ALS claims more than 5,000 victims every year, with approximately 13 new cases diagnosed each day. An estimated 300,000 Americans, who are alive and apparently well today, will die from ALS. In 90 percent of cases, victims have no family history of the disease.

In support of the Squirrel Run, Mayor James Sheets has proclaimed this week, the week of June 4-11 as "ALS Awareness Week" in the city. This year's event includes a five-mile run, a 2.5-mile fitness walk, children's activities, music and food.

Jimmy's brother, Richard Kennedy, and family friend, Martin Levenson, established the Squirrel Run to raise awareness of ALS and to raise funds for research. So far over $50,000 has been raised and the goal this year is to break the $100,000 mark.

All funds raised will go directly to the Cecil B. Day Center for Neuromuscular Research at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. The Day Lab is at the forefront of the battle against ALS, and world-renowned for research into its cause and cure.

Last year over 700 participated in the event, including former Olympian and four-time Boston and New York City Marathon winner Bill Rodgers and former Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis. This year, Rodgers and Dukakis have signed on as Honorary Co-Chairs.

To make a contribution, sign up for the race or walk, or donate time or services, call Martin Levenson (800-993-9989, ext. 385, e-mail: mlevenson@macgray.com).

Quincy JV Softball Finishes Season In Fine Fashion

The Quincy junior varsity softball team finished its season with a bang, recently defeating rival North Quincy, 19-1, at Mitchell Field to win the season series, 2-0.

After an 0-4 start to the season, the Presidents catapulted through the Old Colony League standings to finish in third place with a 7-5-1 record. They ended the season hotter than Arizona weather, winning seven of their last eight games to climb out of the basement.

"The girls really showed what they were made of in the second half of the season," said coach Steve Pilalas.

In previous action, freshman Stacey Andrew (2 for 3) pitched Quincy to a 9-7 win over Falmouth. The young gun fanned eight to raise her season strikeout total to 62 as she improved her record to 6-3.

Center fielder Diane Gilbody (3 for 4, triple) made a great catch in the top of the seventh inning and catcher Jennifer Gropp threw out a runner trying to stretch a double into a triple to end the game. Michelle Pilalas extending her hitting streak to 10 games.

Quincy topped Silver Lake, 9-5, as Andrew picked up the win at Mitchell Field.

Pilalas went 2 for 3 with two RBIs to lead the offense. Pilalas, who usually plays second base, filled in for injured Liz Campbell at first and turned in a solid defensive game.

Right fielder Silvia Rios tracked down a ball headed toward right-center to end the game. Shortstop Shannon Paine and Gilbody also played well in the field.

Melissa Gage, Kristin Nelson, Laura Kane, Tressa

Rogers, Alex Powers and Gropp also contributed to the win.

The coaching staff would like to thank the players for their hard work this season:

Co-captains Shannon Paine (SS) and Michelle Pilalas (2B), Liz Campbell

TONI MARIE KABILIAN (20) of Quincy was recently chosen as Outstanding Female Athlete of the Year at Eastern Nazarene College.

Toni Marie Kabilian ENC Outstanding Female Athlete

Toni Marie Kabilian, 22, of Quincy was recently named Outstanding Female Athlete of the Year at Eastern Nazarene College.

She was cited by the selection committee for her leadership, team play and spiritual guidance.

Kabilian played three years of softball and four years of basketball at ENC. This year, the basketball team won the Commonwealth Coast Conference championship and made it to the Sweet 16 of the NCAA tournament, losing to Rowan University in the third round.

Kabilian, daughter of Arthur and Toni Kabilian, graduated from Quincy High School in 1996 where she was a three-sport athlete.

She is a double major at ENC, consisting of sports medicine and physical education.

North Girls Rally For Track Conference Crown

Although the young North Quincy girls' track team suffered a couple of close defeats during the season, it rallied to win the recent Old Colony League conference championship at Plymouth High School for the first time in its history.

Twenty athletes scored for the Red Raiders in the 134-117 win over Bridgewater-Raynham. Taking first were Lauren Sleeth (javelin) and Katy Mercurio (high jump).

"We were penciled in for 117 points based on staff's predictions, but when we scored 13 points in the two-mile right at the beginning of the meet, I knew we were in good shape," said coach Geoff Hennessy.

Lynda Wilson (second), Natalie Caron (fourth) and Sarah Houghton (sixth) earned the 13 points in the two-mile to give North Quincy a lead it never relinquished. It wrapped up the meet with a win in the 4x800 relay, sixth place in the 4x100 relay and second place in the 4x400 relay.

"Again, this was a total team effort," Hennessy said. "Basically nobody had a bad day on any team, but most teams depend on three to four superstars to carry the day. In a league championship you can't double up people and we have no weak areas. Hurdles, jumps, throws, sprints, distance, relays — we had someone near the top. That's how you win big meets. And we're mostly freshmen and sophomores."

In the recent Class A championships at Brockton's Marciano Stadium, Maureen Holleran placed third in the javelin (106'0") to advance to last Saturday's All-State at Norwell. Sheri Demonte took sixth in the shot-put with a PR 31'1". Sleeth took fifth in javelin, and the 4x400 relay of Allie Lacey, Kellee Conley, Katelyn McDonald and Erin McFarland placed sixth. Only the top four in each event advanced, but the top six received medals.

Here are results from the OCL championship:

100 meters: April Rodgers (3rd).

400 meters: McFarland (2nd), McDonald (5th).

One-mile: Linda Nguyen (4th).

100 meter high hurdles: Makini Thompson (4th).

100 meter int. hurdles: Laura Wells (2nd), Diana Berberan (5th).

High jump: Krystle Neves (3rd).

Long jump: McFarland (3rd).

Triple jump: Thompson (4th), Colleen Lahar (5th).

Discus: Lena Yuen (3rd), Kathleen McCarthy (4th), Ellen Tang (8th), Emily Haskins (10th).

Javelin: Holleran (3rd), Caitlin Herlihy (7th), Julia McGunigle (9th), Kristen DiMattio (14th).

Shot-put: Lisa DellaCroce (2nd), Jackie Murphy (4th), Demonte (5th), Katie Morgan (18th).

North Erases Braintree Before Bowing To Walpole

By CHRIS POISSON

It haunted them at times during the season and last Friday it returned to yank them right out of the playoffs.

"It" being offense. Rather, lack of offense.

The North Quincy baseball team had superb pitching and defense this season, but its sporadic sticks finally hit them in the Division I South tournament.

The Red Raiders, the No. 19 seed, made sure its invitation to the postseason party was not a one-day ticket when it ousted No. 14 Braintree, 10-5, in the preliminary round last Thursday. Twenty-four hours later, though, they were bounced out by No. 3 Walpole, 2-0.

Back in April, coach Larry Taglieri said that the success of this team was "going to come down to" how well it hit. He was absolutely right. The Red Raiders (12-10) averaged 5 runs per game this year, and when they scored 5 or more they were 10-2.

But North Quincy did hit well enough to reach its team goal — to qualify for the tournament. Last season, it missed the tournament by two games, finishing with an 8-12 record. For the nine seniors, they were counted on to lead this team. They were determined to lead this team. And they did lead this team back into the tournament for the third time in four years.

That makes this season successful. And a victory in June makes the 2000 campaign even more successful.

"The boys had a really good season," Taglieri said. "There was a little disappointment, but they walked with their heads up. They played hard and gave 100 percent."

"They made great strides. They weren't happy with what happened last year. They worked hard to get to where they wanted to go."

In the Walpole game, senior Rob Celata tossed a gem but came up with a tough loss. The right-hander went eight innings with 12 strikeouts and five walks. He allowed only two runs on eight hits, seven of which were singles.

"He was dynamic," Taglieri said.

North Quincy happened to bump into Walpole ace Greg Coughlin who handcuffed them all game. Senior John Gavin managed two hits and Celata added a single and senior T.J. Bell stroked a triple.

Bell's three-bagger came in the eighth inning with one out, representing North Quincy's best scoring chance. Junior Chris Lockhead followed and scorched a ball towards right, but the second baseman jumped to his left to snag the ball for the out. Bell was left stranded.

"Lockhead hit a rocket," Taglieri said. "It was a tremendous defensive play. It changed the complexion of the game."

In the Braintree game, the Red Raiders banged out 12 hits and took advantage of seven Wampanoag errors for the win. Braintree had two misuses in the sixth that extended North Quincy's two-run lead into a 9-2 cushion.

Senior Chris Walsh paced the offense, going 4 for 4 with three RBIs and two stolen bases. Gavin went 2 for 5 with two RBIs and three runs scored. Lockhead had a pair of hits and Celata scored three runs.

Defensively, senior Joe Flynn and sophomore Pat Bregoli shined in the outfield, while senior Chris Doherty flashed some leather at third base.

Junior Keith Doherty earned the start and delivered the goods. The southpaw went seven innings, allowing three runs on 10 hits with three walks and five strikeouts. Seniors Dan O'Toole and Matt McCann shut down Braintree over the final two innings. McCann got the last four outs without allowing a hit.

"We hit the ball well and played good defense," Taglieri said. "It was just a solid tournament win."

Seniors Can Survive The Summer Safely

As the weather heats up, seniors should try to keep cool to avoid heat stress and potential complications like heat exhaustion, heat stroke, heart failure and stroke.

"Heat and high humidity can put a strain on your body," said Lori Silva, RN, special programs coordinator for VNA Care Network, a nonprofit agency that provides health care in patients' homes and wellness programs in eastern and central Massachusetts.

"Seniors are especially vulnerable to prolonged exposure to high temperatures and humidity because of physical changes they've experienced. Knowing the warning signs of heat stress and taking precautions to avoid it can help keep you healthy during the summer."

Temperatures above 90 degrees Fahrenheit and/or high humidity are especially dangerous, but it doesn't take a heat wave to cause problems. If you experience any of the mild signs of heat stress, including feeling hot and uncomfortable, loss of appetite and lack of energy, try these tips for keeping cool from the staff of VNA Care Network:

- Exercise before 9 a.m. or after 6 p.m. when temperatures tend to be cooler.

- Stay in an air-conditioned place. If you do not have air-conditioning in your home, go to an air-conditioned public place, if possible, such as a library or senior center. If you are unsure if your town has a senior center or other air-conditioned place for seniors, call your town's Council on Aging for further assistance.

- If you are unable to go to an air-conditioned place on a hot and/or humid day, try to:
 - Stay in the shade and out of direct sunlight.

- Take a slightly cool bath or shower.

- Put cool, damp towels on your body.

- Use fans to keep air circulating.

- Avoid strenuous activities.

Tips For Avoiding Heat Stress

- Wear light-colored, lightweight, loose clothing made out of a material that allows sweat to evaporate such as cotton. Avoid synthetic materials like polyester.

- Protect your head and neck when outside by wearing a hat or using an umbrella.

- Drink frequently to replace fluids lost by sweating. Avoid fluids containing alcohol, caffeine or salt. If you have a problem with retaining water or a special medical condition, check with your doctor about the amount of fluids you should be drinking.

- If you use a stove, try to cook during the cooler times of the day.

- Do not use salt tablets unless directed otherwise by your physician.

- Don't ignore the warning signs of heat stress.

Contact a doctor or other health care provider if the mild signs of heat stress continue for a prolonged period of time after taking these actions. Contact a physician immediately if you are experiencing any of the following serious symptoms of heat stress: breathing problems, chest pain, cramps, diarrhea, dizziness, dry skin (no sweating), great weakness, mental changes, nausea, rapid heartbeat, throbbing headache and/or vomiting.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It is surprising how much people can do when they think they can. Self-confidence, providing of course that it does not become vanity, is one of the most helpful characteristics a person can possess.

Yes, an outstanding trait of a successful man is self-confidence. Whatever he may think of others, he believes in himself. He believes he can do anything he sets out to do. He has not only faith but courage. But such self-confidence is not conceit. It is always based upon solid things such as knowledge, skill and the willingness to work. Self-confidence is not a gift of nature, but one of her awards that anyone can earn...

It has been said that there are no limitations in what you can do except the limitations of your own mind as to what you cannot do. Don't think you cannot. Think you can...

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) There's a tendency for you lovely Rams to be too sheepish or too rambunctious this week. Avoid extremes in decision-making. Look for the happy medium.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Investment opportunities brighten the week for the business-wise Bull. Your personal life also glows as you make new friends and strengthen old ties.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be careful not to let your sometimes fickle self override an important decision. Abide by what you decide, or risk losing an important business contact.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Make an effort to temper your occasionally overwrought penchant to be judgmental. Try to be more tolerant of others' ideas even if you don't agree with them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A panorama of choices opens up. But not everything is what it seems to be. Be careful what you choose. Don't mistake fool's gold for the real thing.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You are right to question a seemingly too-good-to-be-true offer, even if friends advise you to take it. It always pays to investigate before you invest.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) This difficult domestic period is already taking a turn for the better. Hang in there and continue to rely on good friends for their loving support.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Go with the flow as your creative juices start running. Those ideas you believed in will finally get the attention you always knew they deserved.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A business deal includes a chance to travel overseas. Other offers provide other opportunities. Check them all out before making your choice.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You can be capricious as well as contemplative. Both traits will be put to the test as you face an unexpected development in your personal life.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Dwelling on the past is as futile as living in it. You need to assess what you learned from that stunning revelation and move on with your life.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A disappointment can teach a valuable life-enhancing lesson. Instead of closing down to lick your wounds, open yourself up to the positive possibilities.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You can easily soar off into flights of fancy and sometimes need to be anchored by reality.

Fallon Ambulance Reaches Out To Asian Community

Fallon Ambulance Service, a 64-year old ambulance company which provides 9-1-1 service to Quincy and surrounding towns, offers Emergency Cards to local Asians to help break down the language barrier in case of an emergency.

Cards, written in English and Chinese or Vietnamese, ask for vital information such as who to contact in case of an emergency, past medical history, allergies, blood type, primary doctor, health care plan, Medicare number, etc. Patients fill out the card and keep it in a visible place in the home, so that their medical history can be understood immediately.

"Quincy has about a 20 percent Asian population," said Jonathan Yip, economic opportunity administrator for the city of Quincy. "These cards make it possible for Asians who don't speak English very well to be able to communicate with the EMTs."

Yip also noted that many Asians come from small villages in Asia, where they may have never seen an ambulance with sirens and flashing lights. This process helps them understand that the ambulance and EMTs are coming to help.

Asian cards can be picked up at Quincy City Hall or at Fallon Ambulance offices.

Fallon Ambulance Service, founded in 1936 by James R. Fallon, Sr., remains a family operated business today. The founder's son, James R. (Ray) Fallon, Jr., and four of his children are an integral part of the company's operation.

Fallon Ambulance employs more than 525 personnel, including 125 paramedics and 375 EMTs, and operates 115 vehicles.

The firm maintains headquarters at 95 Eliot St., Milton and operates satellite offices in Weymouth, Allston, and Quincy.

Hanley Calls For Crackdown On Unpaid Boat Taxes

1995; $44,168 in FY 1996; and $42,169 in FY 1997.

Chiccino, who took over as city treasurer in March of 1999 after the 12-year tenure of Dana Childs, said that Hanley had spoken to him briefly in putting together his resolve but that Chiccino had no access to the hard data presented at Monday night's meeting.

He also added that no plan of action had as yet been formed, but that he welcomed the chance to work with anyone in the collection of the city's money.

"I would be happy to work with anyone as far as delinquent taxes are concerned," said Chiccino. "If we have an issue of unpaid taxes which can be collected, we should look into it. It's more a question of how, when, how much, etc. No plan has been formed."

Chiccino also added that there may have been very good reasons why his predecessor Childs didn't chase down all boat excise taxes in the past, perhaps because it might not have been economically feasible to do so. "Dana Childs was very good in the area of tax collection," Chiccino said. "In fact, it was his forte. If there was a way to have collected that money, he would have done it."

Mayor Sheets said that he would look into the matter and would form a committee comprised of the Auditor's Office, the Treasurer's Office, and City Solicitor Stephen McGrath.

"Perhaps the issue (of boater excise tax) has developed into a gray area," Sheets said. "It needs to be clarified."

McCauley Kids Council With Goat Resolution

Councillor Frank McCauley has a simple solution to the city's constant landscaping and ground-sweeping needs: goats.

Well, maybe not a solution, but a suggestion, which he put in the form of a resolution at Monday night's City Council meeting.

McCauley's resolve, which passed unanimously, asked that an article from "Nation's Weekly" magazine, a publication of the National League of Cities, be forwarded to Thomas Koch, executive director of the Parks, Forestry, and Cemetery Department.

The article details how 100 imported goats are saving money and reducing pesticide use in Denver, CO, by munching away at that city's unnecessary growth.

McCauley, a former banker with a reputation for both a sharp wit and a sharp pencil, said he was always interested in cutting expenses and that it did offer "a unique way" for Koch to improve the city's looks.

McCauley also admitted the resolve was slightly "tongue-in-cheek," which is why he took no offense when fellow councillors suggested the off-duty goats be housed on Manet Avenue, which also happens to be McCauley's home street.

AERIAL VIEW SHOWS the High Point development site on Quarry St. after the completed removal of 50 acres of trees. A green belt of trees was left as a buffer to the abutting neighborhood. The cleared area is where 1,095 residential units are proposed to be built by Congress Group Ventures.

50 Acres Of Trees Cleared From High Point Site

Congress Group Ventures President Dean Stratouly. "Special care was given to assure that the soil was not disturbed during the tree removal operation. We are now preparing to make way for the environmental remediation as required by the Department of Environmental Protection.

He said that a green belt of trees was left as a buffer to the abutting neighborhood. Stratouly said that during the three week operation "just a few complaints" were received as a result of the tree removal operation. "We hope to continue to demonstrate that we are good neighbors," he said. "We have gone through great lengths to soften any impact on our neighbors by setting up a hot line which operates 24 hours a day and a world wide web site to keep neighbors informed," Stratouly stated.

Stratouly said people will be able to view the projects progress on-line at www.highpointquincy.com. Although the tree removal operation is substantially complete, the hotline will remain in operation, he said. Neighbors wishing to express a concern may do so by calling 888-847-4478.

$11 Million Increase City Budget Approved At $183 Million

By CRAIG SALTERS

After being held over in the Finance Committee for one week over a dispute concerning proposed raises for council office staff, a Monday night emergency meeting of the City Council took only 15 minutes to unanimously adopt the amended Fiscal Year 2001 budget of $183,381,916.

That vote beats by three days the June 15 budget deadline, after which the mayor's budget would have gone into effect as written and invalidated the $45,900 in cuts made by the council's Finance Committee over a series of meetings.

The $183,381,916 is still an increase of $11,699,928, roughly six percent, from last year's final spending figure of $171,681,988.

Councillor Michael D'Amico, who voted last week to keep the budget in committee, said that he had been hopeful the mayor would have sent down an appropriation for the raises. However, after the mayor's explicit statements that he would not do so, D'Amico saw no reason to "jeopardize" the entire budget over any standoff.

Many department heads and city officials attended the meeting and several of those interviewed echoed D'Amico's wish that the entire budget not be held up over a $9,000 dispute.

Councillor Frank McCauley, chairman of the Finance Committee, explained that the dispute stemmed from a resolve passed at one of the final Finance Committee meetings stating that budget approval would be subject to $3,000 apiece raises for three of the council's office staff.

McCauley has gone on record that the move was illegal, saying that only the mayor had the power to appropriate raises. The council, McCauley added, could cut funds from the mayor's budget but could neither add nor re-direct funds.

Mayor James Sheets said he had no problem with the raises per se but that the normal process had to be adhered to, a position reiterated Monday night by John Keenan, the mayor's executive secretary.

Legal Wording Could Affect Stop & Shop Gas Pump Proposal

By CRAIG SALTERS

Opponents of the proposed Stop & Shop gas station in North Quincy, who were banking on a zoning ordinance requiring a unanimous vote of the council for all P.U.D. amendments, are apparently in for some disappointment.

That's because, says City Solicitor Stephen McGrath, the part about unanimous approval is nothing more than a typographical error and he has the documents to prove it.

City zoning laws, as currently written on the books, require unanimous approval of all city councillors for any amendments to existing P.U.D. permits.

That means, say opponents of Stop & Shop's proposed three-pump gas station at its Newport Avenue superstore, that only a unanimous vote of all nine councillors can approve an amendment to put those pumps at that shop.

But McGrath, the city's top legal expert, says the language is in error and was always intended to mandate the traditional 2/3 majority.

"It's merely an error in transcription," said McGrath, who admitted he was surprised when he noticed the wording in the city's ordinances. "It was a simple scrivener's error," McGrath said, adding that he filed a legal opinion with the city two weeks ago which said as much.

McGrath supplied a copy of his May 12 correspondence on the matter with City Clerk Joseph Shea, as well as a copy of an amendment dated January 20, 1987, with the 2/3 wording clearly stated. The copy read "passed to be ordained June 18, 1987" and held the signatures of then

Raymondi Open Space Plans Meet Public Support MA Electric Oposition

By CRAIG SALTERS

Public support for Councillor Daniel Raymondi's effort to re-zone three parcels of land as Open Space was evident Monday night, but there was opposition from Mass Electric, owner of two of the properties, and from Quincy 2000.

Residents said they wanted more green and less traffic. Opponents made charges of "spot-zoning" and attempts to de-value the property with zoning changes.

The parcels in question owned by Mass Electric are 22,536 square feet of space "on the southwesterly side of South St." and an 8,167 square foot parcel near Water St. and Faxon Lane.

Together with a 123,938 square foot parcel off Cleverly Court owned by the MWRA, about which no opposition was voiced, the parcels would add 154,641 square feet of open space in Ward 2.

More than a dozen residents spoke in support of the various re-zonings and Raymondi noted that many more signed the record in support of open space.

"It's one of the last greenspaces left in that area," said Robert Bravo of Ruggle St. concerning the South St. parcel. Bravo also noted the traffic congestion and potential for accidents if the parcel were developed.

Raymondi said he will make such support known to the Planning Board, which was scheduled to meet on the issue Wednesday night, and said he was confident of the Planning Board's approval and City Council discussion on the matter Monday, June 19.

"We had projects like these in mind when we passed the Hotel/Motel tax," Raymondi said, referring to the city's first revenue stream specifically targeted for the purchase of open space. "We are hoping that these would not be adverse takings. In fact, that's what the Hotel/Motel tax was created for."

Raymondi's calls for negotiation and fair-market value were welcomed by Mass Electric Account Manager Michael Della Barba and Business Services Vice President Steven Hall, but they still argued that re-zoning before negotiation was "putting the cart before the horse" and arbitrarily removed value from the properties.

"We're not opposed to the idea of open space," Della Barba told councillors. "But when you zone it to open space, you're removing the property's value."

Hall agreed, adding that Mass Electric had a responsibility to receive the best value possible for its property. "We are not opposed to open space, but we argue the mechanism (for acquisition), the arbitrary nature of the spot-taking of this parcel on constitutional grounds," Hall said. "No one from the city contacted Mass Electric on a possible purchase...it's tantamount to a land-taking."

Later both Della Barba and Hall said that they wanted to see a master plan showing why the taking of these parcels would be necessary, but both said they were willing to work with the city so long as fair-market values were applied.

"We prefer discussion first, zoning later," Della Barba said.

A letter in opposition to all three re-zonings written by Joseph Mannarino, executive director of Quincy 2000, was also read into the record.

Like Mass Electric, Mannarino called the re-zoning efforts "an inappropriate tool" for land acquisition and also mentioned the loss of property taxes and apparent "spot-zoning" given the zoning of adjacent parcels of land.

Mannarino also warned of costly litigation for the city were these parcels to be taken in such a manner.

Raymondi responded to Mannarino by again arguing that the Hotel/Motel tax was set up for situations just like these to allow the city to be more pro-active in acquiring open space.

"Mass Electric has to be responsible to their ratepayers and I have to be responsible to the people I represent," Raymondi said. "But we have a funding mechanism now and a proactive opportunity to alter the course of a community with no impact to the taxpayers at all."

Raymondi also harked back to Mayor Sheets aggressive open space initiative, introduced in March, and the mayor's call to have parcels in mind by June 1.

"We're late by 12 days," Raymondi said.

Grass Clippings, Yardwaste To Be Collected Monthly

The Quincy Department of Public Works announces a revised yardwaste curbside collection for Quincy residents.

Due to an increased need for curbside collection of grass clippings, twigs, and leaves, BFI will now be picking up yardwaste one week a month for Quincy residents.

Since 1991 yardwaste materials have been banned from landfills in Massachusetts due to lack of space. The state issued a mandate that municipalities find alternative solutions for disposing of the yardwaste material.

The City of Quincy responded by initiating a curbside collection targeting four weeks in the Spring when heavy cleanup of residential property takes place and again in the late Fall for six weeks for leaf collection.

During the period between curbside collections, residents have been able to drop off grass clippings, brush, and tree limbs at the DPW yard at 55 Sea St. from Monday through Saturday from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Demand for curbside collection has increased significantly this year as BFI can no longer bring any yardwaste to landfills without being fined or having the entire truckload rejected. As a result, they can no longer pick up the materials residents sometimes leave out after the Spring or Fall Curbside collections have ended.

In June, BFI is picking up Monday, June 12 through Friday, June 16 on residents' regular trash day.

Schedule for monthly pickups thereafter is the weeks of July 24, August 28, and Sept. 30.

The week of October 30 will begin a six consecutive week pick up for yardwaste and leaves ending Friday, December 8.

Residents who wish to dispose of materials at any other time than the curbside collection can do so at the DPW yard on Sea St. from April through December of each year.

Residents may call the 24-hour hotline 770-BINS (2467) with any questions. Calls will be returned during regular business hours Monday through Friday.

Assisted Living, Hope VI Council On Aging Board Topics June 22

Two programs of interest to Quincy's elderly will be discussed at the Thursday, June 22 meeting of the Quincy Council on Aging Board.

The COA Board of the Quincy Department of Elder Services will meet at O'Brien Towers, 73 Bicknell St., Germantown, at 2 p.m.

Board Chairman John Noonan said the Quincy Housing Authority has already introduced assisted living at Tobin Towers as part of a statewide pilot program.

Noonan said the QHA has also submitted an application to the federal Department of Housing for a comprehensive plan to revitalize the Germantown neighborhood. The QHA application was developed with assistance from ABT Associates.

The HOPE VI federal program is designed to rehabilitate distressed housing developments.

Should the federal grant application be awarded to the QHA, HOPE VI would contribute between $33 million to an approximate $100 million for the project designed to improve existing housing in the area as well as to create a balance of affordable, market-rate and assisted living homes in the community.

John Mather, executive director of the QHA and member of the COA Board will discuss the two programs.

Noonan also announced the COA Board plans to hold other monthly meetings at high rise senior housing facilities in Quincy. He noted that all meetings of the COA Board are open public meetings.

Noonan also reported that officials of the COA Board attended the annual Governor's Conference On Aging. Attending were: Thomas Clasby, Executive Director; Vice-chairman John Molloy, Al Farguhar, Gerard Weidmann, Kathy Quirk, Mary Vallier, and Chairman Noonan.

The fifth annual Quincy Senior Conference, sponsored by the Council on Aging and the Quincy Commission on the Family, will be held Sept. 16 at the Broad Meadows Middle School.

McCullough: Giving Something Back

David McCullough has found a gold mine of information while researching here in Quincy for a new book he is writing on John Adams and Thomas Jefferson.

"Quincy has become very important to me," he says as a researching source for the book.

And last week he was happy to give something back in appreciation. In a big -- and nice -- way.

He did it at a reception and lecture Thursday at the Thomas Crane Public Library to help raise funds for the library's new addition.

And McCullough, who reportedly can command up to $50,000 for a speaking appearance, did it all -- free.

The $500 per person reception was held prior to the lecture. And those attending were soon agreeing it was worth that and more.

They were presented with a choice of one of two of McCullough's books: his Pulitzer Prize winning epic Truman and Morning On Horseback, the story of Theodore Roosevelt.

They also got to individually meet the 67-year-old author who graciously took the time to chat with them and autograph the book they had chosen, personalizing each one.

None of that quick scribble and "who's next?" assembly line.

City Council President Paul Harold for example, got to talking with McCullough about Harold's role as a supervisor of the Adams Temple and School Fund and his involvement in the transfer of the Presidents Adams birthplaces from the city to the National Park System for better maintenance and supervision.

Harold, who selected the Truman book, was delighted when McCullough autographed it: "For Paul Harold who is doing such good work for Quincy and for history."

But I think got the real prize.

Imagine an esteemed author-historian and the publisher of a weekly newspaper discovering they had something rare in common.

I mentioned to McCullough that while everyone else at The Sun and probably the rest of the world, too were into computers, I was still banging my stuff out on my old Royal typewriter and taking a lot of ribbing from friends and others coming into the office.

"Still loyal to my Royal," I said.

I already had a copy of Truman (a gift from my son, Bob), so I selected Mornings on Horseback. McCullough, laughingly autographed it: "For Henry Bosworth with best wishes, distinguished by the fact he still uses the greatest of all typewriters, The Royal. (And so do I!)"

Now that should quiet some of the jokesters who have been maligning my trusty Royal for the last 32 years.

The lecture followed under a large tent on the library lawn with reserved seats for those who were at the reception.

Tickets for the lecture alone were $50.

McCullough invited a party of 10--seven family members and three friends--to the lecture.

And although he was giving the lecture free, insisted on paying for his guests.

They called it a lecture but there was nothing boring about this one. It was more a folksy talk with the audience completely charmed by a speaker who knew his facts and how to deliver them in a captivating manner.

McCullough's book on the friendly-to-thorny-back-to-friendly-relationship between the two Colonial giants is due out sometime next year.

And Abigail Adams who helped patch things up between her husband and Jefferson is expected to have a prominent role in the book.

As you listened to McCullough discuss the two men, you got the idea that his research has made him more a fan of Adams who usually walks through history in Jefferson's shadow.

"A man of extraordinary integrity and a life-long passionate patriot," he said of Adams. "He was a man of the people."

And although Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence, it was Adams, McCullough said, who "drove it through Congress."

And it was Adams who nominated George Washington as commander-in-chief of the Continental Army.

"And most importantly, McCullough noted, "John Adams was the husband of Abigail Adams." An observation that touched off a wave of appreciation from the ladies in the audience.

McCullough read a few of the first pages of his new book and asked the audience: "Well, what do you think?" Reaction: unanimous, loud applause.

And at the end of his talk, he received a standing ovation.

Thanks to McCullough the library building fund grew that night by $25,000.

"He's such a beautiful person," said Library Director Ann McLaughlin who was the one who invited McCullough to speak.

McCullough, who was born in Pittsburgh in 1933 and now lives in West Tisbury on Martha's Vineyard, has a couple of other talents: as a landscape painter and a "Sunday night spaghetti chef."

But it is for his books and as host of PBS' "The American Experience" that he is world-wide known.

He has probably received more distinguished awards and other honors -- including 27 college honorary degrees -- than a thousand or two other people combined.

To which I would humbly like to nominate him for the "We'd Like To Have You As A Next Door Neighbor Award."

That one, of course, doesn't exist.

But if it did, I'm sure everyone who was at the Thomas Crane Public Library last Thursday night would gladly second the nomination.

THIS IS A 1920 picture taken from the Old Colony railroad tracks looking east up Sagamore Street in Atlantic. Part of the old Atlantic depot can be seen on the left. The tracks are in the foreground. The trolley on Sagamore Street ran from here to Squantum Park and to the inns and restaurants along the way. The drug store on the right was owned by William B. Rice. That site is now part of Welcome Young playground. The Atlantic post office was next to the drug store and later they built a building across the street near the billboard signs on the left. That building is now home to the Boilermakers union.

An Open Letter To Sen. McCain

(The following open letter to Senator John McCain (R-Arizona) was sent to The Quincy Sun for publication)

Dear Senator McCain:

Thank you for taking the time to look into the "risky scheme" at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy. At best, it was a sharp businessman who took advantage of good-natured, local politicians who wanted to let their constituents continue to pretend that Quincy could be competitive in the global shipbuilding business. After all, only a small amount of "City money" was at risk, plus $8 million of future Community Development Block Grant funds. At worst, it was fraud. In the end, I think we can find that the truth is somewhere in the middle.

While you are painfully aware of the details of the shipyard fiasco, you may be less aware of some of the other schemes that have abused the fiduciary trust of the taxpayers. The common theme in each case is "Federal money" and/or "State money."

A few years ago, our local officials gave our Municipal College to a newly formed, non-profit organization. One of the first acts of the new management was to replace dedicated full-time faculty with part-time instructors, who were qualified, but who earned lower salaries and received no health insurance or other benefits. (Imagine the uproar in the City Council chamber, if a local construction contractor behaved in this manner.) At the present time, Federal grants and loans are in jeopardy because the college has failed to comply with audit regulations.

You may have heard of a project in Boston commonly called the "The Big Dig," but perhaps you are unaware of the Quincy connection. The Massachusetts Highway had the need to dispose of a very large amount of fill and the City of Quincy owns a large parcel of land, bordered on one side by the Blue Hills Reservation and on the other by an Interstate Highway. The land needed large amounts of fill. Perhaps as much as $80 million or more (I am sure your investigators know the exact figure).

In the end, the City should have 178 acres in an ideal location and millions of dollars to develop recreational and educational facilities, along with much-needed housing. All with minimal impact on the neighborhoods.

Instead, the City leased the property to a for-profit developer, who will oversee the dumping and fill and construct a golf course and associated food and beverage establishments. The agreement calls for the developer to recover all development costs, then receive 60 percent of any additional fees paid by the Highway Department with no upper limit. After the project is completed, the City will not receive any property taxes, but will receive rent equal to 10 percent of the "Green's Fees" plus 10 percent of the net receipts from food, beverage, and function sales.

About two years ago, the City acquired a former asbestos dump as the site for a new $50 million high school. The taxpayers of the Commonwealth will share in the costs through a long-standing school construction assistance program. According to local newspaper accounts, the seller of the site was able to realize a profit of over $1 million after owning the land for only about three months.

Last year, the City gave the municipal hospital to Boston Medical Center along with a $33 million subsidy payable over six years. The agreement called for a financial contribution by the Commonwealth and the Federal Government. However, neither the United States nor the Commonwealth of Massachusetts was a party to the agreement. In reality, the Commonwealth's contribution was a much appreciated $12 million, interest-free loan, while on the Federal side, no funds have been provided directly to Quincy Medical Center. In fact, Medicare's implementation of the Outpatient Prospective Payment System on July 1, 2000 will exacerbate the financial difficulties of our hospital, which serves a community where about 30 percent are over 65 years of age.

Most recently, the Quincy Housing Authority announced that, in order to take advantage of a $33 million grant from HUD, they intend to demolish over 100 units of occupied housing (constructed and maintained by the taxpayers) to make way for 55 single-family homes, of which only 10 will be made available to our "low/moderate income" neighbors. Of course, the "Federal money" will not be sufficient to fully fund the proposed project. The previous paragraph recounts past events. Perhaps a more constructive use could be found for this "Federal money?"

Thank you for your consideration of my observations.

City Republicans Protest Selection Of MacArthur

By PAUL HAROLD

The Quincy "Ike" Club protested the selection of Gen. Douglas MacArthur as keynote speaker for the Republican National Convention, saying he was a partisan of Sen. Taft for President.

Meeting at the Furnace Brook Golf Club, the supporters of General Dwight Eisenhower, led by Edna Austin, Deleceavare King and Councillor Amelio Della Chiesa, passed a resolution critical of the convention committee's choice of MacArthur. They also accused the Taft forces of "steam-rolling" the selection of convention delegates from Texas.

Copies of the club's resolutions were forwarded to the Republican National Committee in Washington.

LIGHTENING STRIKES FOUR HOMES

Lightening strikes were reported throughout the South Shore with four hits on homes in Quincy Point and South Quincy.

The most damage was to the O'Leary home on Curtis Ave. where the chimney was destroyed, holes punched in the roof and windows smashed. There was no fire, but fire Deputy Thomas Maloney estimated damage at $2,000.

Other homes hit were on Alton Rd., Quincy Ave., and the Crest St. home of John Koegler.

CAIRN RE-VISITED

Eighty year-old John Stanton of Centre St. re-visited the Abigail Adams Cairn with his daughter, Mrs. George Hallisey, on the 57th anniversary of the cairn's construction. The Irish born stonemason built the Penn's Hill monument in 1896 for the Adams DAR chapter.

Chapter regent Mrs. Nelson Titus of Squantum wanted something "quick and not fancy," to commemorate the site where Abigail and John Adams watched the Battle of Bunker Hill. At the time, as a stone mason, Stanton was earning $2.25 a day.

Marea Giaquinta Glad To Be Back At NQHS

Marea Giaquinta, North Quincy High School class of 1950, will celebrate her golden reunion this summer with her fellow mid-century classmates.

But for Giaquinta, not all memories of the school will be so distant.

After a long and successful career in broadcasting, Giaquinta returned to North Quincy High in 1999 as a paraprofessional, welcoming visitors at the school's main entrance and helping manage traffic flow for the school.

MAREA GIAQUINTA

"I've done a complete circle and I'm so glad my life has brought me back to North Quincy High," Giaquinta said. "The kids can be very special."

After graduation from NQHS, Giaquinta went on to graduate from the Cambridge School of Radio and TV Broadcasting. She landed a job as traffic director for the original WHDH-Radio, which would eventually become WCVB-TV in 1972, and managed the commercial and broadcast logs for the station. "I loved it," Giaquinta says of the experience. "When the station went to TV, it was a whole new area to apply my talents."

But a whole new challenge presented itself in the late 70's when Giaquinta, as traffic manager, became part of a pre-start team to create WXNE-25 TV, then owned by Pat Robertson of 700 Club fame. "We put a whole new station together from scratch," Giaquinta says proudly.

Giaquinta became part of pre-start teams for two other television stations, one of which is no longer on the air and the other, WQTU-68, where she served as traffic manager for seven years.

"It was a great opportunity," Giaquinta said. "I brought in as many younger people as I could and tried to teach them as much as possible. I will always be extremely proud of that and the broadcasting industry in general. It's one heck of a business to be in."

And the opportunity to be in broadcasting, Giaquinta says, got its start right at North Quincy High. Said Giaquinta:

"I was allowed to give the daily announcements my senior year. I was terrible but I thought I was terrific and it got me to go forward with my career."

Giaquinta is a lifelong North Quincy resident who has also worked with Alzheimer's patients and owned two businesses in the city.

Giaquinta is a member of the NQHS Class of 1950 Reunion Committee, which will hold a 3-day gala celebration June 22, 23, and 24. Events will include a social at the Squantum Yacht Club, a reunion banquet at the Quincy Elks Hall, and a tour of Boston Harbor.

"It will be an unforgettable three days," Giaquinta said.

QUINCY RESIDENTS Theresa Wong (left) and Aingoc Ho Thy and have been awarded full-tuition, four-year scholarships to Boston University as part of the University's Boston Public High School Scholarship Program. Wong, a graduate of Boston Latin School, is the daughter of Kim Seck and Helen Wong of North Bayfield Rd., and Thy, a graduate of John D. O'Bryant High School, is the daughter of Toan Ho Ba and Cui Truong Thi of Willet St.

Aldo Della Chiesa Exhibit Continues Through Aug. 26

THE OPENING OF the exhibit of Aldo Della Chiesa's paintings at the Quincy Historical Society Museum was a proud and happy night for his wife, Mrs. Florence Della Chiesa, and son, WGBH's Ron Della Chiesa.

QUINCY HISTORICAL SOCIETY President Joyce Baker and Ron Della Chiesa had good reason to smile with the large turnout for the opening of the exhibit of his father Aldo Della Chiesa's paintings at the Historical Society Museum.

CITY COUNCILLOR and former Mayor Frank McCauley, who spoke at the annual meeting and opening; his daughter, Jennifer Logue and Ron Della Chiesa whose father served as Ward 3 city councillor and his uncle, Amelio Della Chiesa, as mayor.

WGBH PERSONALITY Ron Della Chiesa and his wife, Joyce, admire a portrait entitled "Jennie" at the opening of the exhibit of the paintings of his father, the late Aldo Della Chiesa, at the Quincy Historical Society Museum, Adams Academy, 8 Adams St. The exhibit, which opened at the Historical Society's annual meeting, will continue through Aug. 26. Hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. For Saturday hours, call 617-773-1144.

ARCHITECT JIM EDWARDS (center) was presented the William A. O'Connell Award at the annual meeting for his volunteer work as head of the Quincy Historical Society's Building Committee. Making the presentation are Joyce Baker, president of the Historical Society and City Council President Paul Harold, a member of the board of directors and a past recipient of the award, named for the late president of the Historical Society. Edwards' work includes the design of the new handicapped access ramp.

AMONG THOSE ATTENDING the opening were Quincy Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth, WBZ-TV political analyst John Henning and Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

Newton Task Force Drafts Ordinance For Oversized Vehicles

A special task force formed by Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton has prepared a draft of an ordinance to restrict oversized vehicles on public streets.

Newton's task force consisted of members of various departments, including the police chief, the city solicitor, the building inspector, and a member of the mayor's office.

"The main concern of this ordinance is to prevent some vehicles from just dwarfing a neighborhood street," Newton said. "It's a quality of life issue."

Newton said the ordinance, if approved, would erase any gray area in the law but would still leave the final decision to the police officer on the street.

As the ordinance stands now, Newton said, an officer can only remove an oversized vehicle if it is stalling traffic.

The draft, currently in the Ordinance Committee of the City Council, limits parking access for the following vehicles:

A commercial bus; a tractor-trailer truck; a semi-trailer truck; a trailer, including but not limited to those used for the transport of boats, motorcycles, construction equipment, landscaping equipment and materials; an auto home, camper, or mobile home; a taxi; an ambulance.

A hearse; a lively vehicle; a bus, motor bus, school bus, or school pupil transport vehicle; and a commercial vehicle, meaning any vehicle which is larger than a one-ton vehicle, any vehicle which has five or more wheels on the ground, a cargo van, a tow truck or flatbed used for the transport of vehicles, any vehicle not used exclusively for personal or commuting purposes, and/or any vehicle used for hire or in connection with any employment or business to transport persons, employees or customers, goods, wares, or merchandise."

Council President Paul Harold praised Newton for bringing so many groups together to solve a complex problem. "This (the ordinance) is a tool which can be used by the whole city," Harold said.

Newton said he would call a public hearing on the issue at a later date and welcomed input during what he called "the fine tuning stage."

City Budget Approved At $183 Million

Councillor Daniel Raymondi, author of the raise proposal, inquired from Keenan why weekend drafts mailed to the council included the raises but the financial order submitted to the clerk last Monday did not. Keenan responded that there was no official change since the mailings were drafts only and that the order actually submitted "conforms to the budget

(i.e., no pay raises)."

When Raymondi questioned Keenan further as to reports that the mayor would appropriate the raises in the fall, Keenan refused to comment, saying he could not speak for the mayor and was unsure as to Raymondi's sources. He did emphatically repeat, however, that it was the mayor's prerogative, and only the mayor's, when, where, and if any funds were appropriated.

Councillor Stephen Durkin praised McCauley's handling of the budget process, calling it "efficient and diligent."

According to McCauley, five budget sessions totaling seven hours and 15 minutes were held. Twelve cuts totaling $125,000 were proposed; seven cuts totaling $45,900, including $2,000 cuts in councillor pay raises, were approved.

Playing It Safe

By CHRISTINE SCHUSTER
President and CEO
Quincy Medical Center

Everyone remembers being a child, excited by the last days of school and the anticipation of uninterrupted days on the beach, at the pool, the playground or billfold, and one bicycles.

I also remember my parents hovering over me and my friends, pleading with us to play it safe. Now with a child of my own, and an entire community of children to consider, I think about the precautions we all need to take to keep our children out of harms way all summer long.

Nearly one-fourth of Americans children will require professional medical treatment for an injury this year. Most of those injuries are preventable, and most happen in the summer months. At Quincy Medical Center alone, we saw over 3,000 children in our emergency room last year.

From learning about pool safety to preventing sports injuries, to being smart about exposure to sun, and even remembering to check for ticks at the end of the day, brushing up on prevention and protection is a smart way for all of us to start the season. With that in mind, Quincy Medical Center is sponsoring our 10th annual Children's Safety Day this Saturday, with exhibits that make learning about safety fun for children and useful for parents. More than 400 children and their families joined us last year, and we hope to see even more of our neighbors this weekend.

Our exhibits re-enforce three basic themes.

•Parents have an important role to play in keeping their children safe and out of hospital emergency room.

•At Quincy Medical Center, we care about our children and, would like to be around them, but if you and we can help it, we would rather not meet them in our emergency room.

•Children will handle emergency medical care with more ease far less trauma if they get a glimpse of emergency personnel and their equipment under stress-free circumstances.

This coming Saturday, continuing a 10-year tradition, Quincy Medical Center will host Children's Safety Day to give children and their parents the tools they need to play it safe this summer--and a chance to see the resources that our community pulls together to support Quincy families in the event of emergency. We are delighted that Saturday's program will involve exhibits staffed by a dozen local organizations, including ambulance and fire engine tours, an exhibit on the dangers of juvenile fire setting, healthy eating information, bicycle safety instructions, and pediatric eye safety.

St. Joseph's School Collects Nearly 4,000 Books For East Boston Students

Students, staff and parents of St. Joseph's School in Quincy have collected almost 4,000 books as a gift to 370 students of the Donald McKay School and 279 students of the James Otis School, both in East Boston.

Each K-3 grade student at the East Boston schools will receive five books to take home and keep with the remaining books donated to the school libraries as part of the state's Spread the Word Program.

The program, initiated in 1995 by then Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci and his wife, Jan, and supported by current Lt. Gov. Jane Swift, gives books to children who have few books at home, from children and others who no longer need the books.

This year's program, coordinated by the Massachusetts Department of Education, far exceeded the annual goal of 60,000 books to 12,000 students when the Disney Corporation donated almost a quarter of a million books to the program.

"Students need to read well if they are to become successful in school," said Massachusetts Education Commissioner David P. Driscoll. "Children who own books and read them at home are more likely to become proficient readers."

Lisa Marasolo, principal at St. Joseph's School, was the Quincy coordinator of the successful book drive for Spread the Word, recruiting additional help from Tufts Health Plan.

John Mayall Headliner 8th Annual City Of Presidents Quincy Blues Festival June 25

The 8th annual City of Presidents Quincy Blues Festival will take place Sunday, June 25 at Quincy's Veterans Stadium, Hancock St., from noon to 7 p.m.

The festival will feature one of the world's premier names, John Mayall and the Bluesbreakers. A British legend, he has tutored some of the best including Eric Clapton, Coco Montoya and Mick Fleetwood. Mayall will be joined at the festival by Mighty Sam McClain, The James Montgomery Band, Brian Templeton, Mike Welch, Matt Woodburn, Cheryl Arena and local luminaries Steve Murphy & the YardRockers and Ricky "King" Russell.

Emcees will be W.C. Handy Award Winner, Holly Harris from WBOS and Peter Black from WATD.

The music festival begins at noon with tickets affordably priced at $15 at the gate, $12 in advance, and $2 for children under 16. Children under six will be admitted free. The day also features the spectacular "Presidential Juried Photography and Art Show" and draws photography, water color and oil pieces from local artists. A multi-cultural food bazaar is also a part of the day.

A number of companies are sponsoring the event led by State Street Corporation of Boston.

The Quincy Blues Festival is recognized as one of the region's top rated cultural gatherings. It is a no-alcohol, family day featuring some of the best musical performers in New England and the East.

In 1995 an Art & Photography show was added and became an instant success. In 1999 a new venue, "The Kids Tent" with a variety of activities and educational attractions, helped to make this a complete family day. The day also features an International Food Bazaar with a wide variety of foods to sample from throughout the world.

In 1998, the Quincy Blues Festival attracted a number of sponsoring organizations, enabling the producers to keep ticket prices at an affordable level for families and provide a contribution to one of the region's non-profit organizations. In 1998 the beneficiary was The Marie A. Curry Breast Cancer Fund at Quincy Medical Center and last year's recipient was The Thomas Crane Public Library Foundation and Building Fund.

This year, the first presidential election year of the new millennium, the recipient will be Kids Voting Massachusetts, Inc. Kids Voting Massachusetts, a 501(c)(3) organization and its parent, Kids Voting USA, help to educate and encourage future voters to use the power of their vote in an informed and intelligent decision making process.

Beginning at the kindergarten level and through grade 12 in public and private schools, young people go to the same polling place as their parents and cast their vote using the same process as their adult counterparts. Social Studies teachers in the classroom follow a national curriculum to assure an unbiased and informed study guide. Kids

Voting is established in 40 states throughout the nation, and it has had a profound impact on adult voter registration.

Kids Voting Massachusetts began in Quincy, the "City of Presidents," and has spread to other communities such as Plymouth, "America's Hometown." It now reaches to Springfield and Cape Cod.

This year's Blues Festival is expected to draw 8,000 to 10,000 fans from Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire and scattered others from across the country. Ranging from preschool to teens to adults to seniors, the festival continues to cut across a wide spectrum of interests. This year, with Kids Voting as a partner, it is estimated another level of interests will magnify the day.

Once again it is the goal of the organizers to keep the ticket prices at a level that is affordable for families. Joe Hajjar, festival producer, said, "we want the festival to be a wholesome atmosphere for families where they can come here together and appreciate a style of music that truly crosses all age barriers. Our children are the future and music is the bridge."

Since its inception, Hajjar, owner of the award-winning Yard Rock Blues Club in Quincy, has been the producer and sponsor of the show. Together with the festival many of the country's best musicians got their start at the Yard Rock. Hajjar is President of Yard Rock Promotions, which provides event and music productions throughout New England.

Urged To 'Be Like Ants'

290 Graduate From Quincy College

Christine Schuster, the new chief executive of the Quincy Medical Center, told the 290 graduates of Quincy College Saturday that tenacity is one of the ingredients in the recipe for success.

"Be like an ant," she urged them in her commencement address. "Have you ever tried to stop an ant? The ant will never turn around and walk away."

Interim President Sean L. Barry pointed out to the graduates that they are unlike the alumni of other schools in the hurdles they have surmounted to get a college education.

"You sacrificed more than other students," he said, noting that many had had to work more than one job to raise their tuition. "Many of our Quincy College students are likely to be the first in their families to earn a college degree."

Theresa M. Lord-Piatelli, chairman of the Board of Governors, held out the graduates as shining examples for future students in overcoming obstacles.

"You are the beacon to show others who don't know that they can go on and do something more," she said. "You must pass on the message that what you have done, others can, too."

Crime Watch For Business How To Spot, Prevent Shoplifting

Shoplifting Preventive Measures:

- Use convex mirrors, TV scanners . . . uniformed security patrolmen. Have an inter-store telephone system with phones placed strategically within the department for the use of security personnel.
 - Greet each person who enters. Let him know you are aware of his presence. Do not expect clerks to take care of more customers than they can handle.
 - All display counters should be low enough so as to enable security and clerks to maintain a watch from a central vantage point.
 - Glue small packages, such as razorblades to oversized cards.
 - Post signs which stage the store's policy of handling shoplifters, especially near items which are easy to conceal.
 - Require that items be checked in and returned from fitting rooms before others enter.
 - Keep all areas of the store well lit.
 - Television, radio, and video supplies should have their demonstrators hooked up so that if a plug is pulled it will set off a buzzer notifying the sales personnel that one of the sets has been unplugged.
 - Staple bags of merchandise that have been paid for, to prevent customers from stuffing them with other things that have not been purchased.
 - Small items displayed on stands should be arranged so that they must be unhooked in order to be removed.
 - Keep easily removable merchandise protected, locked in counter cases whenever possible.
 - Keep expensive items away from entrances.
 - Do not leave price marking devices unattended.

Coming In 2003 -- A Clean, Effective Hybrid-Electric SUV

Thanks to new technology, a fuel efficient and clean operating sport utility vehicle is just around the corner.

According to Neil Ressler, vice president, Research and Vehicle Technology, Ford Motor Company, a hybrid-electric Ford Escape is being designed to be the cleanest, most fuel efficient sport utility on the planet when it debuts in 2003. The SUV is projected to achieve about 40 miles per gallon, even in stop-and-go urban driving, yet will deliver acceleration comparable to the V-6 Escape. Ford is the first automaker to announce production plans for a hybrid-electric powered sport utility vehicle.

The Ford Escape HEV will feature an electric drivetrain to augment its fuel-efficient four-cylinder gasoline engine. With regenerative braking and nearly instantaneous hard-stop capability, the hybrid-electric SUV will be especially fuel efficient in the city. It will be capable of being driven more than 500 miles on a single tank of gasoline.

"We're applying advanced hybrid technology to the heart of the American market: the highly popular sport utility vehicle," Ressler adds.

The Escape HEV will feature an advanced regenerative braking system which recaptures energy in the form of electricity when the vehicle is being braked; the electrical energy is stored in the battery for future use. A sophisticated motor-generator saves fuel by shutting down the engine when the vehicle is coasting or stopped, restarting it almost instantaneously when the driver steps on the accelerator pedal. These and other related technologies have been developed and proved out in Ford's P2000 research program.

The new HEV is being designed to operate more cleanly than government regulations require. In fact, it will qualify as a Super Ultra Low Emissions Vehicle (SULEV) under California standards. It also will meet Stage IV emissions requirements in Europe before they become mandatory in the 2005 model year.

With a few automakers have introduced small, low-volume hybrid-electric cars, Ford is introducing its first HEV as a family-sized sport utility to increase mass customer appeal. The hybrid-electric powertrain also has been developed with additional applications and vehicles in mind to expand the potential impact of the environmentally responsible technology.

CHANGING PERCEPTIONS

Many automotive experts agree that changing the engine oil regularly is the single most important maintenance procedure that vehicle owners can perform. And, according to a survey conducted by one oil company, some 77 percent of the 1,000 adult drivers polled indicated that they change their oil regularly. The survey went on to show that the average frequency for changes is 3,962 miles. Half of those surveyed change the oil as often as their vehicle's manufacturer suggests, while 21 percent change it more often. And although so many have a grasp of the importance of regular oil changes, 59% of the drivers polled mistakenly believe that the engine "uses up" oil in the same way it uses gasoline.

A regular checkup, coupled with regularly scheduled maintenance such as oil changes, can greatly extend the life of your car. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO we want you to be informed about everything in your car whether or not your car is leased. Our friendly, ASE Certified professional service staff here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550) will gladly answer all your questions. Hours: Mon-Fri, 6am-9pm, Sat 7am-9pm, Sun 9am-5pm. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Count on us for propane for grills, converted vehicles and motor homes.

HINT: According to the survey mentioned above, 45 percent of the drivers polled did not know that engine oil cleans and removes dirt and other contaminants from inside the engine.

Insects 'Bugging' Your Windshield?

If you feel like every bug on the highway has hit your windshield, you'll be happy to know that relief is in sight.

Today's advanced rain repellent glass treatments make cleaning insects and other contaminants -- like tree sap and dirt -- from your windshield easier, according to PPG Industries, North America's largest manufacturer of glass and flat glass products, and developer of Aquapel® Glass Treatment.

Improved driving vision is a primary benefit of Aquapel, which was derived from the advanced chemistry used in PPG's aviation glass business. The treatment repels rain, reduces glare, and eases the removal of bugs, tree sap, road dirt, ice and snow from auto glass. Unlike silicone-based treatments, Aquapel is professional installed and lasts for months under normal driving conditions.

You can have Aquapel Glass Treatment applied quickly and inexpensively at fast lube centers, car dealerships, auto service and detail centers nationwide. Ask your automotive service professional about Aquapel, or visit the web site at www.aquapel.com.

Assistance Dog Gives Her Control Of Her Life

Almost two years ago, Nancy Gorman's 11-year-old dog "Beatrice" was struck by a car.

The dog recovered, but Gorman almost didn't.

That's because Gorman, who grew up in Merrymount and is a 1981 graduate of North Quincy High School, has had Quadruplegia CP since birth and relied on Beatrice, a highly-trained Assistance Dog, for the help necessary to live independently in her Boston apartment.

The now-injured Beatrice became a pet only and Gorman, confined to a wheelchair and overcome at the prospect of losing control of her life, spiraled into a long-term depression which saw her lose 35 pounds but which has since been controlled with ongoing treatment.

"The thought of losing Beatrice was just too much," said Gorman.

Gorman was put in touch with the National Education for Assistance Dog Service (NEADS), a non-profit organization in West Boylston.

After a successful interview, which Gorman attributes to "kismet" because it fell upon her birthday, NEADS matched her with a two-year old Golden Retriever named "Daisy" and the two underwent a two-week training program. Both are adjusting well to each other and Daisy has allowed Gorman to retain her much valued autonomy.

Unfortunately, that autonomy comes with a hefty price tag: $6,300.

"I almost died when I saw the cost for a new dog," said Gorman, who lives on a fixed income. "I was less than hopeful, but that's when the people of Quincy stepped forward."

Gorman's Quincy roots run deep. She is the niece of both Quincy Fire Chief Thomas Gorman and Quincy Firefighter Jack Menz, as well as the granddaughter of former Quincy Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, Sr. Her brother, Daniel Gorman, Jr., is a lieutenant with the QFD. She also has two other brothers, Matthew Gorman of Virginia Rd. and Christopher Gorman, who lives with his wife Theresa in Squantum.

She is the daughter of Daniel Gorman and Janet Corbin-Gorman of Quincy, who were helped by the community several years ago after a terrible July 4 fire destroyed their home at 45 Neponset Rd.

"My dad said the family (including the Corbin side) would help and the community would help, and they did," Gorman said. "I started a letter writing campaign and the money started pouring in, especially from Neponset Rd. I was just so impressed."

"Most of it came from the Quincy community, from the smallest donations to hundreds of dollars, and I won't ever be able to thank them," she said, although she has sent hand-written thank-you notes to every contributor.

Gorman's personal contribution was supposed to be $300 but she gave $360 -- "as much as I could" -- and the community raised $3,400. That leaves roughly $2,500 that Gorman still needs to pay for Daisy and, although she's not worried anyone will take away her dog (NEADS: "This student fee can be paid over time and does not need to be paid in-full when the student receives the dog), she wants to pay her debts. "It's a commitment. I want to honor it," Gorman said.

And just what makes Daisy, and Beatrice before her, so expensive and so invaluable to the lives of folks like Gorman?

Daisy lets Gorman function independently by helping her on and off buses and subways, opening doors, retrieving mail, turning on and off lights, removing coats, fetching food from the refrigerator and clothes from the dryer, retrieving the phone, and pressing Gorman's help-call button in times of emergency.

Daisy has also been trained to bark an alert in case of danger, although she has not been trained to attack.

"I'm the boss and she responds instantly because she's been trained that my life may depend on it," said Gorman.

Gorman gave the example of Daisy pressing her body against the couch to hold Gorman's foot in place, enabling Gorman to put on her sock, an activity most people take for granted.

Said Gorman:

"If I didn't have Daisy, I wouldn't be able to live independently. When you're severely disabled, you're never in charge of anything, even the simplest activities like going to the bathroom or taking a nap. Beatrice and Daisy change that. It's opened up a whole new world."

Gorman is a graduate of the University of Massachusetts-Amherst and is a former teacher. She has also taken courses at UCLA and the Harvard Extension School.

Gorman couldn't say enough about her new companion and the NEADS program in general. "They do incredible work," she said.

Those wishing to make a contribution on behalf of Gorman and Daisy should make checks payable to: NEADS, P.O. Box 213, West Boylston, MA, 01583, Attn: Maureen, taking special care to specify "designated for Nancy Gorman" on the check or the funds will be placed in the organization's general fund.

NANCY GORMAN, native of Merrymount and 1981 graduate of North Quincy High School, gets a hug from 'Daisy,' her new Assistance Dog made possible by the NEADS program of West Boylston. "It's only been a couple of weeks but the bond is very close," said Gorman. Behind them is Dave, personalized trainer for both Gorman and Daisy.

Celebrating Flag Day, Quincy, U.S.A. Style

QUINCY SON AND Grand Marshal Air Force Brig. General Ronald Rand marches with Mayor James Sheets at the start of the Flag Day Parade Saturday. Speaking later at Pageant Field, Rand, a Quincy High School graduate, said of the U.S. flag: "There is no symbol like it anywhere else in the world... the guarantee of liberty and freedom."

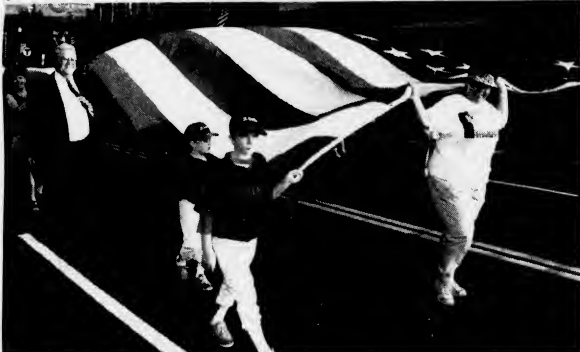

THE 49TH ANNUAL Flag Day Parade proceeds along Hancock St. enroute to Pageant Field in this view from Furnace Brook Parkway. The parade attracted a crowd estimated at more than 10,000 and the biggest of the 49 years. (Quincy Sun Photos)

YOUNGSTERS FROM THE Quincy Youth Girls Softball League, each with a flag to wave, wait to join in the parade lineup. Some 2,500 youngsters -- all with flags -- took part in the parade.

THE BETSY ROSS float, decorated and sponsored by the Quincy Millennium Committee, was an appropriate standout feature of the Flag Day Parade.

TOM KOCH (left) presented the Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award named after his late father, Richard J. Koch, to Quincy Atty. George Burke, for his significant contributions to the city's youth. Burke said that Richard Koch "was perhaps the most wonderful man I ever met." He is holding a Koch Club jacket from 1959, the year he and teammates won the Massachusetts semi-pro basketball championship.

OLD GLORY is buffeted by a strong wind suspended between the aerials of Quincy and Boston fire departments ladder trucks.

FLAGS OF DECEASED veterans loaned by their families decorate this solemn float in tribute to "Our Beloved Veterans."

KOCH CLUB YOUNGSTERS wave their flags in the parade, a 49-year tradition.

SOME OF THE more than 10,000 spectators who turned out for the parade show their approval at Hancock St. and Merrymount Parkway.

Citizens Bank Donates $7,000 To Trans Van Program

Citizens Bank kicked off its three-year, $21,000 commitment to the city's Trans Van Program with a $7,000 check accepted by the City Council last Monday.

The funds, said Thomas Clasby, director of the Quincy Council on Aging, will go towards the purchase of a new vehicle for the program, which provides seniors with much needed transportation for such things as errands, shopping, medical appointments, or just visiting with friends.

"I am very grateful to the good people of Citizens," said Clasby, who pointed out that much of the credit for the agreement belonged to his predecessor, current North Quincy Athletic Director Brian Buckley.

In return for the funds, Citizens Bank has been allowed to display a small logo on the van in recognition of their donation.

Clasby, the city's recently appointed COA director, is a former manager of the Trans Van program himself.

Responsible Employer Ordinance Passes Easily

With a unanimous vote last week, the City Council adopted a "Responsible Employer Ordinance" which re-affirms a similar executive order passed by Mayor James Sheets in 1998.

The REO applies to all contractors working on city projects over $100,000 or sub-contractors working on projects over $25,000.

The ordinance guarantees contractors pay prevailing wages, properly identify employees and train them through apprentice programs, and provide such benefits as medical coverage, accident insurance, and workmen's compensation.

It also stipulates that contractors will make a "best faith" effort to hire Quincy residents and work in "harmony" with all other contractors, meaning the presence of one sub-contractor cannot result in the picketing, work stoppage, or any similar labor demonstration by another.

The lion's share of discussion on the issue took place at the council's May 22 meeting and was marked by consensus from both union and non-union representatives.

100,000 people on the South Shore are now benefiting from a recent transfusion.

All Systems Go? Check Before You Move In

When shopping for a new home, there are many points to consider besides location, square footage and number of rooms.

These include:

- Energy usage. In a newly built home, all the appliances are new, so energy usage information should be readily available. Make sure that dishwashers, refrigerators, washing machines and air conditioners use energy efficiently--it will save you money in the long run.
- Settling. New homes have a tendency to shift in the ground, so keep an eye out for cracks in the foundation. When doing a walk-through, place a pencil on the floor. If it rolls, the house may be uneven, which could lead to numerous problems if not corrected immediately.

- Water usage. Many areas are adding municipal water and sewage systems as new developments are built, putting unprecedented demands on water tables even in states where water supply has not traditionally been a problem.

In addition, the typical home wastes more than 8,000 gallons of water per year as residents wait for hot water in the sink, bathtub or shower. Fortunately, as new homes are built, contracts can stem the tide of wasted water with the help of a new kind of hot water pump.

The pump recirculates water through the water heater so that water will be hot upon turning on the tap. In a new home, such a pump can be installed in about two hours, and generally costs between $500 and $800.

Hot water recirculation (HWR) pumps from Grundfos not only make hot water instantly available at sinks, appliances and bathroom faucets, they can also improve the operating efficiency and effectiveness of washing machines and dishwashers, eliminating the lag time from the hot water heater to the appliance.

HWR pumps can also be set with a 24-hour timer to produce hot water at peak demand times, such as early morning and in the evening.

Closing Costs Explained

There are many costs involved in "closing" on your home. Title insurance is one closing cost item that is very important, and yet not fully understood.

There are two types of title insurance--coverage that protects the lender for the amount of the mortgage, and coverage that protects the buyer's equity in the property. Both you and your lender will want the security offered by title insurance. Why?

Title agents search public records to determine who has owned any piece of property, but these records may not reflect irregularities that are almost impossible to find. Here are some examples: an unauthorized seller forges the deed to the house/property; an unknown, but rightful heir to the property shows up after the sale to claim ownership; conflicts arise over a will from a deceased owner; or a land survey showing the boundaries of your property is incorrect.

For a one-time charge at closing, title insurance will safeguard the buyer against problems including those even an exhaustive search will not reveal.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

ALS Awareness Month Highlights Research Findings And Treatments

ALS is not some new type of drug on the market, not is it a brand name. Rather, ALS is one of 40 muscular dystrophies affecting thousands of people across the country.

More commonly referred to as Lou Gehrig's disease, Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis is being met by a force of researchers, scientists and doctors from the Muscular Dystrophy Association in an effort to expand the search for possible causes, cures or treatments.

MDA's ALS Awareness Month rallies additional support from the public by disseminating information about procedures that are currently underway to defeat neuromuscular disease. ALS, unlike early-age onset muscular dystrophies, can strike adults between the ages 35 to 65. It is a progressive disease that attacks specialized nerve cells called motor neurons, which control the movement of voluntary muscles.

ALS usually affects all of the body's muscles within three to five years from the onset of the disease. In its final stages, total paralysis occurs.

Since its start in 1950, MDA has become one of the world's leading sponsors of ALS research and medical services. The voluntary health agency presently maintains 20 ALS Research and Clinical Care centers that strive to obtain the disorder's cause, and, ultimately, cure.

If you also add the network of over 230 hospital-affiliated clinics dedicated to helping people with ALS and 39 other neuromuscular diseases, then it becomes evident that the steps toward initial awareness will begin to accomplish concrete hope.

And they have. In 1993, MDA investigators found a gene on chromosome 21 that, when flawed, can lead to ALS. Not only does this evidence help ALS patients who contain this gene flaw, but researchers also believe it may lead to significant breakthroughs for the non-genetic form. In fact, only 10 percent of those who develop ALS have a family history of the disorder.

"Locating the causes behind ALS is a huge step in the direction toward finding its cure," said MDA's Boston Regional Director MaryBeth Matte. "While Lou Gehrig brought the debilitating disorder to the forefront of the medical arena, it is crucial that we continue to make advances in the cure and treatment areas."

In 1995, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration approved the MDA-funded drug, riluzole, for the treatment of ALS. Riluzole partially blocks glutamate, a natural central nervous system chemical. The drug extends survival time of ALS patients by about three months.

There are also other drugs that can control involuntary muscle twitching, disabling cramps and excessive saliva. Patients who begin to experience difficulty breathing often utilize respirators to ease the process.

The Muscular Dystrophy Association's comprehensive research and services produce ongoing hope for ALS patients, family members and friends. MDA is a not-for-profit health organization that provides diagnostic and follow-up care, assistance with wheelchair purchases, summer camps, support groups and other various services.

Noble Named Head Football Coach At Quincy High

By CHRIS POISSON

Bob Noble of Quincy has been named the head coach of the Quincy High School football team.

Noble was informed of the decision last Thursday afternoon by School Superintendent Eugene Creedon.

"It's been a career-long goal of mine," Noble said. "It's something I've always wanted to do and I couldn't be more thankful. I appreciate the confidence they have in me and I'll do my best for them, and for the kids. That's who you really do it for."

Noble spent 14 years as an assistant coach and last season he served as the interim coach when Peter Chella stepped down after four years to become the assistant principal at Point-Webster. After the season, the plan was to conduct interviews for a head coach.

That plan, however, took a little longer than expected. Noble waited 196 days before finding out he would return to the sideline.

"There were times when it was kind of tough," Noble said. "Personally, it can wear on you. I've always felt I was the head coach. It feels good to know that I'm hired as a legitimate coach as opposed to interim."

Last season, the Presidents went 0-10 before taking the season finale, a 21-13 triumph over North Quincy in the Thanksgiving Day game. This season may be just as tough as the team graduated its backfield and star quarterback. But the program can't be turned around in one year, or two years.

"We installed a plan a year ago and we'll continue with it, the football aspect of building a program," Noble said. "We know what we want to do. And we're going to try to win some football games."

In addition to building a winning team, Noble will also emphasize academics.

"They're students first," Noble said. "We're going to try to draw a closer tie with the faculty: invest them in the football program to make sure the kids are doing what they're supposed to be doing."

"We want to develop well-rounded individuals," he added. "We're going to contribute in help making individuals in the football program well-rounded — academically, athletically and socially."

The team was recently invited to New York to play Fordham Prep, one of New York's Jesuit high schools.

New Look, League For Quincy Granite

The Quincy Granite semi-professional football team created a new look for itself in the off-season. Not only did Quincy adopt the Green Bay Packers logo for its helmets, it also switched leagues.

The Granite has left the New England Football League to join the Eastern Football League, which is celebrating its 30th anniversary.

Quincy will kick off its second season Saturday, July 8 against the Boston Cowboys at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"It's a step up for us," said David Harris, vice president and player. "We'll get to test waters in another league. The quality of football is different. It's a little more professional."

Quincy will take on the Springfield Blitz Saturday, June 24 in a controlled scrimmage.

In its rookie campaign Quincy finished 7-3, beating the Boston Bandits in the playoffs before bowing out in the division championship to the Mass Havoc, which has also joined the 16-team EFL.

The Granite is still looking for players. If interested, attend a practice or call the team line at (617) 471-1158. Practices are held Mondays and Wednesdays at 6:30 p.m. at Cavanaugh Field.

For more information about the team, visit its official website at www.eteamz.com/granite.

COACHES VS. CANCER program raised $3,181 this past basketball season for the American Cancer Society. From the left, Brian Buckley, MBCA clinic chairperson; Mary Sheppard, American Cancer Society representative; John Franceschini, MBCA executive director.

Buckley, Franceschini Coaches Vs. Cancer Directors

The Massachusetts Basketball Coaches Association (MBCA) announces its successful affiliation with the Coaches vs. Cancer program this past basketball season.

Established by the National Association of Basketball Coaches and the American Cancer Society, the MBCA designated Jan. 24-28 as MBCA/Coaches vs. Cancer Week across the state. Massachusetts became only the third high school basketball association in the United States to take part in the Coaches vs. Cancer program.

MBCA coaches, along with their high school boys and girls basketball teams and their local high school communities, raised $3,181 for the American Cancer Society.

John Franceschini, MBCA director and Quincy High School boys basketball coach, and Brian Buckley, MBCA clinic chairperson and North Quincy High School athletic director, served as MBCA Coaches vs. Cancer state directors.

Coaches vs. Cancer is a partnership dedicated to reducing the risk of cancer in youth, using fan contributions to assist the research, patient services, advocacy and prevention programs of the American Cancer Society. The program was established in 1993 as an alliance of the National Association of Basketball Coaches and the American Cancer Society, and endorsed in 1995 by the Women's Basketball Coaches Association.

Quincy's Jene Morriset Jumping To New Heights

Jene Washington Morriset had never high jumped before the Quincy High School track indoor season.

Since then, he has jumped his way to new heights. And he is only a freshman.

Morriset, who has the best recorded high jump for a freshman in New England at 6'4", simply tore apart the Old Colony League this season. He made the OCL All-Star teams for both the indoor and outdoor seasons, and he captured the OCL high jump championship after going undefeated in the league during the season.

Morriset won the State freshman-sophomore meet at Carver with a 6'2" performance. He finished sixth at the State Coaches meet, second at the State Meet Class "B" and seventh at the All-State Meet.

"In my 10 years of coaching I have never seen such talent from a freshman," said coach Scott King. "With the proper direction I can honestly say that Jene has the potential to be a seven-foot high jumper. An athlete like Jene only comes around once or twice in a coaching career. I'm excited to see Jene do well and I'm looking forward to coaching him for the next three years."

JENE WASHINGTON MORRISET, only a freshman, finished as the Old Colony League's high jump champion after going undefeated during the season.

"It's a pleasure to have Jene on our team," King added. "He's not only a great athlete, but a terrific student and person."

Morrisette Opens With Two Wins

By CHRIS POISSON

Behind strong pitching, the Morrisette American Legion baseball team opened the 2000 season with two straight wins.

Morrisette knocked off Quincy #95, 8-2, last Thursday and Sunday night it blanked Cohasset, 3-0, at Adams Field. Last Wednesday's game against Canton was rained out and will be made up at a later date.

Yesterday (Wednesday) it hosted Canton and today (Thursday) it travels to Braintree for a 7:30 p.m. game.

In the season opener against Quincy, Rob Celata turned in a masterful 17-strikeout performance to pick up the win. He allowed two runs on eight hits and only gave up one walk in seven innings.

John Lupo started for Quincy and pitched well before running into trouble in the fourth and fifth innings when Morrisette scored three runs in both frames.

"It was a well played game," said coach Ray Cattaneo. It was a tight game. They were leading 2-1 after four innings and then we got to them."

Keith Doherty (4 for 4, 2 runs, RBI) and Chris Doherty (2 for 4, 2 triples, 2 RBIs) powered the offense. Joe Flynn (2 doubles), T.J. Bell (2 for 3, RBI) and Celata (2 for 4, triple) also contributed.

For Quincy, Chris Walsh went 4 for 4 and Brian Deputa went 2 for 4 with two RBIs.

Against Cohasset, Matt McCann tossed a complete-game shutout with seven strikeouts. He yielded only five hits and one walk.

Morrisette left 10 men on base but took advantage of two errors to score three runs in the fifth inning. Adam Goodrich went 3 for 4, Brian Hanley 2 for 4, Celata 2 for 4, and Chris Doherty had an RBI single.

Paul Ahearn Memorial Golf Tournament July 10

The first annual Paul J. Ahearn Memorial Golf Tournament will be held July 10 at the Country Club of Halifax to benefit the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Greater Boston (MAWFGB).

The tournament will begin at 12 noon with the tee-off at 1:30 p.m. The event will also feature various golfing contests and raffles, such as an "18-hole scramble," a longest drive contest and a hole-in-one contest for a new Buick. There will be a buffet dinner at 6 p.m.

Ahearn, who grew up in Milton and lived in Quincy, died of cancer last July at the age of 33. Short after his death, his family members established the Paul J. Ahearn Memorial Fund and raised $3,500 to the MAWFGB with one condition — that the wish to be granted with their donations be sports-related.

Earlier this year, the first gift from the Paul J. Ahearn Memorial Fund to MAWFGB was used to fulfill a 13-year-old boy's wish to travel to Toronto, Canada with his family to meet his favorite NBA star, Vince

Carter of the Raptors.

"Events like the Paul J. Ahearn Memorial Golf Tournament are very important to our efforts," said Charlotte Beattie, executive director of MAWFGB. "Not only will this event raise important funds to grant children's wishes, it will also help us share our mission with the community. We are honored to be the beneficiary of the Ahearn family's efforts on our behalf."

Anna Madison Takes Strides To Help Cure Breast Cancer

By CHRIS POISSON

Almost two weeks ago, after a hot and humid Friday afternoon, a thunderstorm whipped through New England sending many indoors to weather out the storm.

For Anna Madison of North Quincy, one of about 2,000 participating in the Avon Breast Cancer 3-Day, a fund-raising event held June 2-4, she was evacuated to a fitness center in Denver where she found comfort on a treadmill.

Yes, the 53-year-old African-American woman spent the night on a cozy treadmill.

"It was an orderly evacuation," Madison said. "I was sent to a fitness center in Denver and I sat down on a treadmill and slept there. A window was open a little and there was a cool mist blowing in. It was relaxing."

After walking 20 miles, anything would've been relaxing.

The Avon Breast Cancer 3-Day is a unique outdoor fund-raising event where Madison, along with the other participants, walked 60 miles from Fitchburg to Boston over three days to raise money and awareness for the fight against breast cancer.

"I made it," said Madison, who suffers from rheumatoid arthritis. "The last six miles were very hard and I had a blister. But I had support from my booster and I made it. I will definitely be doing it again next year. And I'll have some of my friends joining me this time."

All proceeds from the event will fund medical research into the possible causes, prevention, treatment and cure of breast cancer; support services for breast cancer patients, survivors and their families; educational seminars; and early detection services.

Since the first Avon Breast Cancer 3-Day in 1998, more than 15,000 walkers have taken part in six Avon 3-Days across the U.S., raising more than $25 million to fight against breast cancer. Five more 3-Day events are scheduled for this year: Chicago (June 16-18), San Francisco (July 28-30), Atlanta (Sept. 22-24), New York (Oct. 13-15) and Los Angeles (Oct. 27-29).

In six weeks, Madison raised $2,500, $700 more than required, from small businesses in Quincy. But raising the money and the actual walk were not the hard parts. It was finding time to train.

"The hardest part was the training," Madison said. "Trying to find the time to train and fit it into your schedule, it was difficult. But if I didn't train I wouldn't have been able to do it. Maybe some of the younger walkers could've, but not an older person like me."

Madison began training in January to prepare for the three-day, 60-mile walk. She would walk once a week, usually on the weekends, from the Dunkin' Donuts in Quantum, along Wollaston Beach, to the General Cinema movie theater in Braintree and back. It took her about eight hours to finish the 20-mile route.

Madison decided to participate in the 3-Day to encourage the African-American community to get involved in the breast cancer cause.

"I decided to walk because of the women I know who have breast cancer and also because African-American women have a high mortality rate of breast cancer, and by participating I'll raise awareness," Madison said.

As one of six sisters, Madison is aware of the chance that one of them may be diagnosed with breast cancer at some point in their lives and realizes the importance of early detection, which is the best chance for successful treatment.

Breast cancer is the most common form of cancer in women in the United States and is the second leading cause of cancer deaths in all women, according to the American Cancer Society and the National Cancer Institute. Every three minutes a woman will be diagnosed with breast cancer, and every 14 minutes one will die from it.

Although no one in her family has died of breast cancer, she said she enjoyed hearing stories from others and being supportive. She recalled a story from one woman who said that her mother and grandmother had both died from breast cancer, and that they were both the oldest of their sisters. That woman, Madison said, feared breast cancer because she was also the oldest of her sisters and she wanted to overcome it.

"I really enjoyed it," Madison said. "Just the people. The kindness. The sharing. Being able to be supportive of someone else. Hearing all the stories from others. It was a very enlightening and sobering experience."

SCOTT D'WARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Sunday is Father's Day. It has a nice sound doesn't it? But you will find that fathers are also known by other names such as Dad, Daddy, Papa and others. They all have special meaning.

This "Letter to Dad" says some of the things that most of us would like to say to our Dads.

"There are so many things I'd like to tell you face to face... I either lack the words or fail to find the time or place... But in this special letter, Dad, you'll find, at least in part... The feelings that the passing years have left within my heart... The memories of childhood days and all that you have done... To make our home a happy place and growing up such fun... I still recall the walks we took; the games we often played... Those confidential chats we had while resting in the shade... This letter comes to thank you, Dad, for needed words of praise... The counsel and the guidance, too, that shaped my grown-up days... No words of mine can tell you, Dad, the things I really feel... But you must know my love for you is lasting, warm and real... You made my world a better place and through the coming years... I keep these memories of you as cherished souvenirs!"...*

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) All you creative Arians need to push yourselves to finish what you started. Leaving others to wind things up could cause things to wind down instead.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The Big Bovine might be pawing the ground impatiently while a certain matter works its way through the system. But the payoff makes the waiting worthwhile.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Aspects favor decisive action, including personal commitments that you might have tried to avoid. No excuses this time. You'll be glad you did what needed doing.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) This is a good time to consider assuming that added responsibility you were unsure of before. You should now feel more confident about that and other matters.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Prudence is the watchword in all financial matters this week. Resist the temptation to jump into new ventures that promise much but might not be able to deliver.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Health matters dominate this period. Consider starting on a lifestyle-changing regimen that could be the best investment you'll ever make in your future.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A change in plans on the job involves some complicated explanations. Be ready with the necessary facts to back up your position. Be strong; you have allies.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Change is favored, but take several small steps toward your goal instead of one giant leap. Spend more time with family, especially the children.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You find yourself in the midst of a contentious situation. The best advice is not to offer any unless you are asked. Keep it general, not personal.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Financial loose ends need to be tied off before they cause your new business venture to unravel. Don't be rushed into acting before you're ready.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new challenge is like a breath of fresh air for the Aquarian who might still be wary of change. It can startle you, but it will also restore you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Get over your hurt feelings and take that too-long-delayed dive back into the social pool where you're sure to reaffirm old relationships and make new ones.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You love merriment and laughter and have the gift for making people feel good about themselves.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper-left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters un- checked figures give you.

Legal Wording Could Affect Gas Pump Proposal

City Clerk John Gillis and then Mayor Frank McCauley.

Concerning amendments to existing P.U.D. permits, Section F of Zoning Chapter 17.12.020 currently reads: "Any change or amendment in the plan or written description shall require the affirmative recommendation of the Planning Board and the approval of all members of the City Council."

The original deadline for the council to hold a public hearing and vote on the gas pump proposal was June 25 but, upon request of Stop & Shop and a 7-0 vote of the council June 6, that deadline was extended to September 25.

Councillor Patrick McDermott, in whose ward the gas station would be built, was unable to attend the meeting but made it known to councillors, including Council President Paul Harold, that he was in favor of granting the extension.

Despite vocal opposition from residents and gas station owners at a recent Planning Board meeting on the proposed amendment, the board approved the amendment by a 3-1 vote.

Many residents, most notably the Montclair Wollaston Neighborhood Association, oppose the station primarily on traffic concerns, arguing that removing 30 of the supermarket's 432 parking spaces to create a busy gas station would only add to the traffic congestion in the neighborhood.

They also oppose the pumps for aesthetic reasons and have rallied support from many of the neighborhood's gas station owners, who fear Stop & Shop's enormous size could allow them to dramatically undercut prices and put local owners out of business.

"We're concerned with the whole proposal," said Montclair/Wollaston Association President Greg Newton. "We won't take the summer off (referring to the postponement). We intend to remain vigilant and oppose the placement of the gas station in our neighborhood."

Newton emphasized that he was not anti-Stop & Shop, noting the considerable good the company brings to the community and even adding that he shops there himself, but said that, on this particular issue, they were wrong not to listen to the wishes of residents.

As for the error in transcription, Newton says he'll believe it when he sees it. Said Newton:

"The P.U.D. process is quite clear under Chapter 17, section F where it says that any change requires the approval of the Planning Board and the approval of all members of the City Council. It's been in place this long and to suggest now that there was an error in transcription, well, something doesn't smell right."

Despite Newton's skepticism, McGrath's expertise is based not only on his role as city solicitor but on his years as a councillor himself, years when he says the amendment was first written.

There were many amendments to ordinances in 1988, McGrath said, and the amendment on this particular zoning law was simply to add Planning Board approval, not require full council approval.

"It was Planning Board approval and 2/3 council approval, not full council approval," McGrath reminded, adding that former City Council President Michael Cheney was chairman of the Ordinance Committee at that time.

McGrath speculated that the error most likely occurred in 1993 when the city's ordinances were updated and improved to a more user-friendly format. "Before then, the books were a mess," McGrath said.

McGrath added that his legal opinion submitted two weeks ago makes clear that full council approval is not needed, although he did say the issue should be clarified before the Stop & Shop public hearings slated for Sept. 25.

"They (the council) ought to change the error before September," McGrath said. "But until then, they can rely on my (written legal) opinion."

Members of the Stop & Shop public relations staff did not return calls requesting an interview.

Millennium Bumper Sticker Debuts

QUINCY'S FIRST NEW Millennium bumper sticker is presented to Mayor James Sheets by Brad Howard, Millennium Committee member; Rhonda Merrill, Director of Tourism and Special Events; Tamara Erdley, who created the bumper sticker as the winning entry in a contest co-sponsored by the city and The Quincy Sun; and Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth. The new millennium begins Jan. 1, 2001.

(Presidential Camera Photos/Dan Cannon)

THE MAYOR immediately attached the bumper sticker to his car. It reads: "QUINCY—THE NEXT MILLENNIUM. A Proud Past...A Strong Future." Residents wishing to obtain a bumper sticker are asked to call the Office of Tourism and Special Events at 376-1296.

Ferry Service From Quincy To Harbor Islands Starts Saturday

Beginning Saturday and continuing through Labor Day, there will be weekend and holiday shuttle transportation to the Boston Harbor Islands from Squantum Point Park in Marina Bay.

The service is coordinated with the efforts of the National Park Service, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the Metropolitan District Commission, the MWRA, and the City of Quincy.

Squantum Point pier is the same place where the current weekday ferries take workers to the Deer Island plant.

Mayor James Sheets welcomed the news. "I think the Harbor Islands are going to be a very important destination for tourists who come to Massachusetts," Sheets

Sheets 'Pleased' With City's Financial Condition

Council Approves $3-M In Transfers To Balance Budget

By CRAIG SALTERS

The City Council Monday night unanimously approved $3,209,138 in year end transfers proposed by Mayor James Sheets to balance the budget by the end of Fiscal Year 2000, which ends June 30.

The transfers essentially cover shortages in some city departments with overages in other departments, plus a $935,056 transfer from the Free Cash account to make up the difference.

"The budget is balanced," said Sheets Tuesday. "I'm very pleased with the financial condition of this city and I think the investment community is as well," referring to the city's recent upgrade in bond rating from an A3 to an A2.

The mayor also added that the city is now categorized as having a "modest debt ratio," which he said has always been one of his goals.

Sheets called a $900,000 transfer from the Free Cash account to the city's Stabilization Fund, which also passed unanimously in a separate vote, as "the most important part of the whole process" because it brings the city's cash reserve to $4 million, half of the mayor's goal of $8 million, or roughly five percent of the annual budget.

"We've never had a reserve before," the mayor said, adding that the five percent of budget "rule of thumb" has also guided him in the city's bonding process, although the numbers there are slightly higher. "We have bonded with restraint and the economic climate is very strong. There has been a lot of talk (concerning overbonding and debt) which has been, to tell the truth, inaccurate," Sheets said.

The mayor also appropriated $100,000 from the same Free Cash account to purchase much needed equipment for the Quincy Fire Department. The capital outlay will purchase new portable radios to be part of the gear of Quincy firefighters as well as new radios for the fire trucks. The funds will also begin the process of acquiring a second set of turnout gear for Quincy firefighters, with 16 new sets purchased for the firefighters at Quincy Point, who would be the "first respondents" to any incident at the Twin Rivers Fatty Acid Plant, whose chemicals have the potential to stick on firefighters' gear and possibly ignite without warning.

John Keenan, executive secretary to the mayor, explained to councilors that the capital outlay for firefighters came as a result of productive negotiation with Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, the firefighters' union, and the mayor's office. Keenan also said that the average lifespan for turnout gear was five years and that the city would work to phase in second turnout gear rather than commit to major purchases every five years.

City Auditor Michael McFarland was asked why some of the shortages in Wants Neighborhood Meeting D'Amico Holds Up License For S. Quincy Italian Festival

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board failed to grant a license Tuesday to the South Quincy Italian Festival Committee to hold their 16th annual event at Malnati's Block Sept. 10 because Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico wants to have a neighborhood meeting.

D'Amico said the original intent was that the event only include a "neighborhood gathering", but has "somewhat changed" into larger than it used to be.

He said his decision to have a neighborhood meeting, has nothing to do with the "rocky relations" between him and the South Quincy Bocce Club, where members were heard to say that D'Amico tried to interfere with them obtaining a liquor license. D'Amico also said the club inferred it did not want any "political influence" in the festival.

He said he "continually gets feed-back" about the matter and affirmed publicly at Tuesday's board meeting that he has "never been involved or interfered with any licenses."

Steve Maze of D & D Deli reminded D'Amico that the festival committee and the Bocce Club are two different entities.

D'Amico said he felt the need to appoint a member of the neighborhood to represent him to serve an important role to "better monitor" the festival.

Chairman Joseph Shea said the deli is allowed to serve food, and that any alcoholic beverage is sold by the Bocce Club. He added that the cut back of one hour earlier for the closing was successful.

Police Chief Thomas Frane reiterated the roll back made a "big difference" from 9 p.m. to 8 p.m. The event will be held from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. and take about an hour to clean up.

D'Amico said he would set up the neighborhood meeting and appoint a person to represent him to coordinate his efforts.

The next board meeting is June 27.

Cape Requests Auxiliary Police Help For Tall Ships Visit

The Bourne Police Department has requested the assistance of the Massachusetts Auxiliary Police Association (MAPA) for the weekend of July 8 and 9 when over 100 Tall Ships are expected to make their way through the Cape Cod Canal for Sail Boston 2000.

Two of the more important responsibilities for the event will be traffic and crowd control.

Anthony Siciliano, president of MAPA and deputy director of the Quincy Emergency Management Agency, held a meeting recently at the Naval Reserve Center, 85 Sea St., to coordinate volunteer efforts.

The meeting included officials from: The Massachusetts State Police; The Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency; the Coast Guard; the Quincy Police Department and Quincy Fire Department; Rhonda Merrill, city director of Events and Tourism; the Harbor Master's Office; the Quincy Police Emergency Management Dive Team; Fallon Ambulance Service; and the Massachusetts Auxiliary Police Association.

In 1992, Siciliano said, over 300,000 spectators lined up to view the Tall Ships pass through the canal.

License Board Briefs

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

• Granted a common victualer license to Raman Patel, doing business as Quincy Market Washington

St. pending the removal of some signs at the store, and inspection by the Building Department.

• Granted an increase of fuel from 500 to 1100 gallons at Network Plus, 234 Copeland St. The fuel for a generator is stored in the basement of the building.

Tom Stansbury of Veteran's Services told the board that the Korean War Veterans will gather Sunday in a tent outside Veteran's Memorial Stadium prior to the Blues Festival Concert and march inside the stadium near the Korean War Memorial. Chairman Joseph Shea said a vote was not needed by the board.

• Continued a hearing regarding a request of Thomas Bellotti, doing business as DeeDee's Restaurant, 297 Newport Ave., for an entertainment license. Bellotti failed to appear for the second time.

Council Staff Salaries Still An Issue With Council

A unanimous City Council vote to approve a salary and wage schedule was not without drama Monday night as Council President Paul Harold and Councillor Daniel Raymondi squared off on the issue of pay raises for three members of the City Council office staff.

Ironically, both are in favor of the raises; where they differ is the manner in which to obtain them.

Further, the whole question of the raises, for the coming fiscal year at least, is moot, as the city's $183 million budget passed last week without them.

At one point the conversation between Harold and Raymondi, with the other seven councillors noticeably silent, took on the appearance of Court TV as Raymondi grilled Harold as to just how much he had lobbied Mayor Sheets for the $3,000 staff raises.

"To what extent did you lobby the mayor for our staff?" Raymondi asked Harold, praising the work of the three employees. "Did you lobby the mayor for the $3,000?"

"No, I did not," Harold said simply, elaborating later that it was always his intention to deal with it between now and the next fiscal year and that he had voted in favor of the increase when it came up during a recent meeting of the Finance Committee.

When Raymondi followed up with questions as to when these raises might be appropriated, Harold responded, "I don't have a crystal ball. What I have is a good relationship with the mayor."

A Raymondi resolve during the Finance Committee review of the budget, which passed 7-1 with Finance Chairman Frank McCauley the sole vote against, called for approval of the city's $183 million budget to be subject to raises for the office staff from recently cut councillor pay raises.

McCauley called the move illegal because the council can only cut, not add or re-direct, funds from the mayor's budget proposal.

The issue caused a standoff and finally an emergency meeting of the council June 12 when the amended budget, minus the pay raises, passed unanimously in fifteen minutes with nearly every one of the city's 26 department heads in attendance to offer their support.

Throughout the standoff, Mayor James Sheets and John Keenan, his executive secretary, were adamant that raises and all other appropriations were the sole prerogative of the mayor.

"I sent a letter (to the council) indicating I would not send down a financial order and I will not," Sheets said two weeks ago. These three (employees) may be the most deserving of any, but that (raises) has to be done after the budget has been passed. The mayor is the recommending authority, by law, and it should go through the normal process."

Raymondi, who also questioned Auditor Michael McFarland about recent raises for office staff, said he was concerned that city councillors and department heads received generous salary increases while those of the non-union office staff were relatively small. "So we (the councillors) get $7,000 raises and they (the office staff) get a 9.6 percent increase," Raymondi asked rhetorically.

Harold said that he did speak with the mayor earlier in successfully obtaining raises for all members of the office staff, including a fourth member who is paid an hourly wage. Harold also pointed out that the staff, being non-union, had no official advocate and that he would work with the mayor to increase their salaries, especially in light of the recent raises for department heads.

MATTHEW MORAN, an eighth grader at Atlantic Middle School, was recognized by the City Council Monday night for both his state championship in National Geographic's Geography Bee and his eighth place finish in the nationals in Washington D.C. The council presented Moran with a commendation and Council President Paul Harold presented Moran with a map of Old Braintree, which consisted of what is now Quincy, Braintree, Holbrook, and Randolph. From left are: Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton; Matthew's mother Kathleen Sullivan-Moran; Matthew Moran; and Council President Paul Harold. Over five million students took part in the Geography Bee. Lighter License Suspensions For First Time Offenders?

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Asst. City Solicitor James Timmons asked the License Board to review its policy on its discipline regarding liquor violations suggesting license suspensions on first time offenders be lessened from seven days to three days.

Addressing the board at Tuesday's meeting, Timmons cited the recent 7-day suspensions issued to Atlas Liquors and Sons Of Italy. Both have appealed to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC).

Timmons said he thinks the Sons of Italy appealed to the ABCC because of the length of the suspension. He added, there would be no reason to appeal to the ABCC with a 3 day suspension.

He noted that the ABCC tends to look at first offenders in a "different light"

The Mayor And His Mother

You might say Jim Sheets is mayor of Quincy because of someone who couldn't even vote for him. His mother.

If it wasn't for Pauline Sheets, Quincy's six-term mayor (ready to go for seven) might never have set foot in that office or anywhere else in Quincy.

Instead of going into politics here he probably would have spent most of his life going down into coal mines in his native Pennsylvania.

And he might never have gotten to see the Atlantic Ocean.

Sheets was born in Jerome, Pa. but the family moved to Clarksville when he was five. Clarksville is 45 miles south of Pittsburgh and 30 miles from the West Virginia border.

His father, Harry, was a coal miner for 50 years. His two grandfathers and seven uncles were coal miners, too.

And young Jim Sheets seemed destined to follow in their coal dust covered work boots.

Until his mother—with a little help from fate—stepped in to completely change her son's life.

The story goes like this:

Mrs. Sheets attended the Jefferson Church of the Nazarene about five miles from home. Sheets did not go to that church. But during the summer of 1952 between his junior and senior years in high school, a group of students from Eastern Nazarene College in Quincy visited the church with a musical program to recruit students for ENC.

"My mother took an application form, filled it out and along with my high school transcript sent it to Eastern Nazarene College," says Sheets.

"Unknown to me, I was accepted."

It wasn't until he graduated from high school that his mother told him he had been accepted at ENC.

She asked him if he got a job for the summer that could pay for his first semester tuition, would he go to Quincy and to college.

"Respecting my mother," says Sheets, "I reluctantly said I would do so. She told me she did not want me to end up in the coal mine. My older sister had moved to Columbus, Ohio, and I had no other siblings.

"My mother later told me she knew if I went to ENC I would never come back to the coal mines."

Sheets and a friend borrowed the latter's father's car and drove into the Pittsburgh area seeking work in one of the steel mills. In Aliquippa, Pa. on the Ohio River, they were hired immediately.

"In mid-July my mother asked me if I was going to honor my word and go to Quincy," says Sheets. "I said I did not want to since I was making good money and I knew no one in Quincy. My Dad said I was making almost as much money per week as he was and that I had a good job and should keep it.

"Mom won out and at the end of August, I boarded a Greyhound bus in Pittsburgh on my way to Boston.

"From the Greyhound station in Boston, I walked with my suitcases to the MTA station and took the train to Fields Corner and from Fields Corner an MTA bus to Quincy.

"I walked up Elm Avenue to the college. Alone, afraid, wondering what I was doing in this unknown city, I put my luggage in my room and asked where the ocean was. I then walked down Sachem Street to Quincy Bay.

"It was the first time I ever saw the ocean. I had two hot dogs at Powers on the beach and went back to my room.

"When I paid my first semester college bill including books, I had $37 left."

Sheets worked his way through college by taking odd jobs.

After graduation, he taught history and government at then Quincy Junior College and urged his students to get involved in their community.

One day, they turned the tables on him and asked him to get involved.

He did in 1973 and, with students campaigning for him, won the Ward 4 city council seat. He held that seat 16 years later before being elected mayor in 1989.

One of his students was Ron Kaufman who went on to help elect George Bush president and served on his White House staff.

He's now helping George W. Bush.

"Except to visit, I never went back home to live," says Sheets. "Later, Mom would tell me she knew I would not come back except to visit. But she wanted the best for me.

"Mom and Dad grew old and passed on without having their son or daughter living near them, nor being able to see their grandchildren grow on a regular basis."

There has been speculation that once Sheets leaves the mayor's office, he will return to his native Pennsylvania to live.

But sheets shoots that down.

"This is my home now," he says of his adopted city. "I won't be leaving here."

New Office Hours For City Building Inspectors

The Building Department announces the practice of having a building inspector available in the office from 7 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. ended Monday due to the ever-increasing volume of work this office is handling.

The economy continues to flourish and construction activity is at an all-time high. As of the end of May, permit receipts for FY 2000 are $2.34 million, up from $1.6 million in FY 1999. Total value of permitted construction was $111.2 million as of May 2000, up from $96.2 million for FY 1999.

The new office hours for building inspectors will be 7 a.m. to 10:30 a.m., Monday through Friday. Building inspectors will be available by appointment after 10:30 a.m.

The office will remain open from 7 a.m. until 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, for all other business. Applicants can still visit the office until 4:30 p.m. to submit applications. The secretarial staff will be available to accept submissions, answer questions, and contact inspectors in the field when necessary. Per-applications will be reviewed in turn and the applicant notified when the permit is ready to pick up.

The office will remain open on Saturday mornings from 8 a.m. until noon through the month of July. Saturday morning hours will resume in September. These hours are being offered on an experimental basis. If the demand warrants, the office will continue to remain open on Saturday mornings.

For more information, call Director Walter White at (617) 376-1450.

Passport photographs were first required by regulation in 1914.

Mayor Promises New Water Mains For Germantown

By PAUL HAROLD

Following the recent fire at the George Hodgkinson farm in Germantown, Mayor Charles Ross promised new water mains for Germantown.

The current eight-inch mains that provided 74 pounds of pressure would be replaced by 12 inch mains that could carry as much as 120 pounds of pressure. It was estimated that at least 80 pounds of pressure were needed for the peninsula community for fighting fires and regular household needs.

Ross said that work would begin as soon as some engineering problems were straightened out.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman reported that the $75,000 fire at Hodgkinson's farm was under investigation by the state fire marshal's office.

Shipyard's Impact On Neighborhood Programs

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As an elected board member of the Atlantic Neighborhood Association which operates the Atlantic Neighborhood Center serving many folks in North Quincy, I am very concerned about the negative impact that could be facing programs at neighborhood centers across the city.

Programs funded with HUD monies might hit the proverbial brick wall very soon thanks to Shipyard Politics.

As long as we owe HUD nearly $8 million which we could be paying for over the next 16 years, the spin from the Planning Office is just spin, isn't it? Getting HUD monies every year for neighborhood programs and then paying back big bucks to HUD for the failed shipyard venture sounds like Houdini Politics to me. Pull a rabbit out of the hat. Open up a box and watch a dove fly away. A great act to watch but really just a diversion from the bad news that HUD is looking for its money and Quincy must cough it up.

Too bad that folks in need of the services provided across the city from community centers could be the hardest hit by the dead shipyard. Now is the time to settle the shipyard fiasco and learn from it before we ever do likewise again. Hopefully, we won't have to pay the entire HUD bill but we just might have to do so.

Meanwhile, it is time to find creative ways to make up the anticipated shortfall of HUD monies. We can't allow Quincy 2000 to dry up like a raisin in the sun. It works and small businesses need it. We can't allow the elderly or those on fixed incomes to suffer either because of what happened with the shipyard idea.

Action speaks louder than spin. Now is the time for our city elected officials to work with our Beacon Hill delegation and our Congressional delegation to fix the problem.

Assessing blame is worthless. Our selected officials really wanted the new shipyard to become a reality but apparently it wasn't to be. However, good intentions don't fund neighborhood centers. You can't spend money you don't have or spin stories about how everything is just dandy.

Soon the HUD bills will start coming. Let's get to work on how to pay them without impacting too much on needed services to people who can least afford to lose them.

NEW WOLLASTON SCHOOL DISTRICTS PROTESTED

Dr. Paul Gossard, superintendent of schools, said he would meet at the Wollaston School with parents who opposed the new school zones in Wollaston.

The overcrowding at the Wollaston School required that 75 students be shifted to the Montclair and Gridley Bryant Schools where there would be seven vacant classrooms in the fall.

Parents were concerned with the mile-long walk to the proposed new schools and the danger in crossing busy intersections.

QUINCY CLAMS PLANTED IN IPSWICH

Seed clams from contaminated flats off Bicknell St. in Germantown were being harvested for transplant in Ipswich. The three-year old clams would mature in their new location for another nine years before they were ready for digging.

The transplant work was being done under the supervision of Howard Willard of Quincy, chief enforcement warden of the state bureau of marine fisheries. The digging was being done by Quincy commercial digger Charles McCormack and his crew.

"AL" AND "GENIE," performers in The Carpet One Magic Carpet Time Tour, visited Wollaston School recently and delivered the message that reading can be fun. The actors acted out various children's stories and each student received a 'Hercules' storybook courtesy of Carpet One.

Creative Storytelling Brings Books To Life At Wollaston School

Children at the Wollaston School were among the first ever to take part in a new children's literacy program -- the 'Carpet One' Magic Carpet Time Tour -- presented courtesy of Harry's Carpet One of Quincy.

The Magic Carpet Time Travelers, comprised of day-dreamer "Al" and the all-knowing "Genie," recently performed at the school to promote the joy of reading to pre-kindergarten through second-grade students.

"We created this community outreach program for one reason: to show children the importance of reading and the power of the imagination," said Howard Brodsky, co-CEO of Carpet One. "Educators tell us that it is particularly valuable to reinforce these messages as the school year ends, so they can make reading part of their summer activities."

Developed with the help of elementary-level reading specialists, the hour-long program combines storytelling with education-based live theater. Throughout the performance, students sitting on their very own "magic" carpet squares learn about the importance of reading by seeing Al and Genie bring a variety of children's stories to life through audience interaction and humor.

At the end of the show, teachers and students received storybooks and bookmarks courtesy of Harry's Carpet One. Wollaston School will also keep the donated carpet squares for future library and classroom use.

According to the U.S. Department of Education, the "Information Age" makes good reading skills more important than ever as children grow up.

There is considerable evidence of a relationship between reading regularly to a child and that child's later reading achievement (National Research Council, 1998). As U.S. Education Secretary Richard W. Riley has said: "If every child were read to daily from infancy, it would revolutionize education in this country."

Some experts believe that emphasis on reading as an entertainment, rather than as a skill, develops a more positive attitude toward reading in children. With summer vacation coming up, it is especially important to reinforce the message that reading is fun so that children can make reading part of their summer recreation.

Bacon, Mushroom Quiche

I'm always looking for different things to cook and almost always one of our children will come up with a beauty.

And so it is in today's recipe for a delicious quiche that Rita had brought on Easter Sunday as part of our brunch. And let's forget the word cholesterol just for today!

It can be made ahead and it's fairly easy.

Bacon, mushroom quiche pie crust for bottom of quiche (made or store bought)

3-4 strips bacon cooked and cut in pieces

2-3 large mushrooms cut in small slices

3 eggs (slightly beaten)
2 cups cream (Rita said this is a must)
1 cup shredded swiss cheese

Fry the bacon, drain and cut in small pieces. Set aside.

Saute mushrooms.

In a quiche dish or pie plate, place the crust, then the mushrooms and the bacon. Add the eggs, cheese and then pour the cream over all. Mix just a little bit. Bake in a 325 degree oven for about 30 minutes. (P.S. Rita read the recipe and said Swiss cheese and an extra cup of cream should be added. And also the mushrooms are sautéed.)

St. Joseph's Reading Book Drive Benefits East Boston Students

Hundreds of East Boston students received a special gift -- almost 4,000 reading books -- thanks for a successful collection effort by students, staff and parents from St. Joseph's School in Quincy.

Some 370 students at the Donald McKay School and 279 students at the James Otis School both in East Boston benefited from the reading book collection.

Lisa Marasolo, principal at St. Joseph's School in Quincy Point, coordinated the successful book drive for Spread the Word, recruiting additional help from Tufts Health Plan.

The drive means each kindergarten through grade 3 student at both East Boston schools received five books to take home and keep. Any remaining books were donated to school libraries.

The popular Spread the Word program, initiated in 1995 by then Lt. Governor Paul Cellucci and his wife, Jan, and supported by Lt. Governor Jane Swift, gives books to children who have few books at home, from children and others who no longer need the books.

This year's program, coordinated by the Massachusetts Department of Education, far exceeded the goal of 60,000 books to 12,000 students when the Disney Corporation donated almost a quarter million books to the program.

"Students need to read well, if they are to be successful in school," said Massachusetts Education Commissioner David P.

Driscoll. "Children who own books and read them at home are more likely to become proficient readers. The Spread the Word program helps, and I am pleased that it makes a difference."

Denise Russell, Michael Kelly Win Marshall School Scholarships

tions to fund those scholarships. To support the scholarship fund, donations should be sent to: Clifford H. Marshall School, Scholarship Committee, 200 Moody St., Quincy 02169.

Expert Tells Anti-Crime Council: 'Violence Is Poverty Of Thought'

The researcher who drafted the national agenda on violence prevention brought a simple message to a recent meeting of District Attorney William Keating's Norfolk Anti-Crime Council.

"Violence can be learned, so it can be unlearned," Ronald Slaby, Ph.D., told the council, which Keating formed last year to help craft multi-disciplinary solutions to social problems like youth violence.

"It is not inevitable. It is not even mysterious. There are roots to violence," Slaby told the audience comprised of judges, probation officials, police chiefs, and representatives from a variety of state and private social service agencies and groups.

The audience included representatives from a wide variety of disciplines -- from Mass Commission Against Discrimination head Charles Walker (of Sharon) to Brookline's Judge Paul Leary to Quincy Asian-American activist Betty Yau, host of The Cantonese Show on WJDA Radio.

Slaby, whom District Attorney Keating said "helped shape the national agenda on violence prevention," participated in writing the first draft of the anti-violence agenda for the Centers for Disease Control in the early 1990's.

"Violence is not a mental health problem but a lack of ability to solve problems," he said. "Violence is a poverty of thought."

Slaby's research as a senior scientist at Education Development Center in Newton and teacher at Harvard University has helped develop curricula addressing that poverty of thought by teaching bullies, victims, and bystanders ways to disrupt the continuum that leads to violence on the playground, the ballfield, or elsewhere.

Because EDC, Slaby's firm, is a non-profit organization funded largely through government grants, the firm gives away its violence prevention services and sells its curricula at cost. The inability to identify non-violent alternatives to conflict can take root at a very young age, Slaby said, so it is important to start teaching children in early grades.

Though it may sound like "pie in the sky" to the cynical ear, Slaby said, it is very possible that the right kind and degree of effort can turn the problem of youth violence around.

"Who would have believed," he asked, "that in one generation" America could go from being the country with the highest smoking rates to the country leading the movement in smoking cessation.

And that, he said, was done through education and diligence. Now it is kids getting after their parents not to smoke. "We can turn the kids into the violence preventers of the next generation," Slaby said.

Beechwood 'Grow Together' Sunflower Contest Begins

The sixth annual city-wide "Grow Together" Sunflower contest, encouraging children and families to plant and garden together, is underway.

"Families throughout the city participate each year, planting sunflowers in yards, patios, driveways, gardens and pots," said Sharron Beals, Beechwood's Executive Director. "We expect to see 12 foot to 15 foot sunflowers growing all over the city again this year."

All Quincy families are invited to enter the "Grow Together" contest. Registration continues through June 15. Seeds are available at no cost at Beechwood on the Bay, 440 East Squantum St., or families can purchase their own favorite brand. The contest concludes Aug. 31.

The family whose sunflower is "tallest" on Aug. 31 wins a Family Fun Basket (filled with games, books, toys, gift certificates and other "surprises") and will be pictured in The Quincy Sun.

Families are invited to stop by Beechwood on the Bay to register and pick up seeds. Only those who enter the contest by June 15 are eligible for the contest.

Call 471-5712 for information on this or any of Beechwood's summer programs.

Salvation Army Preschool Has New Director

The Sonshine Preschool which has met at The Salvation Army in Quincy for several years has a new director.

Cathie Keenan Moran replaces Karen Watson, who had been with the school for over 10 years and has now moved on to pursue new endeavors.

Mrs. Moran is a lifelong resident of Quincy. Her husband, Gerard, is originally from Ireland. The Morans have two children, Anna, 4, and Owen, 18 months old. The family attends St. John's Church in Quincy.

Mrs. Moran was educated in Quincy school. She graduated from North Quincy High School and attended both Eastern Nazarene College and Quincy College. She became interested in childcare while at ENC where she majored in Early Childhood Studies and worked as an aide in their Campus Kinder Haus.

Since then she has worked as an admissions recruiter for Quincy College, as a daycare provider, as a teacher at Stacey's Family Daycare Center and as a lead teacher and interim director at St. Chrysostom's Day Care Center.

The Sonshine Preschool is a spiritually-based, family-sensitive learning and play center located in the lower level of The Salvation Army, at Elm and Baxter Streets in Quincy. It began several years ago as an extension of the Army's community center to meet the needs of young children.

The school is specifically designed to help 3 and 4 year old children to prepare for kindergarten, while affording opportunities for socialization with children of their own age.

For the past several years, the Sonshine Preschool has had a waiting list. Currently, there are openings in both age categories for families who are interested in having their children attend. Applications are available at the school located within The Salvation Army's building at 6 Baxter St. or call for information at 472-2345.

Summer Youth Theater for 14 to 17-year-old students will take place July 10 through 15 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Cove Fine Arts Center at Eastern Nazarene College, Wollaston.

Purpose of the program is to foster imagination, creativity and develop performance skills by challenging and encouraging the students to create original material. Students study musical theatre, voice, improvisation, character development, scene analysis, playwriting and movement.

The week of training and exploration also includes seeing a show in Boston and then culminates with a showcase featuring original pieces created by the students as well as musical theatre selections and acting scenes.

No auditions are necessary but enrollment is limited.

Tuition for the program is $200. Applications must be received by June 30.

This youth theatre program, now in its fifth year, was designed by Eunice Ferreira, director of Summer Youth Theatre and a professor in the Communication Arts Department of Eastern Nazarene College where she has been teaching speech and drama for the past eight years.

She has also served as a drama instructor with the Cambridge Performance Project and at Area 4, a Cambridge youth center in both after school and summer drama programs. Her work with teenagers has led to several original shows performed and created by young actors.

Teachers Misti Wills and Joy Whitbread are Quincy residents who met while they were graduate students at Emerson College.

Wills is a drama teacher at Westwood High School where she teaches and directs both plays and musicals. Her graduate work in theatre education had a special focus on multicultural and bilingual theatre.

Whitbread has taught middle school drama for the past two years and currently teaches at Thurston Middle School in Westwood. For the past five years she has served as theatre director for several summer theatre programs.

As the theatre director for Interlocken, Whitbread worked with high school students to create an original piece to tour New England summer camps.

Guest artists are also invited to teach small workshops and speak to the young actors about their profession and craft.

FOOT PROBLEMS AND THE ELDERLY

Several attempts have been made in the medical literature to study the prevalence of foot problems in the elderly. Several risk factors have been identified that contribute to the appearance of these foot conditions. These factors include decreases in joint range of motion, skin conditions, negative effects of some shoes and diseases such as Diabetes, poor circulation and "wear and tear" on the joints.

The studies looked at what specific foot problems were seen. The most common conditions included: hallux valgus (bunions), deformities of the toes (such as hammertoes), limited movement of some joints (like the ankle), pain, corns and calluses, swellings, skin conditions (like fungal infection of the nails) and problems with the "arch" of the foot (e.g., flat feet). A recent article even examined how certain structural deformities, like hallux valgus, may contribute to falls in the elderly. As the population continues to live longer, studies will continue to reveal important information and help Podiatrists treat the elderly.

If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 617-773-4300.

We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney and South Shore Hospitals and Quincy Medical Center.

Eighth Annual Performance Sunday At Veterans Stadium City Of Presidents Blues Festival Makes Music A Family Affair

By CRAIG SALTERS

For anyone out there still skeptical as to how a blues festival could be synonymous with family entertainment, ask yourself this question: when was the last blues jam you attended which had an educational tidal pool sponsored by the New England Aquarium?

Yes, the New England Aquarium has partnered with the 8th annual City of Presidents Blues Festival -- Sunday, June 25, from noon to 7 p.m. at Veterans Stadium -- to place a tidal pool, complete with tiny marine animals for the kids to touch and examine, in the "The Kids Tent," which also offers face-painting and other fun activities.

And no matter how hot the music gets, the no-alcohol event also features a misting tent to keep spectators cool as well as a juried art and photography show, an international food bazaar, and free admission for children under six.

Regular admission is $15 at the gate, $12 in advance, and $10 to all members of the Quincy YMCA (with card). Children under 16 are admitted to the seven-hour event for $2, the price of a large soda at most movie theaters.

"This ticket is a real bargain," said Joe Hajjar, owner of The Yard Rock in Quincy and the festival's producer, who said shows of similar quality were priced in the $40 or $50 range. "This should be a day when a family of four can have a real cultural event together at an affordable price."

The culture Hajjar refers to is blues music, one of the few musical genres, Hajjar said, which can be called "truly American" and not merely a version of some European import.

"The show is geared to the parent, not the child, but we feel very confident that if we introduced Eric Clapton to the kids, they would love Eric Clapton, that anyone who hears this music will become a fan," Hajjar said.

Unfortunately, Eric Clapton is not headlining this year's blues festival, just the man who taught him.

British blues legend John Mayall, called "the father of British blues" and tutor to such guitar greats as Clapton, Peter Green, Coco Montoya, Mick Taylor, and Rick Vito (not to mention musicians Aynsley Dunbar, Mick Fleetwood, Jack Bruce, and John McVie), will play a 90-minute set to cap a day of music featuring, among others, Mighty Sam McClain, The James Montgomery Band, Brian Templeton, Mike Welch, Matt Woodburn, and Cheryl Arena.

Houghs Neck native Steve Murphy leads Quincy's own Steve Murphy & The Yardrockers for their eighth festival appearance, along with saxophonist and fellow Quincy High classmate Tony Matthews.

"He's 65 and still kickin'" Hajjar said of Mayall, who will put his more than 40 years of blues experience on display for Quincy residents young and old. "His latest album was one of the best blues albums I've ever heard."

The City of Presidents Blues Festival, which two years ago was listed as the only major blues event for the Boston and New England region by a 30-page Rolling Stone piece devoted to American blues, expects an audience of nearly 10,000, with a growing number of fans coming from outside New England, but Hajjar says attendance numbers don't present a true picture of what the festival is about.

"Numbers are not the criterion of what we're doing here," Hajjar said. "We can hold our head up anywhere and not worry about numbers because we have one of the classiest, best-sounding shows in America."

Hajjar credits his team of over 100 volunteers, including immediate family members such as Joe Hajjar, Sr., now 78, for keeping him fueled to run the event year after year. "We've got an unbelievable team of volunteers with a great attitude who just keep coming back," Hajjar said. "I couldn't put together a professional crew with eight years of experience like this."

Hajjar said he is most proud of comments from the Quincy Police Department that there has been absolutely no trouble from festival crowds in the past seven years. He also pointed out that a portion of proceeds from the event will go to a local organization. Past recipients have included The Marie A. Curry Breast Cancer Fund at Quincy Medical Center and The Thomas Crane Public Library Foundation and Building Fund.

This year's beneficiary will be Kids Voting Massachusetts, Inc., a non-profit organization which helps educate and encourage youngsters about the power and importance of voting.

This year's festival has a number on sponsors lead by the Stop & Shop Corporation and also including State Street Corporation, The Patriot Ledger, the Greater Boston Convention & Visitors Bureau, Citizens Bank, Eastern Bank, Fleet Bank, Thrifty Rental Cars, Signature Graphics & Signs, and, of course, The Yard Rock itself. Hajjar gave a special thanks to his sponsors for helping keep ticket prices affordable.

In the end, Hajjar kept it simple: "Look, I'm a Quincy guy, born and raised, and this my party, Quincy's party. Come join the party."

JOE HAJJAR, producer of the eighth annual City of Presidents Blues Festival June 25, has seen his festival gain local support and even some national attention. This year's concert features John Mayall and the Bluesbreakers.

Observance of the 50th Anniversary of the Korean War in front of the Stadium at the Korean War Memorial

KATHY LYDON, manager of the North Quincy Post Office, welcomes guests to the local unveiling of the United States Postal Service's new Breast Cancer Research Stamp. The stamp is the first "semi-postal" stamp issued in U.S. history, with 33 cents of the cost going towards regular postage and an additional seven cents devoted to Breast Cancer Research. (Photos by Joseph Curran)

MARY SWEENEY, interim CEO of Quincy Medical Center, displays the look of the new Breast Cancer Research stamp as Michael Haggerty, manager of Customer Services Operations for the Postal Service, looks on.

Rev. PAT MARTIN, an author and breast cancer survivor, reads from his poem "I Am Thankful for Being Alive Now" at the recent unveiling of the Breast Cancer Research stamp at City Hall as Mayor James Sheets listens. The poem is the creed of the Breast Cancer Survivor Group at Quincy Medical Center.

Breast Cancer Stamp Ceremonies Honor Survivors, Local Groups

The Quincy, Wollaston, and North Quincy Post Offices recently used the local unveiling of the new Breast Cancer Stamp at City Hall to honor local breast cancer survivors as well as local institutions and organizations participating in the fight against the disease.

Special honorees included breast cancer survivors Marti Carni and Donna Steverman as well as Quincy Medical Center and the American Cancer Society.

The Marie Curry Walk, held every September in honor of the late wife of Bob Curry, owner of Curry's Hardware and member of the QMC board of directors, was also honored. Curry died of breast cancer.

Kathy Lydon, manager of the North Quincy Post Office, served as master of ceremonies for the event and welcomed Carni and Steverman as well as: Mayor James Sheets; Mary Sweeney, interim CEO of Quincy Medical Center; Susan Rogers of the American Cancer Society; Dr. Walter Kagan, an oncologist from Commonwealth Oncology who spoke on the importance of early detection; Michael Haggerty, manager, Customer Service Operations, USPS; James Kenneally, acting manager, Wollaston Branch Post Office; and Kevin Joyce, acting manager, Quincy Branch Post Office.

Lydon thanked them all, including breast cancer survivor and volunteer Terry Bellotti Welch, for all of their time and effort raising money and promoting awareness of breast cancer.

But Lydon saved her warmest thanks for the breast cancer survivors themselves: "Many of you have touched my heart with your remarkable stories of survival. You are all truly an inspiration."

The Breast Cancer Research Stamp (BCRS) is the first "semi-postal" stamp issued in U.S. history. This means that a portion of the postage paid by the purchaser goes to entities other than the Postal Service.

The purchaser pays 40 cents for this stamp, 33 cents covering the regular postage for a one-ounce first class letter. The remaining seven cents goes to organizations and agencies, primarily the Department of Defense and the National Institute of Health, to conduct research on breast cancer.

To date, over 200 million stamps have been sold, raising $14.2 million for breast cancer research.

Lydon made special note of the contributions Quincy Medical Center has made in the battle against the disease. "Quincy Medical Center donates their conference room bi-monthly so that breast cancer survivors can meet and receive support and share experiences from one another," Lydon said. "They also have the yearly tree of life ceremony and the Simon Fireman mammography unit, donated by the Fireman family in memory of their daughter (Joan Fireman Berenson) who lost her battle with breast cancer."

"In this unit there is state-of-the-art equipment which makes it convenient for the residents of Quincy and surrounding communities to visit for their examinations and treatment, instead of commuting to Boston hospitals."

Rev. Pat Martin, an author as well as a breast cancer survivor herself, read from her poem "I Am Thankful For Being Alive Now," which expressed gratitude for all things, big and small, which help breast cancer patients on their road to recovery.

The poem is the creed of the Breast Cancer Survivor Group of Quincy Medical Center.

Morrissey Seeks More Funding For Prostate Cancer Research

Senator Michael Morrissey has urged the state legislature to provide more funding for prostate cancer research.

Morrissey advocated for the Senate's inclusion in the state's FY01 budget an additional $1.7 million for the purposes of scientific research. This increased funding is dedicated to a research grant program administered by the Department of Public Health.

Morrissey stated, "One out of every five men will be afflicted with prostate cancer. This makes it a disease that deserves more research and funding."

The Senate proposed a budget that would raise prostate cancer research funding from roughly $2.2 million to $3.2 million.

"The budget has not been finalized, but the Senate's budget is a major step in helping the 4,000 men in Massachusetts who will be afflicted with prostate cancer this year," Morrissey said. "Investments must be made in prostate cancer research in order to save lives and prevent the extreme suffering of men living with prostate cancer. This funding increase is a step in the right direction and should bring about awareness."

Early detection of prostate cancer makes it a very curable disease, and a large portion of the funding will go towards early detection and prevention. The American Cancer Society recommends that men age 50 and older should talk with their health care professionals about regular testing for risk of prostate cancer, Morrissey said.

SPRING CAR CARE

Safety Features In Mid-Size Family Sedan

Safety is taking a front seat in the redesign of one of America's best-selling family cars.

A spokesman for the 2000 Taurus said the mid-size car offers customers several safety firsts, including Ford's Personal Safety System and a standard emergency trunk release. Added to this are features that customers never even see, such as energy-absorbing trim panels. All of this has done to help better protect occupants in a broad range of accidents.

The safety features build on the success of the current-model Taurus, which the government has awarded its highest ranking--five stars--for both the driver and passenger for frontal crash tests.

Safety firsts on the 2000 Taurus include:

- First vehicle on the market with Ford's Personal Safety System, featuring integrated safety belt pretensioners, energy management retractors, safety belt usage sensors, driver's seat position sensor, dual-stage inflating air bags and a special crash severity sensor.

- First mid-size family car with Ford's child-friendly emergency trunk release system, which will be a standard feature.

- Head-and-chest side air bags are available, helping better protect drivers and front-seat passengers during side air bags are available, helping better protect drivers and front-seat passengers during side impacts.

- Energy-absorbing trim panels help absorb impact during accidents, reducing occupants' risk of injury.

- A new armrest design collapses better during collisions, helping further reduce the risk of spleen and liver injuries for occupants in-involved in side-impact crashes.

- Child-seat tethers anchored in the back seat further improve the ability to securely anchor child safety seats.

- New Belt-Minder system helps remind occupants to buckle up.

Industry experts say that the new Taurus features the most advanced package of safety technology available in any Ford product on the market.

Five Stars

With abundant front and rear crumple zones, the 2000 Taurus achieves the U.S. government's highest frontal crash-test rating for both driver and front-seat passenger of five stars. This means that front-seat occupants have a 90 percent chance of avoiding serious injury in a 35 mph collision. Taurus is the only mid-size sedan priced below $20,000 in 2000 to achieve the U.S. government's five-star frontal crash rating for both the driver and front seat passenger.

Children On Board

Traveling with small children does not have to be a big deal if you prepare in advance.

Travel Tips

Here are a few rules parents may find roadworthy from the experts at Kidsbooks.com:

- For very small children stop frequently so they can get out of the car and burn off some energy. Some parents prefer driving long distances at night while children sleep.
- Bring along nutritious snacks such as low-fat pretzels, fruit and juice packs to reduce the amount of fast food eaten.

- Stock up on entertainment, such as children's musical tapes, books and toys like the colorful and engaging soft-cloth books available online at www.kidsbooks.com.

- A great one for the road is Get Dressed With Elmo. Inside this exciting book, Elmo leads a child through each dressing skill, and he and his Sesame Street pals get themselves dressed for the day. Full of fun-to-feel textures, this book can help kids button up basic dressing skills.

Parents can order Get Dressed With Elmo and other great, educational books, at a discount from www.kidsbooks.com.

PLANNING FOR "RETIREMENT"

New tires have a tread depth between 2/5 and 1/2 of an inch. When the tread depth wears down to 1/16 of an inch and the "wear bars" begin to show, it is time for replacement tires (if not sooner). When choosing new tires for your vehicle, look for the tread-wear index for a grading of the tire's resistance to wear. The higher the rating, the longer the projected tread life under optimal conditions. Driving style, road conditions, alignment, rotation and other factors can affect a tire's life expectancy. For comparison purposes, the index is a percentage grading based on 100 being average. Thus, a tire rating of 280 would have 280% the resistance to tread wear of a 100-rated tire.

Select the properties for your driving habits and keep them at their recommended inflation. The safety of our customers and their children is important to us here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO and we want you to be informed. For maintenance and repairs, we are small enough to provide friendly, personal service and large enough to have the latest, most modern test equipment and more important, outstanding ASE Certified technicians. Courtney DiNapoli Wins $200 Bond In Youth Poster Contest Affairs liaison.

Traficante described the poster contest as an outreach program which helps to spread awareness about workplace safety to more than 50,000 union members and their families throughout New England. Moretti also added that "there is no better way to start with than with you -- our children. You are our future leaders and workers."

Anthony DiNapoli, Courtney's father, is a proud member of Local 22 in Boston. Louis Mandarini, Jr., is business manager for the Local.

For the contest, Courtney and her classmates drew posters of their parents wearing safety clothes on the work site to protect them from injuries. Courtney's mother, Corinne DiNapoli, stood by her daughter's side when she was awarded the medal.

Courtney's teacher, Ms. Kathleen Coyle, was acknowledged for encouraging her students to draw the posters. She was awarded a $100 gift certificate to purchase classroom supplies. Assistant Principal, William Bloomer, was thanked for his contribution to the contest.

Courtney will now be eligible for the grand prize Savings Bond at the end of the school year. Ms. Coyle COURTNEY DINAPOLI (center), a kindergartner at the Clifford Marshall School, received a $200 savings bond for her winning entry in the New England Laborers Union poster contest promoting worker safety. will automatically win a $1,000 gift certificate for more school supplies if her student is successful at capturing the grand prize.

All the children enjoyed cookies and punch. Each student was given a safety-coloring book, crayons, and other safety goodies.

The New England Laborers' Health & Safety Fund believes by engaging workers, their families, and the educational community, more New Englanders will become aware of the importance of workplace safety. According to the United States Department of Labor, 6,028 people died from occupational injuries in 1998 -- fatal injuries which could have been prevented.

Also, according to statistics gathered by the US Occupational Safety and Health Administration, in 1999, in Massachusetts alone, there were 32 deaths on the job.

City Ceremonies, Awards Mark Public Works Week

The Quincy Department of Public Works, in partnership with the mayor's office, recently celebrated National Public Works Week with a variety of activities including a Public Awards Ceremony and an Employee Recognition Ceremony.

The public awards ceremony was hosted by the DPW at City Hall and honored city schools and students in three categories: a banner contest, an essay contest, and a community project competition.

The Clifford Marshall Elementary School took first place in the banner contest and received a cash prize of $250. A second place prize of $150 went to the Wollaston Elementary School. Third place honors, and a $100 prize, went to the Bernazzani School. Petar's Automotive/Eric's Autobody donated the prize money.

Merrymount Elementary School fifth grader Kayla Dolan was the citywide essay contest winner on the subject "What the DPW Means To Me."

The school received $100 and Dolan received a $25 gift certificate to the South Shore Plaza, courtesy of ReSource Waste Disposal, Inc., of Hyde Park.

Fellow Merrymount fifth grader Jordan Bush took second place and received a Good Citizenship ribbon.

Community Project first place went to the Merrymount School which received a cash award of $500. Second place went to the Montclair School and third place went to the Marshall School, with each school receiving $250. Prize money was donated by Earth Tech Engineering of Concord.

Several hundred elementary school children also took advantage of guided tours of the public works facilities and equipment during an Open House staffed by representatives from the various areas within the DPW who answered questions and provided information. The students received educational coloring books on issues such as storm water and catch basins.

One highlight of National Public Works Week was the Employee Recognition Ceremony, held after the Open House and attended by DPW employees, the city's department heads, city councillors, and Mayor James Sheets.

This year's Employee of the Year Award went to Contract Supervisor Susan Clifford, who was recognized for her "dedication, loyalty, spirit of cooperation, and follow-through" in all aspects of her job performance.

The Employee Safety Award went to Charles Picard, laborer, MEO. Picard was praised for "professionalism on the job" and concern for the safety of both himself and his fellow workers.

One of the final ceremonies of Employee Recognition Day was the recognition of Kathryn McAlduff, Paul Damore, Frank DeVito, and Thomas Stokinger who were honored for 25 years of service to the DPW.

The four were presented with gold pins to commemorate their service.

National Public Works Week is designed to educate the public and bring about a greater appreciation for the importance of public works in community life, as well as interest young people who may wish to pursue careers in the field. The program also seeks to enhance the prestige of the people in Public Works who respond to the daily needs of the community.

Through National Public Works Week and other efforts year round, Commissioner David Colton and Mayor Sheets are raising the public's awareness of public works issues and increasing confidence in public works employees who are dedicated to improving the quality of life for present and future generations.

RECYCLING ICON MOBIUS entertains Quincy school children at the DPW's recent Open House. The Open House featured guided tours of many public works sites and coloring books for the children.

DAVID COLTON, DPW Commissioner, congratulates Kayla Dolan and Jordan Bush, both fifth graders at the Merrymount School, for their winning essays on the importance of public works on the lives of the community. Dolan took first place in the contest, receiving a $25 gift certificate to the South Shore Plaza for herself and a $100 donation to her school. Bush took second place and received a Good Citizenship Ribbon.

Ferry Service From Quincy To Harbor Islands Starts Saturday

said. "They're historical, beautiful, and, with the addition of the soon-to-be completed Marriott Hotel, just another reason to come to Quincy."

From Quincy, round-trip tickets are $8 for adults, $7 for seniors, and $6 for children ages 4-12.

Serving as the park's central terminus, George's Island will provide free inter-island water shuttle service from there to Bumpkin, Gallops, Grape, Lovell's, and Peddock's islands.

The new program means that, for the first time, ferries leaving from Quincy, Hull, and Salem will go to the Boston Harbor Islands. Visitors will be able to spend the day or, perhaps on an island or two, the night.

These three unprecedented and long-requested gateways to the islands will supplement longstanding departure points from Long Wharf in downtown Boston and Hewitt's Cove in Hingham.

The Boston Harbor Islands are an urban archipelago of some 30 islands scattered across 50 square miles of protected waters of Boston Harbor. Visitors will variously find entertainment, education, solitude, or adventure by swimming, hiking, camping, fishing, bird watching, or exploring historic sites.

More than 100,000 people a year visit the islands. The Park boasts 1,600 acres of land and 35 miles of relatively undeveloped shoreline.

Established by Congress in 1996, the Park is managed by a 13 member Boston Harbor Islands Partnership and a 28 member Advisory Council. Members of both groups represent the public sector on the federal, state, and local levels, as well as private businesses and private non-profit groups who have exhibited years of interest in the maritime activities and environment of the islands.

For schedule information or group, family and season packages, the public may call Boston Harbor Cruises information line at (617) 224-4321.

Ask The Pediatrician

Simple Solutions To Common Problems

By GEORGE HOM, MD
Pediatrician, South Suburban Pediatrics
At Quincy Medical Center

Because children aren't born with an instruction manual, parents often have many questions about their children's health. Below are some simple solutions to commonly asked questions.

Q. What can I do to treat my baby's diaper rash?

A. Diaper rash is generally caused by skin irritation from a wet diaper. Treatment for the basic irritated diaper rash includes keeping the diaper area dry with frequent diaper changes and eliminating the use of occlusion pants. Zinc oxide or "A and D" ointment may also be beneficial. Effectiveness of these treatments will vary from child to child.

Q. Is it safe to give Tylenol or Motrin when a child gets a fever?

A. Both Tylenol (acetaminophen) and Motrin (ibuprofen) are effective in controlling fever. Motrin may be used every six to eight hours, and Tylenol every four to six hours. Be careful to follow the instructions on the package as too much of either drug may have serious side effects. And always check with your pediatrician before administering any over-the-counter medication to your child.

Q. What should I do if my baby has diarrhea?

A. Treatment for diarrhea consists of preventing dehydration, which is done orally with formula or rehydrating solution such as Pedialyte. Go slowly — one to two ounces every 20 to 30 minutes. Do not give your baby adults sports drinks!

Q. Should I have my child vaccinated against chicken pox?

A. The varicella (chicken pox) vaccine is now required in the state of Massachusetts. The vaccine has been proven effective in preventing or reducing the severity of chicken pox. There is a low incidence of fever or rash associated with administration of the vaccine. The vaccine is given any time after 12 months of age.

Chairman Joseph Shea said the policy was written in 1992 under the supervision of the then police chief Francis Mullen. Timmons said that policy was written following a murder at the old Quincy Bay Inn and was written to "Send a strong message."

He recommended that the board re-draft the language on the policy, reconsider the punishment for first offenders, and consider a 3 day or 3-7 day harsher penalty if needed. The punishment for first offenders, he said would be that of deterrence and a way of "keeping control," instead of the "harsh punishment."

Timmons said in the case of Atlas Liquors, where the entire operation would be closed and the fact that supermarkets who sold beer and wine were non-existent in 1992 when the policy was designed.

Shea said he will meet with License Board members separately and take the recommendations under advisement. He said he thought maybe the policy "needs to be updated", but added it might take 3 to 3 months to review. And then the board would "carefully update" it if they deem it necessary.

Shea said discussion of the meetings with board members would be heard at the August 1 meeting.

Butler's Pond, Sailor's Pond Ward 5 Meeting Topic

The Ward 5 Community Association will conduct its monthly meeting tonight (Thursday) at the Beechwood Knoll School, Fenno St. at 7 p.m.

All are welcome.

Topic will be the ongoing efforts to environmentally restore Butler Pond and Sailor's Pond.

Guest speaker will be Rosemary Nolan, program manager for the Quincy Department of Public Works.

Nolan will speak of the upcoming restoration efforts at Butler's Pond this summer. The DPW has been awarded a significant grant to restrict the growth of phragmites and other invasive plants from Butler's Pond. With Nolan, will be a representative from the consultant that will perform the work. Nolan will give a progress report and speak of the future plans for both Butler's and Sailor's Ponds.

"Both Butler's and Sailor's Ponds were once vibrant resources in recent years. There has been a great deal of interest in these neighborhoods in returning them to active and attractive ecosystems. We hope to hear how and when the city plans to restore our freshwater, natural resources," said Dave Murphy, president of the Ward 5 Community Association.

Conway First-Time Homebuyers Seminar On Mortgage Savings

A free seminar to be held Monday, June 26 by Jack Conway & Co. will help first-time homebuyers save money on their mortgage.

The event will outline the benefits of the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) loan program, which allows first-time buyers to purchase a home with a downpayment of three percent. FHA loans also allow the entire downpayment to be a gift.

Participants in the seminar will be eligible to receive a free financial analysis and a copy of their credit report, said Carol Bulman, president of Conway Financial Services. Potential buyers who attend the seminar and complete the credit consultation will receive a certificate that entitles them to a half-point reduction in the upfront mortgage-insurance premium on FHA loans — a savings of $750 on a loan of $150,000.

"It's a fantastic opportunity for people to learn about their financing options and see which loan programs are available to them," Bulman said. "We encourage everyone thinking about buying a home in Boston's neighborhoods and the surrounding areas to come and have their questions answered."

The homebuyers education seminar will be held from 7-9 p.m. at Florian Hall, 55 Hallett St., Dorchester.

Special guests will include Christopher Cline of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, who will provide information on home buying and on purchasing HUD-owned properties.

Reservations are not required, but are preferred since space is limited. Call (888) 831-1181 to reserve a seat.

Earthquake Policy Coverage Answers To Common Questions

Recent tremors in Springfield, Mass. from earthquake activity has set off a flurry of questions about earthquake insurance coverage for property owners.

The chance of a serious earthquake in the Eastern United States is less than in the West. But, nonetheless, there is some risk. In fact, the solid bedrock structure that underlies most of the Eastern U.S. is an excellent shock transmitter so that areas far removed from the quake center could be affected.

• Does my basic homeowners policy include any kind of coverage for earthquake damage?

No, none whatsoever. In fact, your basic policy specifically excludes coverage for damage caused by any type of earth movement or shifting. However, you would have earthquake coverage on your contents if you purchased the Special Personal Property Coverage Endorsement.

• What does the special earthquake endorsement insure?

The earthquake endorsement would cover damage to your property—home, structures, and household contents—caused directly by an earthquake—up to the same dollar limits you currently carry for your buildings and contents. Your limits apply to each earthquake occurrence. If more than one earthquake shock occurs within a 72-hour period, it would be considered just one earthquake for insurance purposes.

• What if my home were actually damaged by flooding that was caused by an earthquake... would I be insured?

No. Any damage resulting from a flood or tidal wave—whether or not it is stemmed directly or indirectly from an earthquake—would not be covered by your basic policy, nor the special earthquake endorsement. Separate insurance is available to protect your home from flood damage due to an earthquake or any other cause.

• If my home were totally destroyed, would earthquake coverage pay to rebuild my entire house?

Only if you carry a "dwelling" coverage limit that is sufficient to cover the expense of rebuilding your home. That's why it's important to keep your insurance limit up-to-date with current building costs. Your agent can help you determine an adequate limit to assure that your home could be rebuilt with the lost settlement. You may also want to consider our Guaranteed Total Replacement Cost Coverage, which would automatically increase your limit at each renewal to keep up with rising property values. This coverage would pay (less your deductible) to rebuild your home at any cost—even if the tab exceeded your coverage limit. See your policy for limitations.

• Would the special earthquake coverage endorsement help me pay expenses to live elsewhere while my home was being rebuilt?

Yes, up to a point. Any necessary increase in living expenses incurred by you so that your household can maintain its normal standard of living would be covered up to your "loss of use" coverage limit.

• Would the same deductible I carry now apply to earthquake damage?

No, with earthquake coverage, your base deductible is five percent of your coverage limit.

For example, if your coverage limits are: dwelling $150,000; other structures $15,000; household contents $75,000 — your deductibles in the event of earthquake damage are dwelling $7,500, other structures $750 and household contents $3,750.

The deductible may vary from company to company.

Approximate prices: based on $150,000 building coverage: frame/wood structures ($41/$1,000) = $65; masonry structure ($170/$1,000) = $225.

Healthy Eating Tips For Hectic Lives

Many Americans enjoy a healthy lifestyle by watching what they eat and exercise regularly. However, many people miss out on healthy lifestyles because of their hectic everyday schedules.

Eating well, however, doesn't have to take up much of your time. Some of the simplest most convenient meals can be prepared in a matter of minutes. Sounds easy you might be saying, but how will these quickie meals taste? Will I become hungry five minutes after I eat a healthy meal?

Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts' online health resource, www.ahelthyme.com, provides the following tips on tasty, nutritious, and filling meals that can be prepared in 15 minutes or less.

BREAKFAST:

Drink Your Breakfast

Start your day with a smoothie: Just spoon a cup of low-fat yogurt, some frozen berries, fruit juice, and banana in a blender. Then add a quarter cup of powdered nonfat milk for a satisfying meal that also packs 625 milligrams of calcium — more than half of what you need for the day.

Get in the Pink

Try pink grapefruit for breakfast. It packs 25 times more beta-carotene than its paler cousin, and it's usually sweeter. Pair it with a cup of oatmeal topped with an ounce of chopped almonds or a quarter cup of dried apricots, and you'll have a complete breakfast with about 7 grams of fiber, a third of the daily recommendation.

Juice Up Your Routine

Break out of the orange juice rut. Try a different one each day: pineapple, grapefruit, tangerine, tomato, cranberry, and grape all contain different antioxidants that can help prevent a range of ills from cancer to heart disease to urinary tract infections.

LUNCH:

Choose "A" for Avocado

With plenty of flavor and half the fat of mayonnaise. Avocado also offers magnesium and potassium. Add some tomato, sprouts, and mustard, and follow up with a piece of fruit for a complete, healthy lunch.

Try New-Age Coleslaw

Use shredded broccoli stalks instead of cabbage in your next slaw. (You can find them near the packaged salad in the produce section.) A half-cup gives you nearly four times the vitamin C and beta-carotene that you can get from cabbage. Toss with shredded carrots, a little chopped red onion, and a teaspoon of rice-wine vinegar for a super-healthy side dish.

Get Back to Basics

Recent studies have turned peanut butter into a health food by showing that peanut products can actually lower your LDL or "bad" cholesterol as effectively as olive oil. Go for the old-fashioned or "natural" kind. Other brands that use partially hydrogenated oils to give their butters a creamy consistency and keeps the oil from separating can raise your cholesterol.

DINNER:

Go for Gardenburgers

Most veggie burgers give you two-thirds of the protein but only one-quarter of the fat of a regular hamburger, not to mention 5 grams of fiber. You can pan-fry a vegetarian burger in a teaspoon of olive oil or nuke it in the microwave. Dress it up with sprouts, a smear of goat cheese, some roasted red peppers, and a whole wheat bun.

Turn a Potato into Dinner

Heap a baked potato with black beans, salsa, and an ounce of shredded pepper-jack cheese to make a meal. Count on 12 grams of fiber and 12 grams of protein. The cheese has a third of the fat of butter, plus you get more than 200 milligrams of calcium.

Go Green

Spinach pasta gives you twice as much potassium and folic acid as the regular kind, along with a nice hit of beta-carotene. For a quick and easy meal, toss spinach bow ties with crumbled feta, black olives, and chopped tomatoes.

SNACKS:

Avoid That Afternoon Slump

Eating between meals can keep your energy up and your weight down—if you choose snacks that combine carbohydrates with protein for a pick-me-up that lasts. Try these: carrots and hummus, apple slices and peanut butter, or cheese on whole wheat crackers.

Choose a Frozen Fruit Treat

For a quick and healthy sweet snack, wash seedless grapes, put them in a zip-top bag, and toss them in your freezer. Grapes contain resveratrol, an antioxidant that helps protect your heart, and they're even sweeter when frozen.

Morrisette Off To 3-1 Start

JOHN CICCARELLO of Quincy met Slyde the Fox, the New England Revolution's mascot, when he stopped by the Soccer Celebration Area for some fun and games before attending a recent game against D.C. United at Foxboro Stadium.

By CHRIS POISSON

Between the rain, the fog and the lights at Adams Field, the Morrisette American Legion baseball team has had a hard time stepping onto the diamond this season.

The latest misfortune came Monday night when the lights went out in the third inning with Morrisette holding a 2-1 lead over Randolph. The game was canceled and is trying to be rescheduled for Sunday.

Last Thursday, Morrisette held a 4-2 advantage against Braintree before the game was called in the fourth inning due to fog. It will be made up at a later date.

Morrisette played at Cohasset Tuesday and hosted them yesterday (Wednesday). Today (Thursday) and Saturday it hosts Weymouth.

"Everybody is in the same boat," said coach Ray Cattaneo. "Everybody is playing every day. It's an unbalanced schedule. Right now, we're supposed to be 10 games in. We're six games behind. It's just frustrating. It's been tough on our pitching."

Although it has been tough on the pitchers — particularly Rob Celata, who was the starter in both the Randolph and Braintree games — they have been able to brush aside the adversity to post some impressive numbers.

Keith Doherty, Matt McCann and Celata have guided Morrisette to a 3-1 start this season, giving up an average of two runs per game.

McCann (1-1), who tossed a shutout against Cohasset in his first start of the year, earned a tough loss last Saturday when Canton handed Morrisette its first defeat of the season, 5-2. The right-hander went the distance, scattering 10 hits while walking one and striking out 11.

The offense didn't help him out as it managed only three hits. Chris Doherty stroked a two-run single and Celata and Brian O'Hanley picked up the hits.

"[Canton] has been playing some great ball this year," Cattaneo said. "They have a pretty good lineup to put out there."

Last Wednesday, Morrisette routed West Roxbury, 10-1, behind the left arm of Keith Doherty, who yielded only three hits while punching out 16 in the complete-game effort. The only run he allowed came on a wild pitch in the first inning.

Doherty also chipped in at the plate, going 3 for 4 with two doubles and an RBI. Chris Doherty went 3 for 4 with an RBI and Celata and Pat Bregoli (RBI) each had two hits. John Gavin added a two-run single.

Hershey Track, Field Registration Starts June 27

The Quincy Recreation Department will sponsor the Hershey National Track and Field Youth Program by hosting a community meet, announces Recreation Director Barry Welch.

The local meet will be the first step in a competition that could result in a local athlete advancing to the National Championships in Hershey Park, Penn. New England champions are awarded an all expense paid trip by Hershey Chocolate, the national sponsor.

The program is open to youngsters ages 9-14. Participants are not required to have previous track experience or be a member of a community track program. The meet is also open to others from surrounding communities. Participants must provide the sponsoring agency with proof of age before they will be allowed to compete. The age of the participant shall be his/her age as of Dec. 31, 2000.

There are no entry fees. Spikes and starting blocks are prohibited.

Both boys and girls will compete in three categories: 9-10, 11-12, and 13-14. Those youngsters currently 8 years old, but who will turn 9 before Dec. 31, 2000 may compete in the 9-10 age group. Youngsters currently 14 years old who will turn 15 before Dec. 31, 2000 are not eligible.

"The philosophy of this program is to stimulate participation of all eligible children," Welch said. "It is in no way to be construed as an All-Star program. This event is run in cooperation with the National Recreation and Park Association and the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sport. Quincy's Olympic bronze medal winner, Karen Cashman, was a five-year National Championship participant starting in the Quincy competition. I encourage our residents to take advantage of this excellent program."

The events are as follows:
Age 9-10 Boys and Girls: 50-yard dash, 100-yard dash, 200-yard dash, 4x100-yard

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Do you ever think about how other people react to you upon meeting you for the first time? Do you project yourself favorably or vice-versa?

Have you ever thought how facial expressions contribute to first impressions? A smile can be so important. It can be warm with eyes sparkling or it can be just a contraction of the facial muscles. . . A smile can be the difference between making a friend or an acquaintance or even an enemy. . .

We are all aware that friendship is a very precious thing. We need friends in time of trouble just as we need them in our times of joy and pleasure. However, we sometimes forget that just as we may find first overtures difficult, so do other people find them equally hard. The rules of social behavior help us over these awkward moments. But couldn't it be said that it is our attitude, our willingness to be friendly, our interest in the other person that is the deciding factor? This is where the smile comes in. . Oh, yes, it can say so much more than words. .

Good News For Medicare

By LAURIE ZASTROW

The Medicare Trust Fund is solvent and the year 2025, according to the 2000 Annual Report of the Medicare Board of Trustees who oversee the trust fund financial operations.

For the second year in a row, the Medicare Trust Fund has shown a surplus. The Trustees reported that income to the fund increased due to robust economic growth. At the same time, expenditures declined due to the continuing implementation of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, low increases in health care costs generally and ongoing efforts to combat fraud and abuse in the Medicare Program.

Income to the Trust Fund is projected to continue to exceed expenditures for another 15 years. Then income would fall short of expenditures but, by drawing down on trust fund assets, the program could continue to pay benefits for another seven years. The fund assets would be depleted in 2025, a significant improvement over the projection of 2015 cited in last year's report. After 2025, income to the Trust Fund from taxes would cover about 80 percent of the costs of the program.

In 1999, the Medicare program provided medical protection to about 39 million people, including 34 million aged and five million disabled beneficiaries. Although the total number of beneficiaries increased by 0.9 percent in 1999, the average expenditures per enrollee decreased by five percent. Administrative costs for the Medicare program represented only one percent of expenditures.

Despite significant improvement in financial outlook, we should still be looking for effective solutions to long-range financial problems. The sooner reforms can occur, the more flexible and gradual they can be. Solutions determined and implemented today will likely need adjustment over time. Effective and decisive action is necessary to build upon the strong steps taken in recent reforms.

The complete 2000 Annual Report of the Medicare Board of Trustees is available at www.hcfa.gov/pubforms/tr/ on the Internet.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Do you ever think about how other people react to you upon meeting you for the first time? Do you project yourself favorably or vice-versa?

Have you ever thought how facial expressions contribute to first impressions? A smile can be so important. It can be warm with eyes sparkling or it can be just a contraction of the facial muscles. . . A smile can be the difference between making a friend or an acquaintance or even an enemy. . .

We are all aware that friendship is a very precious thing. We need friends in time of trouble just as we need them in our times of joy and pleasure. However, we sometimes forget that just as we may find first overtures difficult, so do other people find them equally hard. The rules of social behavior help us over these awkward moments. But couldn't it be said that it is our attitude, our willingness to be friendly, our interest in the other person that is the deciding factor? This is where the smile comes in. Oh, yes, it can say so much more than words. . .

Good News For Medicare

By LAURIE ZASTROW

The Medicare Trust Fund is solvent until the year 2025, according to the 2000 Annual Report of the Medicare Board of Trustees who oversee the trust fund financial operations.

For the second year in a row, the Medicare Trust Fund has shown a surplus. The Trustees reported that income to the fund increased due to robust economic growth. At the same time, expenditures declined due to the continuing implementation of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, low increases in health care costs generally and ongoing efforts to combat fraud and abuse in the Medicare Program.

Income to the Trust Fund is projected to continue to exceed expenditures for another 15 years. Then income would fall short of expenditures but, by drawing down on trust fund assets, the program could continue to pay benefits for another seven years. The fund assets would be depleted in 2025, a significant improvement over the projection of 2015 cited in last year's report. After 2025, income to the Trust Fund from taxes would cover about 80 percent of the costs of the program.

In 1999, the Medicare program provided medical protection to about 39 million people, including 34 million aged and five million disabled beneficiaries. Although the total number of beneficiaries increased by 0.9 percent in 1999, the average expenditures per enrollee decreased by five percent. Administrative costs for the Medicare program represented only one percent of expenditures.

Despite significant improvement in financial outlook, we should still be looking for effective solutions to long-range financial problems. The sooner reforms can occur, the more flexible and gradual they can be. Solutions determined and implemented today will likely need adjustment over time. Effective and decisive action is necessary to build upon the strong steps taken in recent reforms.

The complete 2000 Annual Report of the Medicare Board of Trustees is available at www.hcfa.gov/pubforms/trf/ on the Internet.

MWRA Water Test Report Being Mailed To Customers

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority wants consumers to know about the high quality of the water they draw from the tap. Over the next few weeks, every household in each of the cities and towns in the MWRA service area, including Quincy, will receive the "1999 Report on Your Drinking Water."

This is the second of the annual Consumer Confidence Report that Congress has mandated in the Safe Drinking Water Act because consumers have a right to know.

The eight page report contains information from the MWRA and local water departments that explains where the water comes from, how it is tested and what the results are, and what steps the MWRA and local water departments are taking to provide a high quality drinking water. The report was developed in close collaboration with local water and health departments.

"With something people need and use every day, like water, they need to know about the tests showing water is safe. They also want to know about even very small risks. Then they can make their own choices," said MWRA Executive Director Douglas B. MacDonald. "We hope that all consumers will take the time to look at the results in the report," MacDonald said.

The data in the report is based on thousands of tests the MWRA constantly performs each month on the water in the reservoirs and in the pipes.

The testing results for MWRA water are truly excellent and many of the improvements made by the MWRA to the water supply system are clearly demonstrated. At the same time, the report very carefully describes how people with special health needs should manage their concerns over water, just as they would over food or any other consumables. It reminds people who live in older houses with lead in the plumbing system of the precautions they should take to be sure that water at the tap is lead-free. The report also provides Internet websites and phone numbers for customers to receive additional information on health and water related issues.

"We hope the information contained in this report will allow consumers to feel confident about the MWRA water system and the water delivered from it," MacDonald said. "At less than a penny a gallon, high quality water from the tap in the MWRA service area is a smart buy."

Additional copies of this report may be obtained by calling your local water department or calling the MWRA at (617) 242-5323.

Farmers' Market Opens 16th Season June 30

Quincy Farmers' Market opens its 16th season Friday, June 30 at 11:30 a.m. at the John Hancock Municipal parking lot across from the Quincy District Court.

The market will operate Fridays, rain or shine, through Oct. 30 from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"Shopping at the Quincy Farmers' Market keeps local production viable," said Anneli Johnson, Market Specialist from the Massachusetts Department of Food and Agriculture. "It is a fun and festive way of shopping outdoors in the sunshine under the farmers' colorful umbrellas for local seasonal fruits and vegetables. Farmers' Markets are a 'window to local agriculture.'"

"I am always looking forward to the farmers' market opening, not only on behalf of our city but also for my own vegetable shopping needs," said Bernice

Mader, Mayor James Sheets' Administrative Assistant for the City of Quincy. "I love the freshness of the produce, as well as the camaraderie with my fellow citizens and friends that I meet there."

Johnson thanked the Mayor's Office for its continued support, as well as the Quincy 2000 Corporation, WJDA, The Quincy Sun, The Patriot Ledger, Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, Faith Lutheran Church, St. John's Church on School St., and the loyal supporters of the market.

This season an organic farm from the Long Island Shelter will join Quincy Farmers' Market, featuring a variety of herbs and vegetables. Stillman, River Bend, and Freitas farms practice "Partners' with Nature" farming, and are certified IPM (Integrated Pest Management) farmers.

Look for Partners' with Nature information at the farmers' market. In the coming weeks there will be lettuce, radishes, strawberries, broccoli, hot house tomatoes, peas, fava beans, scallions, geraniums and bedding plants. Additional produce will be available as the season advances.

Consumers are encouraged to bring their own shopping bags to save on packaging. The market welcomes home-growers, full time farmers and garden clubs to host plant sales or other fund-raising events.

On Aug. 21, Quincy Farmers' Market will celebrate the National Farmers' Market week with a "Taste of Farmers' Market" event, and invites local restaurants to participate and promote their establishments.

Organizing the market is an all-volunteer effort. Call (617) 479-1601 for more information.

Durkin Resolve Seeks More State Police At Wollaston Beach

The City Council passed a resolve Monday night urging the Massachusetts State Police to increase police presence at Wollaston Beach during summer evenings.

The resolve, authored by Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin and co-sponsored by Councillors Joseph Newton and Gregory Hanley, is a response to, among other items, a June 10 incident where "a violent altercation involving scores of young adults occurred on the premises of Tony's Clam Shoppe."

"Business people described it as 'a near riot,'" said Durkin, who added the incident is part of a growing number of complaints at the beach concerning noise, public alcohol consumption, and the unruliness of teens and young adults.

Durkin, a strong advocate of the restoration efforts at Wollaston Beach, commended the State Police for their work but said a stronger presence was needed during the crowded summer months.

Renaissance Coffee And Tea Expands Into E-Commerce

Renaissance Coffee and Tea Emporium of Quincy announces the expansion of its core coffee and tea business to include e-commerce.

The Renaissance line of products will now be offered at the Internet address "www.getgreatcoffee.com."

As the name implies, said Renaissance owner Kevin McGurl, here is where customers will find excellent coffee and tea products.

McGurl founded the Renaissance Coffee and Tea Emporium in 1998 to fill a niche in the industry. "There are many large chains of retail coffee shops," says McGurl. "However, these chains do not offer the consistently fresh quality and close quality control that a dedicated shop can provide."

McGurl is also president of the Norfolk Downs Business Association.

McGurl said a key to the projected success of the venture is the extremely easy to use and attractive Internet site. "We are selling the same quality products that we offer in the existing facility. The Internet allows us to interact with customers from around the country," said McGurl.

The web site includes art work and photographs from the shop which convey the ambience found there. The shop was built by McGurl with the assistance of his father, well known artist James McGurl, Jr.

The Fleet Step Up program is a four-month intensive computer and personal development program designed to teach office and computer skills that are in high demand in the Greater Boston area. Council Accepts Land Gift

The City Council voted recently to accept property located at 127 Newbury St. as a land gift from Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services.

The house on the property will be demolished and the land converted to open space as required by the Federal Emergency Management Administration (FEMA) and Housing and Urban Development (HUD) programs which funded the property acquisition.

Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton said the 6,050 square foot parcel had been vacant and in disrepair for quite some time.

The property will now be managed by the Parks Department.

some departments seemed rather high, such as a $1,350,000 shortfall in "Fire Dept. - Personal Service," $455,000 in "Worker's Compensation," and $100,000 in "Judgments -- current expense."

McFarland explained that the Fire Department shortage came as a result of recently completed contracts with the firefighters' union, which required an increase in salaries and retroactive payments. As for the Worker's Compensation figure, McFarland reminded councillors that the city was still responsible to many employees from the former Quincy Hospital and would be for some time.

McFarland then deferred to City Solicitor Stephen McGrath, who explained that the $100,000 in "Judgments - Current Expense" was chiefly the result of an arbitration case which the city lost.

Council Approves $3 Million In Transfers To Balance Budget

Despite questions on specific figures, there was no real opposition to the transfers, especially items like snow removal whose budgets can only be estimated. "This is the usual end of the year overages and shortages, where the auditor and the mayor clear the budget," said Councillor Frank McCauley, chairman of the Finance Committee. "I've reviewed these figures and I move we adopt."

Councillor Daniel Raymond did raise some questions to both McFarland and Council President Paul Harold as to why some departments had extra money while other departments were allowed to overspend, unlike the City Council.

Harold responded that the rule was always that departments could not "knowingly overspend" and that any flagrant overspending or mismanagement could always be brought to the proper committee for review and action.

If the transfers had not been approved by June 30, said McFarland, the yearly budget would have been unbalanced.

The $3,209,138 was appropriated in the following manner:

Fire Dept. Personal Service, $1,350,000

COMMON CRUISE CONCERNS

Some common concerns among those who have never traveled on a cruise include the possibility of motion sickness, the fear of overeating and uncertainty about fitting in with the other passengers. While motion sickness may occur, many over the counter and prescription medications help fight nausea and make your cruise more enjoyable. Most cruise lines offer up to seven meals per day plus 24-hour room service, so it may seem as if all you'll do is eat; however, there are also excellent fitness/spa facilities and lighter fare options available. Finally, cruise ship passengers include young singles, honeymoon couples, families with children and retirees. Discuss any concerns with your travel agent before booking your cruise and you'll be guaranteed a dream vacation.

Cruising is one of the best ways to visit many exciting destinations on one trip - with no muss, no fuss. You don't need to pack and unpack between hotels, there are a variety of exciting activities and entertainment and the dining opportunities are not to be believed. If you have chosen a cruise for your next adventure, come talk to our travel agents at PRIME TRAVEL and hear all about their experiences. We're located at 500 Victory Road, Marina Bay, PH. 617-472-3697.
P.S.: On the longer cruises to more foreign locales, cruise passengers tend to be older.

How Many Want Long Island? Sign-Ups To View Tall Ships

The City of Quincy will hold sign-ups today (Thursday) and tomorrow (Friday) to see just how many residents want to view the Tall Ships from Long Island.

Then, said Mayor James Sheets Tuesday, the city will do everything in its power to accommodate as many residents as possible.

But there will be limits, Sheets warned, and John Keenan, the mayor's executive secretary, added that much of the decision will rest with Boston, which actually has control over Long Island.

"It is our expectation to accommodate as many Quincy families as possible," said Sheets, "but how many we accommodate will be limited by concerns of public safety and our ability to transport residents to and from Long Island. We continue to work with the City of Boston on the logistics of utilizing Long Island for viewing."

"However, one thing is certain: under no circumstances will people be allowed to walk to Long Island. Due to safety concerns, the only access will be by buses arranged by the City of Quincy."

The Tall Ships are scheduled to parade into Boston Harbor on Tuesday, July 11, beginning at 9 a.m.

Sign-up sessions for Quincy families interested in obtaining tickets to view the event from Long Island will be held today (Thursday) from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. and tomorrow (Friday) from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m.

The sign-ups for all residents will be held at the Squantum Community Center and the Richard J. Koch Park & Recreation Complex, located at 1 Merrymount Parkway.

Quincy residents will be asked to provide their names, addresses, telephone numbers, the number of tickets requested, and any accessibility needs.

Preliminary plans for transportation of residents on July 11 call for buses to leave from two points: one site at the Boston Scientific parking lot (site of the Jor-

Newton Would Have DPW Crew Help Summer Yardwaste Pickup

By CRAIG SALTERS

City Councillor Joseph Newton says what to do with grass clippings and other yardwaste has become as big an issue as road and sidewalk repair to his Ward 6 constituents.

"I've been knocking on doors, talking to people, and it's the biggest complaint I'm getting now," Newton said.

With that in mind, Newton has devised a plan to augment the monthly BFI yardwaste pick-ups currently in place and intends to introduce said plan in the form of a resolve at the council's only scheduled summer meeting July 17.

Newton's plan calls for a three or four man crew, comprised of DPW summer employees but led by a full-time DPW driver, to follow the city's normal trash pick-up schedule and routes but be responsible only for yardwaste, dropping it off at the DPW yard at Sea St.

"The goal here is simple," Newton said, "to increase the number of pick-ups."

City residents have been frustrated lately over a 1991 law, only recently enforced in Quincy, banning yardwaste from Massachusetts landfills because of the lack of space.

The DPW, responding to the overwhelming demand for yardwaste pickup, expanded an already existing program -- in which the city contracted BFI to pick-up yardwaste during four weeks in the spring and six weeks in the fall -- to include summer pickup of yardwaste the last week of every month. Residents were also encouraged to drop off their clippings at the DPW yard any time during DPW working hours.

At a recent meeting of the City Council, DPW Commissioner David Colton said that every week BFI is Change It To Kings Corner?

Many Quincy residents know of the tainted reputation possessed by Brewers Corner, but what about Kings Corner?

There isn't any, says Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, which is precisely why D'Amico is championing what he said was a resident suggestion to change the name of the intersection of Copeland, Granite, Smith, and Water

Sts. back to Kings Corner, its original name.

"It was actually named for a local pharmacist, not a brewer," D'Amico said, who added that even at its most literal level, the corner has a negative association with alcohol.

Of course, D'Amico said, the name alone isn't what gave Brewers Corner its reputation, but at a Monday night meeting with residents to discuss the revitalization of the area, D'Amico said that reputation should be, like the area's name itself, a thing of the past.

"The perception of the area is where we have to start first," said D'Amico. "Community Policing has done a fantastic job reducing nuisance crimes and making the neighborhood safe, but that's not the perception."

The Monday night meeting, D'Amico said, saw the design consultant firm of Community Design Partnership, hired by Quincy 2000, discuss two main points to the 25 or so residents who showed up for the meeting: the current retail, residential, and industrial makeup of Brewers Corner; and what Brewers Corner might look like in the future.

Possible revitalization changes, said D'Amico, include resident suggestions

New QHS Site Debate Has No Construction Impact Until August

A proposed site switch for the new Quincy High School could be discussed until August 1 without impacting construction plans at its current site off Quincy Avenue, said Mayor James Sheets.

The mayor said he was in agreement with DPW Commissioner David Colton that alternative site proposals, such as one on Coddington St., could be entertained and cost-estimated for the next few weeks without jeopardizing the scheduled opening of the $51 million high school in 2004.

"David (Colton) is busy looking into the cost factors on different issues," said Sheets, such as the demolition of the Center for Technical Education (CTE) and construction at various sites.

"He will then plug those costs into alternative site plans, wherever they may be."

The new high school had been scheduled for construction on a site just off Quincy Avenue, which the city purchased in 1998, until questions of size, cost, and adequate parking caused the mayor to give one last reconsideration of the site before it was too late to turn back.

The Coddington St. proposal being discussed calls for a new high school to be built on Coddington St. With the CTE demolished to create additional parking. The Quincy Avenue site would then be sold at a profit, enabling city officials to purchase an entirely new site for Central Middle School, which was originally supposed to be moved into the current QHS and its former building, the oldest school site in the city, closed down.

Sheets also said that any objections to building on the Faxon property originally deeded to the city for "park purposes only" had long since been cleared up. "Yes, the Faxon Property Deed specified that (park purposes only)," Sheets said. "But legislation was secured during the administration of Amelio Della Chiesa which made it possible, so we're OK from that standpoint."

A Special Tribute To Special Lady

The finishing touch to a special tribute for a special lady -- Abigail Adams -- is set for tomorrow in her beloved adopted hometown.

The life-sized statue of Abigail at about age 32 and her son, John Quincy, as a 10-year-old, will be formally dedicated at a 12:30 p.m. ceremony beside United First Parish Church across from City Hall.

The statue is just a few feet from the church crypt where she, her husband, John, son, John Quincy and daughter-in-law Louisa Catherine are entombed.

Co-hosting the dedication are the National Park Service, the Quincy Partnership and the City of Quincy.

The statue of Abigail and young John Quincy standing on a base of Quincy granite with her hand on his shoulder in a motherly gesture is a thing of beauty, in bronze.

The statue was erected in 1997 thanks to the Quincy Partnership, a group of community active but publicly shy business leaders who raised over $60,000 to commission noted sculptor Lloyd Lillie to create it.

But something--the finishing touch--is being added: appropriate motherly words of advice from Abigail to young John Quincy, the future sixth President of the United States.

At the base of the statue now, as those attending tomorrow's dedication will discover, are inscribed the words of a letter written by Abigail to John Quincy in 1777 when he was 10 years old and in Europe with his father, John Adams, who was on a diplomatic mission:

"Improve your understanding of acquiring usefull (sic) knowledge and virtue, such as will render you an ornament to society, an Honour to your Country, and a Blessing to Your parents.

"You ever affectionate mother.

"AA."

Abigail is usually remembered as the wife of one president and the mother of another, an honor held by no other woman in history. (Barbara Bush could change that, depending on this year's Presidential election results.)

But Abigail was a remarkable woman in her own right and one ahead of her time.

Born in Weymouth, Nov. 11, 1744, she was the daughter of Rev. William Smith, a Congregational minister and Elizabeth Quincy Smith.

She had no formal schooling. But through tutoring by both her father and mother and reading, she became a well known writer of letters that have helped chronicle the nation's early history.

She was an early advocate of women's rights.

In one of her famous letters to her husband who was often away on his country's business, she wrote:

"In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make, I desire that you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors.

To which she strongly added:

"Do not put such unlimited powers into the hands of the husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could."

She was a strong and brave woman, too. Often left alone for long periods of time to care for the children and run the farm below Penn's Hill while her husband was away in the service of the young nation.

And those periods could be very long. In fact, early in their marriage when he was in France trying to develop strong ties with that country, Abigail sailed to Paris to meet him. It was the first time they were together in five years.

They were the first President and the first First Lady to occupy the White House. Philadelphia was the capital when Adams took office as the second President succeeding George Washington March 4, 1797.

John and Abigail moved into the White House in November, 1800, when it was being called the President's Palace.

Abigail was also a practical woman. She thought nothing of hanging laundry by the fireplace in the East Room. It may not have been decorative but to her it made good sense. Many of the rooms had not been finished when they moved in and the East Room was one of the warmer ones for drying wet clothing.

Adams and Jefferson were close friends and political allies during and after the Revolutionary War and worked together in producing the Declaration of Independence.

Jefferson, as the author, and Quincy-born John Hancock as the first signer, usually get top billing in the history books when it comes to that precious document.

Hancock's signature--with a bold, fancy flourish "so King George III can see it without his spectacles"--has become probably the most famous autograph in history.

But Adams played a key, if not as glamorous a role, in bringing the Declaration about.

Jefferson himself praised Adams as "the most efficient agent in procuring a public Declaration of Independence."

And as noted author David McCullough, now working on a book about Adams and Jefferson recently put it: "Adams drove it through Congress."

McCullough, speaking at a fundraiser for the Thomas Crane Public Library earlier this month, also had a special tribute for Abigail.

After praising Adams as "a man of extraordinary integrity and a life-long passionate patriot," he added: "And most importantly, John Adams was the husband of Abigail Adams."

Adams and Jefferson later had a falling out and became bitter political enemies. Jefferson defeated him in his bid for a second term.

Adams was so furious he refused to say in Washington for Jefferson's inaugural in 1801 and came home to Quincy and the Adams Mansion.

Abigail helped patch things up between the pair through letters to Jefferson and they became friends again.

Ironically, both died on the same day, July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

Among Adams' final words as he lay dying at the Adams Mansion after collapsing in a wing chair in his second floor study were: "Jefferson survives!"

He thought Jefferson had outlived him. But Jefferson had died earlier that same day at his home in Virginia.

News didn't travel very fast back then before radio and television. There were no instant news bulletins. If there were, can you imagine what that day would have been like: "We interrupt this program for this news bulletin. Former Presidents John Adams and Thomas Jefferson are dead! Both died today at their homes on this 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, this nation's birth certificate that they gave us. We will bring you more details as we receive them. Stay tuned."

And the scramble would be on for reaction from Washington leaders including Adams' son, John Quincy Adams, who was the president then.

Adams was just three months and 15 days from his 91st birthday at the time of his death. He survived Abigail, his wife of 54 years--by eight years. She died in 1818, a month shy of 74.

Adams lived to see his son John Quincy become the sixth president. Sadly, Abigail did not. She never knew that she would be both the wife of one president and the mother of another.

Abigail was the woman behind two men who helped shape the destiny of a fledgling nation.

Her statue and now her inscribed words at its base, will be a reminder to all that Abigail Adams was indeed, a very remarkable woman.

A woman who did some shaping herself.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS OLD POSTCARD is a view of Mears Avenue on the top of Great Hill in Houghs Neck. It was addressed simply to Mrs. Powers, Hudson, Mass., and was mailed from Quincy in 1915. Either Hudson was a very tiny town then, or the postal service was a lot more efficient than it is today. Mears Avenue was named after James Mears who owned and operated the Great Hill House, a hotel located at the foot of the hill. The Houghs Neck Drug Store published the postcard.

Korean Hostilities Peak Draft Registrations

By PAUL HAROLD

William Edwards, head of Quincy Selective Service Board 27, reported that the outbreak of hostilities in Korea has led to a sharp increase in draft registrations.

Previous to the Korea situation many draft age youths had simply forgotten the requirement of registration. From June 19-23, only 23 registered with Board 27 at its offices in the Adams Academy. That number jumped to 77 from June 26-30.

The state director of the Selective Service was Wollaston resident, Col. Chester Furbish.

QUARRY CLOSED TO SWIMMERS

City Manager William Deegan ordered that Faulkner Quarry be closed to swimmers from 4 p.m. to dawn, following complaints of Cranch Hill residents.

Residents cited naked swimming, profane language, the stripping of fruit trees and nuisance vandalism to properties near the quarry.

Deegan said he would meet with police officials and DPW Commissioner Charles Herbert to work out a permanent policy regarding swimming at the quarry.

END OF RENT CONTROL CONSIDERED

The Suffolk-Norfolk rent advisory board took under consideration the recommendation to decontrol rents in Quincy.

Paul Reddam, chairman of the board, said that the Quincy landlords' petition of June 7th was still under consideration. The board was reviewing 154 pages of testimony from city landlords and tenants.

Paving Front Yards Will Hurt Neighborhoods

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Growing up in Quincy in the late '40s and '50s, I recall how my parents took great pride in caring for our home on Sherman St. in Wollaston.

My father instilled in me the importance of "putting your best foot forward." Every week he cut the lawn with a push mower, and trimmed the hedges and shrubs with a manual hedge clipper. Our trash was kept out of site in the backyard until trash day. We didn't have a dryer, so our laundry was always hung on a clothesline in the backyard.

As a result, the front of our house always look neat and presentable. Back then every family in our neighborhood worked towards that same common goal. Today, we're still at it, as Sherman Street looks better than it ever has.

Our city has made tremendous strides in the last 10 years with improvements to our business districts, our schools, and our park and recreation areas. We are fortunate to live in one of the best cities in Massachusetts. However, we are at a crossroads in deciding the direction of our neighborhoods.

Allowing people to pave their front yards will diminish property values, create flooding problems for nearby neighbors, and drive people away from our city. Fortunately, Councillors Raymondi and McDermott have recognized the need to address this problem. We can only hope that the rest of the City Council will join them and point us in the right direction.

Council Should Be Proactive In Tourism Efforts

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As National Park Service Superintendent of Adams National Historical Park, I want to recognize City Council President Paul Harold, City Councillor-at-Large Francis X. McCauley, and City Councillor Patrick McDermott for their support of tourism in Quincy, by seeking a 30 percent allocation of the revenue generated from the recently established Hotel/Motel Occupancy Tax.

As you are well aware, Quincy possesses a unique opportunity to promote its heritage through tourism. Historic sites and natural resources throughout the city deserve to be protected, preserved, interpreted, and accessible to the public. The proceeds from this hotel tax will provide critical funding to not only protect these resources, but also to develop and expand related visitor services, which foster Quincy tourism through a combined local effort.

Since the Quincy City Council voted to allocate only 15 percent of the hotel tax for tourism, we encourage their advocacy for additional funding through the city budget process. With a commitment of local funding and a formalized program to include a tourism bureau, Quincy would be competitive and qualify for grant programs at the state and federal level.

Adams National Historical Park welcomes the opportunity to partner in the development of Quincy's tourism. We are pleased to report more than 87,000 people visited the park in 1999 and participated in either an interpretive tour, and educational program, or a special event. As a National Park unit, we also benefit from international recognition resulting in a 40 percent increase in visitation in recent years.

However, Quincy's other attractions are not experiencing the same success. Lack of appropriated funding has prohibited the city from fully realizing its tourism and economic potential. This hotel tax funding source will provide the opportunity for a professional organization to develop a formalized program to promote Quincy, enhancing its cultural, historical, natural, and recreational resources while creating economic benefit to the community.

In 1994, the National Park Service conducted a study entitled The Quincy Heritage Agenda, funded by Congress for the purpose of developing a tourism plan for Quincy. In 1996 Daniel Yeager of Yeager Communications conducted a similar study entitled Quincy Tourism Strategic Plan, and in April 2000, Importance and Poten- tial of Tourism in Quincy. All three studies resulted in major recommendations for promotion of a tourism agenda for Quincy. As the Quincy City Council moves forward to provide tourism funding, we encourage them to utilize the existing three studies to initiate an aggressive program.

We look forward to the City Council's continued support for tourism funding. Long-term, consistent sources of funding and the establishment of a tourism bureau will insure that tourism efforts in Quincy will be proactive, continuous, and successful.

Rice/Zucchini Cakes

I had hoped the weatherman was wrong when he predicted a cool day last Sunday. And the sun came out early in the day. So I invited family members to come and enjoy a cook-out poolside.

Needless to say, it was 55 degrees by the time the food was served. Little by little everyone ended up eating inside. Today's recipe is a fritter (or rice cake) made with left-over boiled rice from the Chinese restaurant the night before. That night my brother Phil and sister-in-law Teresa came by also to eat outside, but ended up indoors. We ended by up ordering the Chinese food and had the leftover rice.

The rice cake is made with zucchini, because that's what I had in the refrigerator. The combination turned out great and one that I will use again.

Rice/zucchini cakes
2 cups cooked rice

1 small zucchini
2 eggs
2-3 tablespoons flour
1/4 cup grated romano or parmesan cheese salt and pepper
corn flake or bread crumbs for coating
3 tablespoons or enough oil for frying

First, shred the zucchini on a cheese grater. In a bowl, place the rice, uncooked zucchini, eggs, flour and grated cheese, salt and pepper. Mix until mixture almost resembles pancake mixture. Form into small balls (bigger than a golf ball) and coat them in the crumbs. Fry in hot oil, turning until brown and drain on a paper towel. I kept them in a warming oven until all the guests were ready to chow down.

The fritters got raves! For those who do not like or have a zucchini handy, the rice cakes can be made alone and just as delicious!

Park Service Events Commemorate Adams Family

The National Park Service, Adams National Historical Park announces two programs to commemorate significant events in American History and in the Adams family's story.

On Sunday, July 2, Adams National Historical Park and The Bostonian Society will invite the public to play a part in one of our nation's greatest dramas, the passage of the Resolution for Independence by the Continental Congress July 2, 1776.

There will be two sessions of Congress on Sunday, July 2 at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. at the Old State House in Boston as part of Boston Harborfest 2000. Members of the audience will assume the roles of the delegates to the Continental Congress who debate the issues and pass the Resolution.

The importance of the passage of this Resolution was noted by John Adams in a letter to his wife, Abigail, dated July 3, 1776 in which he wrote: "Yesterday the greatest question was decided which was ever debated in America; and a greater perhaps never was nor will be, decided upon men. A resolution was passed without one dissenting colony, that those United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states."

On Tuesday, July 4, at Adams National Historical Park in Quincy, members of the audience will assume the roles of delegates to the Continental Congress and will represent their colony in a debate that will determine the fate of a nation! Led by the "Atlas of Independence," John Adams, the debate becomes heated as the time draws short before the final vote is called.

There will be three sessions of Congress at the Adams National Historic Park "Old House" located at 135 Adams St. in Quincy Tuesday, July 4 at 10 a.m., 1 p.m. and 7 p.m. Following the evening program the delegates and the public are invited to take part in a candlelight walk from the Adams National Historic Park "Old House" to the United First Parish Church in Quincy Center where there will be an official reading of the Declaration of Independence, after which bells will proclaim liberty throughout the land and all patriots will be invited to replenish themselves with cake and beverage at the Adams National Historical Park Visitor Center, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy.

Following the July 2 and July 4 programs, each delegate signs the Declaration of Independence, rings the Liberty Bell, receives a copy of the Declaration and savors their victory by eating a slice of Liberty Cake!

All programs have a limited capacity and will be reserved on a first-come first-serve basis. Those who wish to attend should call the Adams National Historical Park Visitor Center at (617) 770-1175 to reserve a place at one of the sessions or for more information about these or other programs.

Famous Lobster Bisque Recipe At Hancock Park Dinner

Residents at Hancock Park Rehabilitation & Nursing Center and Allerton House at Hancock Park Assisted Living Community will have a lavish "Candlelight by the Sea" dinner tomorrow (Friday), featuring Boston's Anthony's Pier 4 famous lobster bisque recipe.

The dish has been served at three Presidential inaugurations, and will now be prepared by Hancock Park's own chefs, Susan Huskins and Michael Legault, for their residents. Huskins and Legault recently visited Anthony's Pier 4 Restaurant and met with owner Anthony Athanas and his chefs to learn how to prepare a number of Pier 4 specialty items, including lobster bisque and the famous broiled scrod.

"Our residents have always highly regarded our food quality and service, but joining with Mr. Athanas, a restaurant legend, will add even more flavor and excitement to their food experience," said Jim Foley, Senior Director of Food Service for Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group.

Athanas may also join residents at Hancock Park for the meal.

Hancock Park is a 142-bed skilled rehabilitation and nursing center that also provides sub-acute care, specialized Alzheimer's programs, Adult Day Health, and assisted living residences. It is owned and managed by Norwell-based Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group, the most trusted name in senior and rehabilitative healthcare services on the South Shore for over 50 years.

Welch Healthcare is a founding member of AURUM, a post-acute network of senior care services.

dan Marsh warehouse) and the other, for Squantum residents, from the Squantum School.

Schedules for the buses are being prepared and will be published in advance of the event. It is expected that transportation will be provided to Long Island during the morning hours only, with residents being transported from the island in the afternoon.

"Once we have an idea of the level of interest Quincy residents have in viewing the Tall Ships from Long Island, we will be able to finalize our planning with the City of Boston, make the transportation arrangements, and mail tickets accordingly," Sheets said.

The mayor stressed that the event is an alcohol free event and also stated that no children under the age of 18 will be allowed on the island without an adult.

"We are working very hard with the City of Boston to make this event as accessible and as memorable as possible for Quincy residents," stated the mayor.

Keenan echoed the mayor's position that the sign-ups were crucial to gauging city interest in viewing the Tall Ships but reminded Quincy residents that Boston, which owns the island, would ultimately decide the overall numbers. "Boston will make the final call," Keenan said, "and their major concern is public safety."

July 22 Party To Honor Great Hill Teacher John Hutchinson

Past Houghs Neck students of Great Hill Elementary School teacher John "Hutch" Hutchinson are organizing an 80th birthday party to honor their former teacher and establish a scholarship in his name.

The scholarship will be earmarked for a Houghs Neck student and will be administered by the Houghs Neck Community Council.

Time and place of the party have yet to be determined, but the date will be Saturday, July 22, one day before Hutchinson's actual birthday.

Joseph Brill, one of the organizers of the event, is putting the call out to any friends, colleagues, or former students of Hutchinson who would like to participate in the event or make a donation.

Hutchinson, a World War II veteran and Dorchester native, became a teacher after the war and taught fifth grade for 19 years at the former Great Hill Elementary School which was located at the current site of Brill Field.

Brill recalled that Hutchinson turned down many offers of seemingly bigger and better jobs to remain a fifth grade teacher at Great Hill. "He had a great love for Houghs Neck students," Brill said.

Those looking to volunteer or make a donation or who would like more information can call one of the following: Joseph Brill, (617) 770-4813; Donna (Brill) Rowan, (617) 786-0654; Clem Brill, (617) 770-4813; Terry (Provost) Murphy, (617) 479-1004; or Eileen Timcoe, (617) 479-4107.

Quincy Ad Agency Develops Two Media Campaigns On Smoking And Underaged Drinking

Tiffany Williams and Company of Quincy, a full-service advertising, public relations and event planning firm, has developed two separate media campaigns focusing on the messages of second-hand smoke and underaged drinking.

For the South Shore Boards of Health Collaborative Tobacco Control Program, encompassing 14 towns in the South Shore, the company developed a full media campaign utilizing newspaper advertisements in all South Shore daily and weekly papers, radio spots on WATD, WPLM and WJDA, and TV commercials airing on Discovery Channel, Lifetime, Animal Planet, VH-1, CNN and TBS.

The campaign, pointing out the dangers of second-hand smoke, incorporated many South Shore residents in its message, all commenting on how second-hand smoke affects their lives.

For Impact Quincy, the company created a media campaign focusing on underaged drinking among youth 12-17. The message was displayed in all Quincy newspapers and all Quincy T buses, using pictures of Quincy kids in its message.

The campaign also included a TV commercial featuring Aerosmith tribute band Draw the Line, which is airing on MTV, WWF Wrestling, Nickelodeon, VH-1 and Comedy Central. Both commercials were produced by New England Media Productions in Braintree.

$250,000 Grant From State Street For Germantown Center Project

State Street Corporation will join residents today (Thursday) from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Snug Harbor Elementary School, 333 Palmer St., to celebrate a $250,000 grant that will assure the future of the Germantown Neighborhood Center.

addition to be built at the Snug Harbor School, creating a permanent home for the neighborhood center.

The new space will make room for youth and community service programs that are currently housed in a classroom at the school. Among those programs are after-school/drop-in services for local youths, daycare and adult learning programs.

Creodon Honored For Leadership In School Breakfast Campaign

At a recent State House ceremony, Project Bread—The Walk for Hunger honored four key school superintendents, including Eugene Creodon of Quincy, for their leadership in a statewide Superintendents' School Breakfast Campaign.

"Massachusetts schools served nearly one million more breakfasts this past school year than during the previous," said Ellen Parker, executive director of Project Bread—"And today we are proud to recognize four school superintendents who were instrumental in leading that effort."

The Superintendents' School Breakfast Campaign is led by state Commissioner of Education David Driscoll.

It brings together the talents of superintendents who have successfully expanded school breakfast programs in their own districts to reinforce their own work and provide models for other communities.

"Breakfast at school is vitally linked to better behavior, higher test scores and improved grades," Parker said. "But every school faces a unique set of challenges to get kids to participate. These superintendents have each overcome different barriers to make breakfast a critical part of the school day and attract more kids."

The ceremony took place in Nurses Hall at the State House and featured remarks by Lt. Governor Jane Swift, Senate President Tom Birmingham and House Speaker Tom Finneran. Deputy Commissioner of Education Alan Safran recognized the unique contributions of the four superintendents, who also included Thomas Payzant of Boston, Carol Tye of Revere, and Gerald Croteau of Taunton.

Project Bread's Massachusetts Child Hunger Initiative helps communities make smarter use of federal nutrition programs that are underused—including school meals, summer meals, food stamps and WIC. The Initiative seeks to eliminate child hunger in Massachusetts by making these vital nutritional programs available wherever kids live, learn and play.

McDermott: School Grounds Takeover 'Money Well Spent'

City business leaders have been questioning recently why a budget and personnel increase for the Parks Department to maintain school grounds was not matched with a corresponding budget and personnel cut for the School Department, which will no longer have that responsibility.

Recently, Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott, a strong proponent of the School Department takeover, made his case before a meeting of the Quincy Business Council.

The council voted March 20 to transfer maintenance of school grounds from the School Department to the Parks Department, appropriating an initial $120,000 capital outlay for new equipment and $70,000 for salaries. The Parks Department will now receive a $270,000 budget increase to handle the new responsibilities but no corresponding cuts were made in the School Department budget.

"There was no transfer of money or personnel from the School Department. How did that happen?" QBC member Edward Keohane of Keohane Funeral Home asked. "We still don't know the rationale of that decision."

McDermott answered that it was not a case of redundancy, as the QBC feared, but a case of school grounds traditionally underfunded now being properly funded. "The current personnel in the School Department just doesn't provide for the proper upkeep of the schools," McDermott said. "There's one or two janitorial staff at best at each school and they're responsible for everything, from soup to nuts."

McDermott praised the various PTO's for their constant involvement, and even cited the case of a middle school principal mowing school grass on his own time, but said the perennial understaffing has led to some school grounds looking "a disgrace."

"It hasn't been a priority before and now we're making it a priority," McDermott said. "The school department will still handle the day-to-day duties but for things like mulch, new trees, and a system of maintenance, we need to prioritize."

Emphasizing the remarkable upkeep of the city's parks under the leadership of Thomas Koch -- executive director of Parks, Forestry, and Cemetery -- McDermott added, "Money given to Tom Koch's department is money well spent."

July 4th Tips To Help Drivers Steer Clear Of Mishaps

As millions of Americans take to the roads this July 4th weekend, the Shell Oil Company has some advice for drivers looking for another kind of freedom:

Freedom from highway accidents.

By properly getting ready for that holiday road trip, and then knowing what to do if a problem occurs, motorists can go a long way toward minimizing the kinds of mishaps that are all too common on crowded thoroughfares. That's why Shell has put together a Top 10 list of July 4th safety tips, based on information from Shell's driving safety booklets.

1. Before you leave home, make sure your vehicle is up for the task. Check tires for proper inflation. Make sure the windshield, headlights and tail-lights are clean. Check all fluid levels, belts, hoses and clamps, and refill or replace as necessary.

2. Make sure your trunk is properly stocked with items that will come in handy in the event of an accident. These include a fire extinguisher that's unexpired and securely stored; flares or reflective devices; jack and lug wrench; properly inflated spare tire; flashlight with extra batteries; jumper cables; empty, approved gasoline container; blankets, and umbrella, poncho or rain-coats.

3. If your battery goes dead, know how to jumpstart it safely:

- Position vehicles so jumper cables can reach, but vehicles aren't touching.

- Connect one end of the Red cable to the Positive terminal of the dead battery; and the other to the positive terminal of the good battery.

- Connect one of the Black cable to the Negative terminal of the good battery and the other to an engine bolt head or other piece of non-moving metal.

- Make sure the jumper cables are away from moving engine parts.

- Start the engine with the good battery and run it at a moderate speed.

- Start the engine of the vehicle with the dead battery according to your owner's manual. Once it starts, reduce the engine speed to idle.

- Remove the jumper cables in reverse order, starting with the Black cable from the engine bolt or metal connection on the car with the dead battery.

- The engine needs to run for 20 minutes -- which can include driving time -- to start recharging the battery.

4. Get out of a skid by taking your foot off the gas, and then turning the steering wheel in the direction you want the front of the car to go. This not only helps straighten the car out, but also can help regain traction.

5. In case of a blow-out, know what to expect. If the front tire blows, the vehicle will pull hard to the side of the blow-out. Don't hit the brakes. Hang on to the wheel tightly with your hands in the 9 o'clock and 3 o'clock position, take your foot off the gas and concentrate on staying in your lane. Then slow down and pull off the road to a safe location. If the back tire blows, the rear of the car will weave back and forth. But you should handle it the same way.

6. If you see an accident and want to stop to help, pass well beyond the wreck before signaling the pulling off the road. This keeps you from blocking the view of emergency vehicles and gives emergency crews room to work. Also, turn on your emergency flashers and raise your hood to call attention to yourself.

7. When traveling with children, keep in mind that the safest place for them is the back seat. This keeps them far from the impact in a head-on collision and away from the passenger-side air bag. And always use seatbelts.

8. Remember the 8-80 rule for kids: children are usually big enough from seat belts when they're 8 years old and weigh 80 pounds. Otherwise, use child-safety seats.

9. Trucks need room to maneuver, so give them some space. Stay 100 to 250 behind the trailer. Don't pass on the right or cut in front of trucks, and stay out of their blind spots. If you can't see the truck driver's face in the side mirrors, the truck driver can't see you.

10. If you're changing lanes, don't rely solely on your rear- and side-view mirrors. There are probably blind spots in your own car, so it's a good idea to quickly turn and visually check for other vehicles next to you before pulling over.

CONDITIONED RESPONSE

If your vehicle's air conditioning unit produces a foul-smelling odor, the problem may be due to fungus growth in the under-dash air-conditioning case that holds the evaporator (the heat exchanger that pulls warmth out of the passenger compartment). The solution to this problem rests with having the technician clean out and disinfect the evaporator. After that, vehicle owners can help prevent a recurrence of the problem by using the air recirculation switch and the MAX A/C switch sparingly (during initial cool down on sweltering days). The recirculation switch, which is usually activated on the MAX A/C setting, deprives the humid air in the evaporator case of outside air, thereby setting the stage for fungus growth in the humid, stagnant environment.

For most of your car's maintenance needs, including its air conditioning system, rely on our ASE Certified technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Learn for yourself why so many of your friends and neighbors turn to us to keep their family cars in top condition. For the best service in town, we're here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. HINT: A check of your vehicle's air-conditioning system also involves a look at the evaporator-tray drain, which, if plugged, could be blocking moisture from draining to the ground.

Quincy Flood Control Program Wins HUD Award

Housing and Urban Development Secretary Andrew Cuomo announces that Hazard Mitigation Control Program, Quincy's Floodplain Areas in Quincy, has received HUD's Best Practices Award because it serves as a model for other communities around the country to follow.

Hazard Mitigation Control Program, Quincy's Floodplain Areas in Quincy, competed with over 2,900 other best practices nominees across the country for regional and program awards and is among over 1,400 finalists for competition at the national level for one of the 100 "Best of the Best" awards to be honored during HUD's 2000 Best Practices and Technical Assistance Symposium.

"Almost every year, some members of Congress propose deep cuts in HUD's budget because they say HUD grantees aren't doing anything important, anything innovative with HUD funds. Indeed, our budget is under assault this year again for that reason," said HUD Secretary Andrew Cuomo.

"But the work being done by Hazard Mitigation Control Program, Quincy's Floodplain Areas in Quincy, MA, is a clear and compelling demonstration of how effectively and efficiently HUD funds are being used across the country to expand the reach and to improve the quality of the services HUD and its grantees provide to the American people."

Thousands of people are expected to attend the symposium -- called Building a Better Tomorrow: Sharing, Preparing, and Succeeding -- in Washington on Aug. 7-10. The "Best Practices" designation identifies leaders in managing a HUD program, project, management tool, or technique making a significant difference in the lives of the people in the communities they serve.

A HUD best practice must be replicable in other areas of the country, region, or local jurisdiction and generate a significant and demonstrable positive impact on those being served or managed. It is a program or project, management tool, or technique that fulfills at least one of the following characteristics: 1) Effectively uses partnerships among government agencies, nonprofit organizations, and private businesses. 2) Demonstrates creative problem solving. 3) Overcomes serious obstacles to program implementation. 4) Demonstrates efficiencies achieved (such as time saved or resources saved).

More than 2,900 nominations were received nationwide in the following categories: Fighting for Fair Housing, Increasing Affordable Housing and Home Ownership, Reducing Homelessness, Promoting Jobs and Economic Opportunity, Empowering People and Communities, and Restoring Public Trust.

Local winners will move forward to compete for both geographical and program category awards. Each of HUD's ten Secretary's Representatives and regional office staff will select 12 of these local winners (total of 120) as geographic of "Simply the Best" winners to be forwarded for competition at the national level.

of bakeries and cafes, business that rely more on pedestrian traffic than adding cars to the already dense area.

D'Amico also said that agreements were made with one of the areas largest land owners and that the process to develop those parcels would begin immediately.

On the negative side, D'Amico said residents still voiced concerns about the inordinate amount of incidents at The Hat Rack on Copeland St., a problem which was still affecting the neighborhood. "There has to be a heightened scrutiny of that particular business," D'Amico said.

D'Amico also said he wished more people had attended the meeting, attributing the lack of numbers to his sending out a mailing to residents only rather than owners of the actual property, owners who might have seen a stronger connection to the events at the meetings.

D'Amico, however, was upbeat. "It's a start and we have to see this thing through," he said.

Presidents Blues Festival A Big Crowd Pleaser

GOOD WEATHER and a light breeze brought out one of the best crowds yet for the 8th Annual Yard Rock Blues Festival held Sunday at Veterans Memorial Stadium, estimated at close to 5,000 fans for the day-long event.

Sunday. The legion band was on hand for ceremonies marking the 50th anniversary of the start of the Korean War, which took place outside the stadium at the Korean War Memorial.

HOLLY HARRIS, disc jockey for WBOS-FM and one of the emcees for Sunday's bluesfest, received the Yard Rock's "Statesperson of the Year" award for her dedication and friendship to both blues musicians and fans. David Beakey Receives Schweitzer Fellowship

Tufts University graduate student David Beakey has received the prestigious Albert Schweitzer fellowship, which will enable him to design and implement a health-related community service project in Quincy.

Beakey, a second year health communication student in the Emerson College-Tufts University joint master's degree program, will encourage senior patients at the Quincy Medical Center to attend their psychiatric wellness programs by promoting its health benefits.

The annual Schweitzer Fellows Program was established in Oct. 1991 to highlight healthcare students whose community spirit echoes the vision of Dr. Albert Schweitzer, a German minister and physician dedicated to a medical philosophy of helping the underserved.

Jane Mudge, regional director of Shine, serving health information needs of

Weekly Bathing Beach Water Testing Underway

The Quincy Health Department began its summer water sampling program at 10 city beaches yesterday (Wednesday) and will continue sampling every Wednesday through Aug. 30.

The samples will be taken between one and two hours before high tide, the results analyzed for fecal coliform counts by a private laboratory and the results made available to the media.

A 24-hour recorded message outlining the results of the sampling will be available by calling 617-376-1288.

The MDC will collect and analyze water sample at four locations along Wollaston Beach and the results reported to beach managers and the Quincy Health Department by Thursday or Friday of each week.

Results will also be communicated to lifeguards at the MDC beaches who will raise flags indicating water quality. A blue flag indicates the water quality is good for swimming; a red flag means elevated bacteria counts make the water unsafe for bathers.

A standard of 200 or greater fecal coliform colonies will be taken as an indication of potential health risk and the beaches will be posted with warning signs that will remain in place until a count below 200 is attained.

The samples can be skewed by rainfall since sewage can be discharged into the harbor from pipes and drains that contain overflow wastewater in combination with rainwater after a quarter of an inch of rainfall in a day.

On such occasions, swimmers and bathers are advised to stay out of the water for 48 hours after a rainfall to allow for the natural flushing action of the tides to cleanse the water.

A brochure on the Bathing Beach Water Sampling Program is available from the Health Department by contacting 376-1278.

License Granted For S. Quincy Italian Festival

The License Board granted a one day beer and wine license Tuesday to the South Quincy Italian Festival Committee for their 16th annual festival Sept. 9 following an agreement between Ward 4 Councillor Mike D'Amico and the committee.

Before a vote was taken at the board's last meeting, D'Amico asked that the vote be delayed because he wanted to have a neighborhood meeting and also to appoint a representative from the area to "have input" in the event.

D'Amico said they were now "on the right track" and that he will attend meetings with the committee and also host a neighborhood meeting before the festival takes place. He said one of the changes might be a neighborhood parade preceding the event held earlier in the day signifying the start of the festival.

Harry Bertoni and Richard Speranzo members of the committee appeared before the board with D'Amico.

Newton Resolve Seeks Citizens Fire Academy

Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton introduced a resolve at last Monday's City Council meeting requesting Mayor Sheets and Quincy Fire Department Chief Thomas Gorman to explore the possibility of creating a Citizens Fire Academy.

The program, Newton said, would be similar to the successful citizen training courses run by the Quincy Police Department.

Newton said such courses could help educate residents about the QFD and highlight fire prevention and safety measures.

The resolution was sent to the council's Public Safety Committee for study.

'Summit Meeting' On Noise Complaint At Varsity Club

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

In an effort to soothe a neighbor's recurring complaint against the Varsity Club, 33 Independence Ave., the License Board took the matter under consideration Tuesday after a lengthy meeting between the neighbor, Chairman Joseph Shea and club owner Adam Kessler.

Ann Corcoran who lives with her mother Josephine, 57 Independence Ave., read a letter from her mother complaining about patrons talking loud after closing time, noise from the refrigeration, and motorcycles parked on the sidewalk.

The closing time of 12 midnight, and the closing of the gates in the rear of the building, were questioned by Corcoran who said she was told by the police when she called to complain that closing time was 1 a.m.

Chairman Joseph Shea reminded everyone that Kessler was told he had to close at 12 midnight even though by law, he can open until 1 a.m.

Shea said as an obligation to the community to see that the neighbors are happy, there was an agreement between the neighbors and the former owner of the Varsity Club that hour would be 12 midnight. It was not officially changed on the license because if something transpired they would not have to go the Alcohol Beverage Control Commission, Shea said.

Kessler told the board that although abiding by the 12 midnight ruling, he requested that the club be open until 1 a.m. just like "all other business in the area." and "utilize his liquor license the way it supposed to be."

Kessler said the gates are closed by 12:30 a.m., but a cleaning company who have their own keys come in between 4 and 5 a.m., then lock the gates.

Kessler, who has owned the club since 1993 said he tries to run a "good clean establishment" and has responded to any and all complaints. He said however, "no matter what we do, certain people are going to complain." He cited the same neighbors "over and over again" as complaining.

After much discussion between Corcoran, Kessler and Shea, Police Chief Thomas Frane asked Det. Lt. Robert Perchard to "shed some light" about whether Kessler is abiding by the rules set by the board.

Perchard said he had given permission for the motorcycles be parked on the grass area of the sidewalk, but said he would now see that they are parked in the back of the restaurant.

Perchard added that there have been "no violations" and patrons seemed "well behaved" at the club.

He said when people leave bars they are sometimes noisy, and that the "tough situation happens all over."

He noted that Kessler "runs a nice place and stays on top of things," adding that sometimes people are "just listening for noises"

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said in the area of the Varsity Club is the only drug store, the CVS store, which does a big business and also noted that a car door slamming at 4 p.m. in the afternoon sounds a lot different than when it slams at 11 p.m. at night.

He said he had seen a big change in the club and that the young people who used to go there have "grown up" and there is much less "rowdiness."

Shea said he will send Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue to re-visit the matter of noise from the refrigeration and asked Perchard to re-double his efforts in visting the club.

Professional movers do their best to pick up and deliver your goods unscathed, but how can you recover when damage does occur?

The answer is liability protection, and before you move you should understand the mover's liability for your belongings, and what claims protection you have, according to J. Martin McLaughlin, president of McLaughlin Transportation Systems, Inc., an agent for Mayflower Transit, Inc. "Being prepared for the unforeseeable in moving will put your mind at ease," McLaughlin says.

"Regardless of how careful we are, how expertly we pack your dishes and wrap your furniture, no moving company can guarantee there will never be any damage, though when it occurs it is usually minor. Household goods were just not made for moving around," McLaughlin explained.

However, according to McLaughlin, moving companies can offer a variety of liability options to cover such contingencies.

Four basic ways are available for recovering damage and loss claims, the first three of which are required by the federal government.

• Released Value: Under this no-cost option, you may seek recovery of an item at the rate of 60 cents per pound, per item, but the payoff is minimal. For example, if a 10-pound stereo component that cost $1,000 in 1995 was lost or damaged, you would be paid no more than $6.

• Declared Value: Under this no-cost option, the value of your shipment is based on its total weight times $1.25. A 4,000 pound shipment would have a maximum liability of $5,000. Any loss or damage claim under this option is settled based on the depreciated value of the lost or damaged item up to the maximum liability. For example, with your 1995 $1,000 stereo component, the mover would be liable for up to $1,000 minus five years of depreciation of the item.

Unless you agree to other arrangements, your mover is required to assume liability based on this option. Also, the mover is entitled to charge you $7 for each $1,000 of liability. In the example above, the charge for a shipment valued at $5,000 would be $35.

• Lump Sum Value: If the value of your shipment is more than $1.25 times the weight, you may obtain additional protection by declaring a specific dollar value for your shipment. The cost is the same as above ($7 per each $1,000 of value) and the settlement is based on depreciated value.

• Full Value Protection: All major movers are now offering plans affording additional protection. Full value plans offer repair of damaged items without a deduction for depreciation. An item that is not repairable or is lost is replaced with a like item or a cash settlement at current market replacement value with no deduction or depreciation. A 1990 32-inch Sony television set would be either repaired or replaced by a 2000 32-inch Sony television set.

McLaughlin Transportation Systems, Inc., is a member of the American Moving and Storage Association. Additional information on moving can be obtained from McLaughlin Transportation Systems, Inc., at 1-800-258-6683.

Eyes Need Protection For Summer Sun

For many Americans, the summer months mean an increase in outdoor activities.

These added hours in the sun can damage your skin resulting in premature aging, burning and skin cancer, and prolonged exposure to direct UV radiation can also harm your eyes. Just as you wear a hat and apply sunscreen to protect your skin from the sun, you should always protect your eyes with a pair of UV resistant sunglasses.

Pearle Vision stresses the use of UV resistant sunglasses because even one day in powerful sun can result in a burned cornea (the outermost, clear "window" of the eye), and long-term exposure over the years can lead to cataracts (including the eye lens that results in blindness), possible night blindness and macular retina damage.

Children and people who spend a great deal of time in the sun are especially susceptible. Two types of UV rays, UV-A and UV-B, have been linked to cataracts and cancer of the skin around the eyes. Pearle Vision recommends that everyone wear sunglasses that block 99 to 100 percent of UV radiation. It is important to note that UV protection comes from a compound applied to the lenses of sunglasses and not from the color or how dark a pair of lenses might be. If you are unsure about the protection your sunglasses provide, vision experts at Pearle Vision can inspect your sunglasses to determine if they are UV resistant.

Another Summer Sun Danger

In addition to UV rays, glare from the sun also can be a serious problem. Glare impairs vision, hampers concentration and can cause headaches and fatigue. The results are often unsafe driving situations.

Dr. Paul Kling, an independent optometrist affiliated with Pearle, is familiar with the dangers of driving and glare. "Glare is a binding concentration of light reflected off of surfaces like water, sand, snow or pavement, even another vehicle's windshield or rear window. If you're driving while glare is a factor, you have a potentially dangerous situation, because you lose a certain amount of youth depth perception," Kling. "Glare will also affect your field of vision while driving, typically because you have to squint."

Protecting Your Eyes

Dr. Kling recommends that it's important to make time for regular eye exams. Whether you wear glasses or not, everyone can benefit from eye exams because they can detect many health problems, including those complicated by exposure to the sun.

"People believe they can protect themselves from the harmful effects of UV and glare by simply wearing any old pair of sunglasses," Dr. Kling said. "But this just isn't true. There is a difference among sunglasses and the levels of glare and UV protection they provide."

Darkened plastic or glass lenses without special filters just trick you into a false sense of safety, Dr. Kling cautions. For optimal protection, he recommends sunwear that blocks a minimum of 99 percent of UV rays.

"But lenses with UV coatings alone will not eliminate glare. If you want to protect your eyes from both glare and UV rays, you should purchase sunglasses labeled 'polarized,'" Kling said.

Summer Food Safety

The summer sun often means heading outdoors for picnics, barbecues, and trips to the beach. But warmer temperatures can also mean an increase in your risk for food poisoning.

Marlene O'Donnell, a nutritionist with Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates, suggests these quick tips to help safeguard your friends and family.

- Start by keeping your food at the right temperature. If you have items that need to be kept cold make sure you pack plenty of ice in your cooler and keep your cooler in the shade.
- When grilling, keep meat separate from other foods and use different utensils for raw meat and cooked items. Also, wash your hands often to prevent the raw meat juices from contaminating other foods.

- Don't let food sit out. If there are leftovers pack them up immediately and return them to their proper temperature.

- Taking these few extra steps can greatly decrease food poisoning risk and increase fun in the sun.

Morrisette Eyes Top Spot

By CHRIS POISSON

Although last Saturday resulted in a 7-4 loss to Weymouth, coach Ray Cattaneo saw a few things he liked about his Morrisette American Legion baseball team.

He saw a kid who can't even drive a car yet, 15-year-old Brian O'Hanley, continue driving pitches all over the park with his sizzling stick.

He saw Joe Thorley come off the bench and produce two hits and an RBI in his first start of the year.

And he saw T.J. Bell, playing with a bad knee, pitch five effective innings as starters Rob Celata, Keith Doherty and Matt McCann were unavailable.

"We lost but I saw a few things," Cattaneo said.

Monday night he saw something he really likes — he watched his team rebound for its sixth win of the season and he now envisions more than just slipping into the postseason.

"I want to shoot for the top spot and play the weaker teams from the other side [in the playoffs]," Cattaneo said. "I don't want to finish fourth or fifth and have to play a strong team."

Morrisette traveled to Milton Tuesday and yesterday (Wednesday) it hosted Braintree. Today (Thursday)

Coach Cattaneo: 'This Is A Very Big Week' and tomorrow (Friday) it faces Braintree on the road for a pair of 7:30 p.m. games. Sunday it hosts Weymouth at 8 p.m. in a game that was rained out last Thursday.

"This is a very big week for us," Cattaneo said. "We're going to take it one at a time."

After Monday's 7-3 win over Weymouth, Morrisette has a legitimate shot to make a run for the No. 1 seed. Especially if it continues to receive starting pitching that fashions a Maddux-Glavin-Smolts rotation.

Doherty went 61/3 innings, allowing two runs on four hits with 12 strikeouts to improve his record to 3-0. The only mistake the southpaw made was a pitch he threw to Drew Locke in the fourth inning that went for a two-run homer.

"That was the only bad pitch he made," Cattaneo said. "He had them off-balance all game. It was a warm night. He was getting tired by the seventh and was getting the ball up high. Rather than leave him in to suffer we brought in McCann for the last two outs."

Joe Flynn powered the offense, going 3 for 4 with four RBI. Dan O'Toole went

2 for 3 and Pat Bregoli and John Gavin each went 1 for 3. O'Hanley, Adam Goodrich and Chris Doherty each drove in a run.

O'Hanley, whose batting average is hovering around the .600 mark, has cracked the starting lineup and continues to impress Cattaneo.

"Oh, I can't take him out — it would kill me," Cattaneo said. "I didn't know if he would be able to hit this type of pitching. But he seems to hit fast pitching better than slow pitching. He just has a natural swing."

O'Hanley, who also plays Babe Ruth, only had one hit, but that one hit was an RBI triple in the first inning that gave Morrisette a 1-0 lead. He later scored on a fielder's choice to put his team ahead by two.

In Saturday's loss, O'Hanley went 2 for 4 with an RBI triple to pace the offense. Flynn (2 for 3), O'Toole (2 for 4), Goodrich (RBI) and Thorley also contributed.

Bell went five innings, allowing three earned runs on seven hits with five strikeouts. If Morrisette didn't botch a double play ball in the first inning that led to four unearned runs, he would have picked up his first win.

"He pitched well," Cattaneo said. "He's got more heart than a lot of kids. He really gets into it and he works hard at it. He gives you everything he has."

In previous action, Morrisette completed a three-game season sweep of Cohasset with a 7-4 win at Adams Field last Wednesday.

McCann (2-1) beat Cohasset for the second time this year, giving up one earned run on eight hits in a complete-game effort. Gavin (2 for 4) cracked a two-run triple in the sixth inning to snap a 4-4 tie. O'Hanley went 2 for 3 and Chris Doherty 2 for 4 with an RBI. Bell and Keith Doherty added hits.

In last Tuesday's 7-4 win over Cohasset, Morrisette jumped on pitcher Jessie Cole for a handful of runs in the first inning highlighted by Hanley's (3 for 4) two-run single.

Five runs were all Keith Doherty (2-0) needed to work with. He went the distance, allowing one earned run on three hits with a walk while punching out 11.

Flynn went 1 for 2 with three RBI and Bregoli went 2 for 3 to contribute to Morrisette's 11-hit attack.

Quincy Fitness Professional Helped Train Troops During Gulf War

By ART DUNPHY

When someone is an aerobics and fitness instructor, what do they do for an encore after having worked as a personal trainer for Jane Fonda, "the Queen of Fitness" herself?

In the case of Quincy's Jackie Batchelder, the aerobics director at both Weymouth Club and Canton Club and a mother of three, she joined a team of professionals who implemented a special fitness and recreation program for members of the U.S. military serving in "Operation Desert Storm."

A native of the Philippines and a former "Miss Philippines, U.S.A." beauty pageant queen, Batchelder moved to Massachusetts when she was just eight years old. Her early years at North Reading High School included her active participation in track and field, volleyball, gymnastics, cycling, and swimming. Following high school she attended and graduated from Boston Conservatory of Music, where she majored in dance.

She began her professional career at age 21 as an aerobics, dance, and weight training instructor at various clubs and studios in Boston. She then moved to Los Angeles where she joined the staff at Jane Fonda's exercise club.

Her natural athletic style, svelte stature and professional bearing enabled her to easily make the transition to the personal training field and she soon became known as a "trainer to the stars."

In addition to serving as the personal trainer for the "queen bee" herself, Batchelder attracted such other Hollywood notables as Paula Abdul, Juliet Prowse, Kevin Bacon, Jean Claude Van Damme, and Sharon Gless as private clientele. She even served as a personal trainer for the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Batchelder's fitness and modeling skills also brought her to television, where she made appearances on "Spencer for Hire," "the Good Day Show," and the "George Schlatter-Laugh Machine," as well as commercials for the Massachusetts State Lottery. She also co-produced, directed, choreographed, and starred in her own exercise video, "Lifestyle Workout," that was produced and distributed in Norway.

With the active lifestyle associated with being a personal trainer and aerobics director at two of the South Shore's most notable health and fitness clubs, Batchelder remains extremely attractive and fit. Her duties routinely place her in front of large groups of men and women. She leads some 10-15 one-hour aerobic classes each week to a mix of eclectic music that includes contemporary, jazz, pop, and even operatic tunes — depending on the mood she is in at the time.

In addition she hires and supervises the staff of instructors for the wide range of exercise classes offered at the two clubs, which include Body Pump, Spinning, yoga and pilates.

"I don't have a whole lot of free time," says Batchelder, "so I need to be in good shape to handle the daily challenges involved in balancing my full-time fitness career with raising my three young daughters, Isabella (6), Selena (4), and Marcella (1)."

Her being "in good shape" is not in question.

Paul Ahearn Memorial Golf Tourney July 10

The first annual Paul J. Ahearn Memorial Golf Tournament will be held Monday, July 10 at the Country Club of Halifax to benefit the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Greater Boston (MAWFGB).

The tournament will begin at 12 p.m. with the tee-off at 1:30 p.m. The event will also feature various golfing contests and raffles, such as an "18-hole scramble," a longest drive contest and a hole-in-one contest for a new Buick. There will be a buffet dinner at 6 p.m.

Ahearn, who grew up in Milton and lived in Quincy, died of cancer last July at the age of 33. Short after his death, his family members established the Paul J. Ahearn Memorial Fund and raised $3,500 to the MAWFGB with one condition — that the wish to be granted with their donations be sports-related.

"Paul had two passions in life, sports and children," said older brother Bob Ahearn of Marshfield, who has played an instrumental role with the memorial fund and the golf tournament. "Granting a child's life-long wish in Paul's memory is a beautiful tribute to his life. It was important to my family to do something special to keep Paul's memory alive."

"It can be emotionally draining to watch someone you love so much suffer," said Britt Ahearn of Quincy, Paul's widow, who recently joined the MAWFGB as a volunteer. "It is nice to be able to smile and laugh for a while and build good memories. I want to help create happy memories for other families who are going through a difficult situation. "It is important to celebrate life and make every day count. Paul was able to realize some of his dreams and I would like to help others realize theirs."

Earlier this year, the first gift from the Paul J. Ahearn Memorial Fund to MAWFGB was used to fulfill a 13-year-old boy's wish

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

As we approach the Fourth of July, it is well to be reminded that the nationhood we celebrate did not spring full blown with the mere Declaration of Independence from the tyranny of the day.

The prize of freedom came only by reason of firm actions taken by many individuals acting singly and collectively over an extended period before and after the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776. This is the tradition of resolute purpose on which the United States of America was founded and has been maintained.

"Let every nation know, whether it wishes us well or ill, that we shall pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship, support any friend, oppose any foe, in order to assure the survival and the success of liberty." - John F. Kennedy

Let us join together on July 4, 2000, in honoring America by rededicating ourselves to the principles of the founders and showing the same resolute purpose that the late President Kennedy articulated for a latter day. The need continues. We cannot rest on the laurels of past accomplishments.

Charles A. MacGillivray, 83 Won Medal Of Honor At Battle Of Bulge

By TOM HENSHAW

When the Germans shot off his left arm during the Battle of the Bulge in World War II, Sgt. Charles A. MacGillivray stuck the mangled stump into a snow bank to freeze his blood and keep from bleeding to death.

Singhandedly, he had wiped out four Nazi machine gun nests during that long-gone battle on New Year's Day, 1945, in the frigid Belgian forest and, for that, he was awarded the nation's highest military honor, the Congressional Medal of Honor.

His left arm, hit by at least eight machine gun bullets, was amputated and for the remaining 55 years of his life, he devoted his time to advocating the causes of his fellow veterans, statewide and across the nation.

He died Saturday in the Jamaica Plain Veterans Hospital at the age of 83.

Mr. MacGillivray, formerly of Quincy who lived most of his life in Braintree, was a sergeant in the 71st Infantry Regiment of the 44th Division when a late German offensive smashed through the Allied lines.

While his squad was held down by enemy machine gun fire, he charged the nests alone, firing a submachine gun and hurling hand grenades, silencing the machine guns and killing the 79 Germans who manned them.

In later years, as president of the Congressional Medal of Honor Society, he was a familiar figure advocating veterans' rights in Washington, where friendships he had developed over the years gave him entree to people of influence.

Mr. MacGillivray also researched prior Medal of Honor winners (3,400 since 1861) and saw to it that their graves were marked by the Medal of Honor seal. A park in Boston was named for him.

CHARLES

but he declined similar honors in Quincy and Braintree.

He was born in Prince Edward Island, Canada, but moved to the states as a young man, living in South Boston before moving to the South Shore. He was in the Merchant Marine prior to the war and afterward a special agent with the Treasury Department in Boston.

He was a member of the McKeon AMVETS Post in Dorchester, the Perkins American Legion Post in South Boston, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Disabled American Veterans in Charlestown and the Amputees Association in Natick.

He is survived by three daughters, Anne MacGillivray-Schonland of Duxbury, Joan MacGillivray Ward of Kingston and Charlene MacGillivray Corea of Windham, N. H.; and a brother, Roland MacGillivray of Weymouth. He was the husband of the late Esther S. (Manning) MacGillivray.

A funeral mass will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. at St. Francis of Assisi Church in Braintree. Arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home of Quincy. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia.

Donations may be made to the New England Shelter for Homeless Veterans, c/o Thomas Lyons, 17 Court St., Boston 02050.

Help Fight Medicare And Medicaid Waste, Fraud And Abuse

By LAURIE ZASTROW

In society today, most retired persons take comfort in knowing that medical services will be there when needed, thanks to Medicare and Medicaid. It should concern all of us that, due to unscrupulous practices of a small proportion of health care providers, Medicare and Medicaid are being drained of valuable resources.

In 1998 alone, Medicare lost nearly $13 billion to fraudulent or unnecessary claims. This problem affects all Americans. It affects those who depend on Medicare and Medicaid by diminishing the quality of the treatment they receive. It affects caregivers by decreasing the funding available for important programs. And it affects everyone who pays taxes by wasting billions of tax dollars.

Most health care professionals are honest, trustworthy and responsible. However, fraud occurs when an individual or organization deliberately deceives others in order to gain some sort of unauthorized benefit. Fraud generally involves billing for services that were never rendered or billing for a service at a higher rate than is actually justified. Health care waste and abuse occurs when providers supply services or products that are medically unnecessary or that do not meet professional standards.

What can you do to combat waste, fraud and abuse? First, treat your Medicare number as you would your credit card number. Handle it with care. Second, read your explanation of benefits statements carefully. Call your provider or Medicare insurance company for an explanation or clarification of unusual or questionable Medicare charges. Finally, if you have called your provider and your Medicare insurance carrier and continue to have questions, call the Medicare Fraud Hotline at 1-800-447-8477.

Together we can reduce Medicare and Medicaid fraud, waste and abuse and keep these valuable programs financially stable.

For more information about Medicare fraud, or about the Medicare program, call 1-800-633-4227, or visit the Medicare website at www.medicare.gov. (Laurie Zastrow is Social Security manager in Quincy.)

Robert Hale Nominated For Entrepreneur Of The Year

Robert Hale, president and CEO of Network Plus Corporation, has been named a finalist for The New England Entrepreneur of the Year® awards program by Ernest & Young.

Hale began a five-person operation called Network Plus in 1990. He realized that old-fashioned long hours and hard work could make his vision of providing one-stop communications shop a reality. Thus, his company began in a subleased space with these five men making up its sales force.

With no customers, references or leads, these men used the same technique of cold calling potential clients that the company's sales force of more than 300 still uses today. Their extreme hard work and efforts proved quite lucrative, as their tiny office in Quincy evolved into a 14-branch operation serving major markets in the Northeast and Southeast regions of the U.S.

Today, Network Plus is the fourth-largest long distance company in New England with more than 49,000 customers and 700 employees. The company also has its own network of switches in Cambridge, Quincy, Orlando, Chicago and Los Angeles to carry its long distance services. Its bundled product offerings include local and long distance services, as well as enhanced, high speed data and Internet services that primarily use digital subscriber line (DSL) technology.

South Shore Buick Awarded CarDay Internet Franchise

South Shore Buick, 50 Adams St., is making use of the Internet to offer customers a new way to buy and sell used cars.

The dealership has been awarded a local CarDay franchise (www.carday.com), an Internet company which enables consumers to auction used cars with the safeguards and protections of franchised dealers.

South Shore Buick, owned by Bob Fitzgerald, has been in business since 1923.

Here's how it works: prospective sellers bring their used cars into South Shore Buick where the cars undergo a 110-point vehicle inspection. If a car passes, the dealership certifies the car and provides a six-month, 6,000 mile warranty. Photos of the car are then posted on the CarDay site where a live auction takes place for 21 days, with a refundable secured bid via charge card necessary to discourage "joyride" bidding.

The seller of the car establishes a "trump price" where a bid of that price means an automatic sale. Otherwise, the seller determines if the highest bid is enough, with South Shore Buick receiving a percentage of any sales proceeds.

In addition to the photos, consumers browsing the CarDay site have access to inspection reports, CarFax reports, and a dents and scratches diagram, as well as the candid comments of the CarDay Auto Expert who has studied and test-driven the car.

The CarDay Auto Expert at South Shore Buick is Ellie Signori, who personally manages the transactions of many vehicles listed on the web site.

"CarDay and South Shore Buick want to eradicate the need for people to drive around for months with "For Sale" signs in their car windows by offering a better way to buy and sell used vehicles," said Signori. "CarDay has found a way for buyers and sellers to get a fair price. We support the transactions by guaranteeing 110-point vehicle inspections and we provide financing, warranties, and handle all the paperwork."

Winning bidders may visit the vehicle and test-drive it, plus have a friendly intermediary to work things out if anything does not meet their satisfaction.

Appointments for sellers wishing to auction their vehicle through CarDay can be made by calling (617) 770-3300.

NO REFUND WILL BE MADE AT THIS CONTRACT RATE IN THE EVENT OF CANCELLATION. DEADLINE: MONDAY, 5:00PM. PLEASE INCLUDE YOUR PHONE NUMBER IN AD.

Newton Would Have DPW Crew Help Summer Yardwaste Pickup

contracted to pick up yardwaste costs the city an additional $23,000.

Newton praised the DPW's efforts, calling their recycling efforts one of the best in the state, but said even the new system was simply not enough to keep pace with demand.

"I know the DPW is open on Saturday, but even then it's hard for the everyday person to make it down to the yard," Newton said. "It's especially an issue among the city's seniors, who may have even less of an opportunity to bring their clippings down to the DPW."

Newton said the biggest complaint he's getting is from residents who've missed the monthly pick-up date and are faced with storing their grass, leaves, etc. for four weeks, putting an extra burden on the resident trying to make his or her neighborhood look good. "They're stored in these brown paper containers and if they get wet, they can fall apart or cause odor problems," Newton said, adding that residents might even be tempted to throw their clippings in with the rest of their trash. Said Newton:

"People are trying to be environmentally conscious. If we want them to continue doing that, we have to work with them to make it as easy as possible to do the right thing."

Newton applauded the efforts of city residents still making the effort to recycle their yardwaste. He also said he's been telling the Ward 6 residents he's spoken with to make sure the next lawnmower they purchase has mulching capabilities.

Newton also made note of the DPW's composting program, where city residents can purchase compost bins normally priced at $65 for a mere $22 thanks to a state-funded grant.

But in the short-term, Newton hopes his resolve will help residents with a quality of life issue that's becoming more of a problem with each passing summer week. "It's become one of the top concerns in my neighborhood, no question," said Newton.

City of Quincy, Massachusetts

Office of the Mayor

Welcome to Historic Quincy

To John Hancock, John Adams and John Quincy Adams, Quincy was home. It was that "remarkable spot" John Adams referred to when he wrote to Abigail from Europe.

Standing on Penn's Hill with her son, John Quincy, watching smoke from the Battle of Bunker Hill, Abigail Adams may have sensed that this "remarkable spot" would produce national leaders and have an impact on American History for centuries to come.

With twenty-seven miles of seashore on the East and nestled into the beautiful Blue Hills on the West, Quincy, with its peninsula communities, has the character of a town and not a city.

Visit the Adams National Historical sites, including the birthplaces of two Presidents and their summer home. Enter the beautiful United First Parish Church where the two Presidents and their wives are entombed.

Truly, John Adams was correct when he said of Quincy, "It is a most remarkable spot."

I welcome you to the City of Quincy. Enjoy its beauty and history.

Sincerely,

JAMES A. SHEETS
MAYOR

Just The Way Abigail Wanted It

John Adams Birthplace Has Original Look

The birthplace of John Adams, second president of the United States, looks like it did when he and his parents, Deacon John and Susanna lived there.

It took on that "as it was" look after a painstaking six-year reconstruction project in the 1980s.

Visitors to the John Adams Birthplace, which peers over the shoulder of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace on Franklin St., South Quincy, can now see more completely how the house looked.

The house is well-furnished and looks like it did when John and Abigail lived in it.

The final renovation touches were to the room where Deacon John Adams made shoes.

The rooms are furnished from the period of Deacon John and his wife and probably reflected her taste. They are furnished not elaborately, but sufficiently to have a lived-in look.

The birthplace was probably built in the late 17th or early 18th Century for less than $1,000 in the pounds of the day and the clapboards were hand-hewn from trees that grew in its fields.

The pine clapboards of the John Adams Birthplace are unpainted and the U.S. National Park Service, which restored the house, insists that based on research the house will remain that way, despite the fact that John Adams was known to have preferred it white.

For more than 80 years they were the little red farmhouses at the foot of Penn's Hill. But research turned up the fact that Abigail Adams, the wife of the second president, wanted them "stone" and white in color.

Since what Abigail wanted, Abigail usually got, in the summer of 1980, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace was repainted to Abigail's taste, the "stone" color determined to be a sort of off-white mixed especially for the occasion from a late 18th Century formula.

The John Adams Birthplace was painted white so that both houses would look as they did in 1807, the year the last Adams lived in them, but later research indicated it was unpainted.

The birthplaces, parts of which date back to the 17th Century, were taken over by the National Park Service on May 1, 1979 after years of semi-neglect due to lack of restoration and maintenance funds.

The John Quincy Adams Birthplace reopened in 1982 for the first time in three years after undergoing a $175,000 rehabilitation faithful to the lives of the prominent family that lived there.

If you close your eyes and give your imagination full rein you can see them now as they were more than 200 years ago.

There is Abigail Adams in the new pink gingham dress. There is the curly-haired infant, Thomas Boylston Adams, bouncing on his father's knee. And there is John

JOHN ADAMS BIRTHPLACE

Adams, home from the Continental Congress in Philadelphia for the first time in a year, sitting at the table and drinking a cup of tea.

The setting, right down to the pewter plates and candlesticks, is reproduced faithfully in the corner room of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace.

The furnishings of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace are precise reproductions of those that were in the house when the second president lived there. The originals are at the Old House, the Adams National Historic Site, from which they cannot be removed under the ownership agreement with the Adams family.

The most interesting room in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace is John Adams' old law office, in which the elder Adams, James Bowdoin and Samuel Adams drafted the Massachusetts State Constitution, the model on which the U.S. Constitution was based.

The law office is furnished pretty much as John Adams had it.

There is the hutch table on which he wrote the State Constitution; the bookcase filled with books that probably were there in John Adams' day, judging by an inventory of his law library; his old writing desk and two chairs that were copies from those in his second law office in Boston.

Pastels of Abigail and John, originally done in Salem, were photographically reproduced by photographer George Dow and now hang in Abigail's sitting room. The originals are in the possession of the Massachusetts Historical Society.

Abigail's old kitchen cabinet was discovered serving as a bookcase in the Old House.

The cabinet was reproduced and installed in the kitchen of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace along with copies of the blue china that John purchased when he was emissary to Holland.

The Adams Birthplaces at 133 and 141 Franklin St. are open daily, including Sundays and holidays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. from April 19 to Nov. 10 with guided tours. Admission is $2 for adults and children over 16, which also includes admission to the Adams Mansion within seven days. Park passes are available. Tours must be arranged at the Visitors' Center, 1250 Hancock St. Last full tour leaves Visitors' Center at 3:15 p.m. Tours are on a first come, first serve basis.

THE ADAMS MANSION, affectionately called "The Old House" by the family, was the summer White House of two Presidents -- John Adams and his son, John Quincy Adams -- and was home to four generations of the illustrious Adams family. The house was purchased by John and Abigail Adams in 1787. Located at 135 Adams St., it is a National Historic Site under supervision of the U.S. National Park Service.

The Adams Cottages Our Only Father - Son Presidents Born Here

It was the North Precinct of Braintree then, a sprawling tract of woods and farmlands on the gently rolling hills some 10 miles south of the Boston Stone along the winding Coast Road to Plymouth.

Something less than 1,500 people lived in the North, Middle and South Precincts of Braintree in the year 1735 and two of them were Deacon John Adams, 44, farmer and cordwainer, and his wife, Susanna, 26.

Their home was a weathered gray farmhouse with a high peaked roof and attached lean-to kitchen set on seven acres of farmland at roughly Milepost 11 of the Coast Road, just where it turned up the wooded slopes of Penn's Hill toward the Monaquot River ford.

He was a pillar of his rural community. Mr. Adams was a deacon in the First Parish Church, a lieutenant in the Braintree militia and a town constable with a forceful personality and tact that enabled him to collect taxes from his neighbors.

He was a hard-working farmer whose cider was acknowledged best in town, he worked in leather during the winter months, and he had an eye on an adjoining piece of farmland, 9 1/2 acres owned by the Billings brothers, complete with a farmhouse similar to his own.

Susanna Adams was a Boylston of Brookline, socially a cut above her husband, and perhaps there were moments in the simple house at the foot of Penn's Hill when she thought of the home of her uncle, the noted Dr. Zabiel Boylston of Brookline, whose furniture came all the way from London.

Their first child, a son who was named John for his father, was born in the southeast bedroom of the farmhouse on Oct. 19, 1735. (Old Style). He would become the second president of the United States.

Deacon John purchased the house next door for 500 pounds in 1744 and it was ready 20 years later when young John moved in with his brand new bride, the former Abigail Smith, the preacher's sparkling daughter from the next town of Weymouth.

Their second child, a son who was named John Quincy Adams after his great-grandfather, Col. John Quincy, was born there on July 11, 1767. He would become the sixth president of the United States.

The junction of Franklin St., Independence Ave., and President Ave. in South Quincy is the only place in the country where the birthplaces of two presidents stand side by side in the same city.

The precise age of the two cottages at the foot of Penn's Hill is not known.

When the John Adams Birthplace was restored by the Daughters of Revolution in 1897, a brick bearing the date 1661 was discovered under the southeast corner, and the house was known to have been occupied by one Joseph Penniman in that year.

And a man named Samuel Belcher was living in the John Quincy Adams as early as 1663, when it was little more than a one-room shack with fireplace. It was built to its present size in 1716, as evidenced by a date brick found in the new fireplace.

According to Henry Adams, grandson of President John Quincy Adams, no member of the family lived in the cottages after 1818, although ownership remained in the Adams family until 1940.

Both houses were restored by the Adams Realty Trust, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in 1896 at a cost of $1,650 and the John Adams Birthplace a year later at an expense of $515.49.

They were presented to the city of Quincy in 1940 and supervised by the Quincy Historical Society until they were turned over to the U.S. National Park Service in 1979.

The Adams Birthplaces at 133 and 141 Franklin St. are open daily, including Sundays and holidays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. from April 19 to Nov. 10 with guided tours. A Mother's Advice

Abigail Adams had this motherly advice for her son, John Quincy Adams, the future sixth president, in a letter written to him when he was 10 years old and in Europe with his father, John Adams, who was on a diplomatic mission:

"Improve your understanding for acquiring usefull (sic) knowledge and virtue, such as will render you an ornament to society, an Honour to your Country, and a Blessing to Your parents.

A UNIQUE HERITAGE

As the "City of Presidents" Quincy enjoys a unique heritage and identification among all the cities in the United States. Our country's early struggle for freedom and independence began here with the writings and advocacy of John Hancock, John Adams and his wife, Abigail. The Adams legacy is preserved here for all to see at the birthplaces of John Adams and John Quincy Adams, the "Old House," the First Parish Church and the Adams Academy (now the home of the Quincy Historical Society).

Situated between Boston and Plymouth, Quincy is strategically located and a "must see" for visiting family and friends, tourists and students of history of all ages, both young and old.

Since its founding, our municipal leaders have always strived to protect our colonial past while allowing for a balanced growth. Our shoreline, playgrounds and natural beauty spots in the Blue Hills makes Quincy an attractive place to live, to work and raise a family.

It's always with a source of pride that when asked, where do you live, our citizens reply "Quin-zee."

THE ADAMS MANSION

'The Old House' Summer White House And Home Of 2 Presidents

Josiah Quincy, the one who built railroads around New England and founded the cooperative bank movement in Massachusetts, was in his boyhood a frequent visitor to the mansion where John Adams, the second president of the United States, lived in retirement.

Later, he wrote with wry amusement about Sunday dinner with the aging patriarch of the Adams clan and his wife, Abigail, a dinner that inevitably began with a thick pudding made from boiled corn meal.

"...it being thought desirable to take the edge off one's hunger before reaching the joint," wrote Quincy.

"Indeed, it was considered wise to stimulate the young to fill themselves with pudding, by the assurance that the boy who managed to eat the most of it should be helped most abundantly to the meat, which was to follow.

"It need not be said that neither the winner nor his competitors found much room for meat at the close of their contest; and so the domestic economy of the arrangement was very apparent."

Quincy, as a young Harvard law student, stopped by several times a week in summer to talk and read to the former President. He found the visits delightful. Indeed, the Adams of the cold and austere public mien was never more relaxed than he was at his country home in Quincy.

The original house, a small part of the present building, was built probably in 1731 by Major Leonard Vassall, a wealthy West Indian sugar planter who lived in Cambridge and apparently used it for a summer place.

His daughter, Mrs. Anna Borland, who was a Loyalist during the Revolution, abandoned the house to leave with the British forces when they evacuated Boston in 1776. For a while it was used as a haven for rebel refugees fleeing the war zones.

Mrs. Borland returned to reclaim the house after the Revolution and John Adams, then in Europe as the first American ambassador to London, purchased it for 600 pounds through the good offices of the Cotton Tufts of Weymouth, his wife Abigail's cousin.

The Adamses were about to return to the United States after seven years abroad and Abigail was concerned that John's books and papers and the furnishings they had acquired in Europe would not fit into their old farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill where they lived before.

The deal was closed on Sept. 26, 1787, and the deed is still on file in the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in which the Adams purchase is specified as a house, barn and other buildings on seven acres of land with some 76 acres more scattered around the North Precinct of Braintree.

There are indications that Abigail was first disappointed with her purchase. It was a lot smaller than she remembered it.

"In height and breadth it feels like a wren's house," she wrote to her daughter, Abigail, the wife of Col. William S. Smith, "Let Col. Smith come without heels to his shoes or he will not be able to walk upright."

Abigail and John Adams moved into the house, which they named "Peacefield," after his retirement from the presidency in 1801 and lived there until they died.

It was from the "Old House," as the family called it, that John Adams carried on his long and increasingly warm correspondence with his old rival, Thomas Jefferson of Virginia, who had succeeded him in the presidency. In retirement, they became firm friends as they outlasted their contemporaries.

"Thomas Jefferson lives," whispered John Adams as he lay dying in the Old House. He was wrong. Jefferson, in far away Monticello, Va., had preceded him in death by a few hours on the same day.

It was July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

The Old House which served as summer White House for two presidents, was home to four generations of the Adams family, the last, Brooks Adams, dying in February, 1927. It was taken over by the U.S. National Park Service in 1946 to become the Adams Mansion National Historic Site.

The site at 135 Adams St. is open from April 19 to Nov. 10 daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $2 for adults and children over 16, and includes admission to the Adams Birthplaces within seven days. Tours must be arranged at the Visitors Center, 1250 Hancock St. Tours are on a first come, first serve basis.

THE FIRST PARISH CHURCH

TOMBS OF PRESIDENTS John and John Quincy Adams and their wives in First Parish Church.

United First Parish Church, 'Church Of The Presidents' Where 2 Presidents, Their Wives Are Entombed

In 1949, when the present First Parish Church building, the Old Stone Temple, was 121 years old, it was ruled officially that the church is older than the city itself and the town before it.

It was then that the late historian William Churchill Edwards was called upon to resolve a minor dispute that involved the rounding of the corners of the church lot in downtown Quincy.

"Almost the first subject to which the minds of the early settlers of our country were turned after they landed here was the formation of a church," said Edwards.

The first church in these parts was established as a branch of the Church of Boston in 1636. It became a church in its own right in 1639. The Mount Wollaston section of Boston was incorporated as the town of Braintree on May 23, 1640. Ergo, the church came first!

Quincy's first house of worship, the branch of the Church of Boston, was called the "Chapel of Ease," and if it was neglected by early historians it was because its first pastor, the Rev. John Wheelwright, his sister-in-law, Anne Hutchinson, and others were banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony for heresy.

The new church, the one that lasted, was gathered by covenant on Sept. 26, 1639, and it was holding services in its third meeting house in 1732 when its pastor was the Rev. John Hancock, father of the bold first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Son John also was a member.

The affairs of the church and the town of Quincy were one and the same until 1824 when church and state were separated in Massachusetts and the Congregational Society was established to handle parochial matters.

The old Hancock meeting house was still standing, although a little run down, on the south lawn of the present church lot in 1822 when former President John Adams deeded the interest from certain of his lands and granite from his pastures to build a stone temple.

It was completed in Greek revival style at a cost of $30,488.56—which was some $3,000 less than architect Alexander Parrish's estimate and dedicated Nov. 12, 1828, with John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States holding Pew No. 1.

Even before the church was dedicated, the mortal remains of its benefactors, John and Abigail Adams, were transferred to tombs in the crypt of the church and, in 1852, the bodies of John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa, joined them.

It is the only church in the United States in which two Presidents are buried. The only other church in which a President is buried is the Episcopal Cathedral in Washington, D.C., where President Woodrow Wilson is entombed.

An active Unitarian Universalist Church, it is open to the public for tours daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 1 to 5 p.m. mid-June through mid-September. Admission is $2; under 16 admitted free. For further information, call 617-773-0062 or the church office at 617-773-1290.

Why We Pronounce It 'Quin-zee'

Why do we pronounce Quincy "Quin-zee" when just about everyone else in the country refers to it as "Quin-see?"

There are 16 other Quincys in the U.S., but they pronounce it "Quin-see." Can they be right and we be wrong?

Not according to Quincy's late city historian, William C. Edwards who never budged an inch whenever the argument ever came up. And it still comes up.

The reason we pronounce it "Quin-zee" is very simple.

"That's the way the Quincy family pronounced it," he used to explain.

"The original Quincy family which settled here at Mount Wollaston pronounced it 'Quin-zee,' including Col. John Quincy after whom Quincy, Mass.—the first Quincy—was named in 1792."

Colonel Quincy was the great grandfather of sixth President John Quincy Adams.

Apparently, all 16 other Quincys in the U.S. were named after John Quincy Adams.

And, apparently the early settlers of those communities thought John Quincy pronounced it John "Quin-see."

Anyway, that is how Edwards explained it.

Seems like a sound argument.

Quincy Was Almost Hancock

If some of the early settlers had their way, you would be living in the city of Hancock today instead of the city of Quincy.

Quincy, like George Washington, was born on Feb. 22.

On Feb. 22, 1792, the General Court of Massachusetts passed an act incorporating the North Precinct of Old Braintree as the separate town of Quincy.

But, just before that, quite a few of the residents wanted the new town named after native-son John Hancock instead of Boston-born Colonel John Quincy.

Colonel Quincy, who had represented Old Braintree in the General Court, was the great-grandfather of President John Quincy Adams.

Many people today think Quincy was named after the sixth President but the honor actually goes to his great-grandfather.

John Hancock, who was born in the North Precinct, was governor of Massachusetts when the General Court passed the act incorporating the new town as Quincy. He signed the act the following day.

But at the first town meeting of the new town in May, a petition was presented to change the name from Quincy to Hancock in honor of the patriot and first signer of the Declaration of Independence. The move was finally defeated after a stormy verbal battle.

Opponents argued that Hancock was still alive and that the honor should go to a distinguished-but-deceased-person.

Colonel Quincy met those requirements. He was both distinguished and deceased.

He had represented Old Braintree in the General Court from 1717 to 1741, 12 of those years as Speaker of the House. He died in 1767 at age 77, two days after John Quincy Adams was born.

Quincy became a city June 11, 1888. But a lot of people will go right on thinking Quincy was named after John Quincy Adams.

Wife, Mother Of Two Presidents Abigail Adams: A Unique Distinction

Abigail Adams has a unique place in history as the only woman to be the wife of one president and the mother of another.

And, she nearly became the grandmother of a vice president.

Her husband, John, was the second president from 1797 to 1801 and her son, John Quincy, the sixth from 1825 to 1829.

A grandson, Charles Francis Adams, ran unsuccessfully for vice president on the Free Soil ticket in 1848.

Sadly, Abigail did not live to see her son become president. She died in her 74th year Oct. 28, 1818 seven years before.

Although she is traditionally remembered as the wife of one president and the mother of another—an honor shared by no other woman—she was more than that.

She was a remarkable woman on her own and one ahead of her times.

Born in neighboring Weymouth Nov. 11, 1744, the daughter of Rev. William Smith, a Congregational minister and Elizabeth Quincy Smith, she had no formal schooling.

But through tutoring by her father and mother and reading, she became a well-known writer of letters that have served to help chronicle American history.

She was an early advocate of women's rights as attested in one of her famous letters to her husband who was often away. She wrote:

"In the new code of law which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make, I desire that you remember the ladies and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors.

And, she strongly added:

"Do not push such unlimited powers into the hands of the husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could."

She was a brave woman, too. She was often left alone for long periods of time to care for the children and run the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill while her husband was away in the service of the fledgling country.

Early in their marriage, he was in France trying to develop strong ties with that country and she sailed to meet him in Paris. They had not seen one another in five years.

John and Abigail Adams were the first president and first lady to occupy the White House. When Adams took office as the second president succeeding George Washington, March 4, 1797, Philadelphia was the nation's capital. John and Abigail moved into the White House in November, 1800. It was called the President's Palace at that time.

No fancy airs about her. She won a special spot in White House folklore by hanging her laundry in the East Room. She was being practical. Many of the rooms had not been finished when they moved in and the East Room was one of the warmer and better ones for drying wet clothing.

Adams and Thomas Jefferson were close friends and worked together to produce the precious Declaration of Independence. But they had a falling out and became political enemies.

Jefferson ran against Adams in his bid for re-election to a second term and defeated him. Adams was so bitter he refused to stay in Washington for Jefferson's inaugural in 1801 and came home to Quincy.

Abigail became a peacemaker through letters to Jefferson and thanks to her efforts the two former presidents reconciled in their later years.

Both succumbed July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, Jefferson a few hours before Adams.

Unlike Abigail, Adams lived to see his son, John Quincy Adams, elected sixth president in 1824.

John and Abigail were married 54 years and it was a happy union despite frequent and long separations in the early years.

Abigail was the woman behind two men—a husband and son who encouraged and helped them in their distinguished service to their country on their way to the Presidency.

She, her husband, her son and daughter-in-law, Louisa Catherine are entombed in the crypt at United First Parish Church.

A bronze statue of Abigail and John Quincy was erected in 1997 just a few feet away.

It was created by noted sculptor Lloyd Lillie and commissioned by the Quincy Partnership, a group of active community business leaders.

The statue depicts Abigail at about age 32 and John Quincy at age 10 with her hand on his shoulder in a motherly touch.

The very spot from which she now looks out onto Quincy Sq. is where she walked when the area was an open field.

ABIGAIL ADAMS and her son, John Quincy Adams—the future sixth President—look out over Quincy Square from beside historic First Parish Church. The handsome bronze statue depicts her at about age 32 and him as a 10-year old. It was commissioned by the Quincy Partnership and created by noted sculptor Lloyd Little.

Thomas Crane Public Library A Romanesque Architectural Beauty

He came to Quincy as a boy of 7, grew to young manhood on a farm in Quincy Point, learned the granite-cutters' trade, and left at the age of 26 to win fame and fortune in stone in New York City.

That was the last Quincy saw of Thomas Crane for half a century until one February day in 1880, five years after his death, when his son, Albert, appeared with $20,000 with which to build a memorial — preferably a library — to his father.

My father always retained a strong feeling for the town of Quincy," was his only explanation.

Albert Crane himself chose the man to design the building, Henry Hobson Richardson, grandson of the English scientist Dr. Joseph Priestly and the foremost architect of the day.

His reputation was so formidable that he was able to tell Crane, "I cannot guarantee that the building, when completed, shall conform to (your) ideas of beauty and taste," and still get the job.

Richardson's Romanesque building, which now houses the reference section of the library, was dedicated on May 30, 1882, with the principal oration delivered by Charles Francis Adams, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees.

It was Adams who gave the library its name. Albert Crane wanted it to be "The Quincy Free Public Library." Adams insisted on "The Thomas Crane Public Library."

"Who's giving the building?" asked Albert Crane.

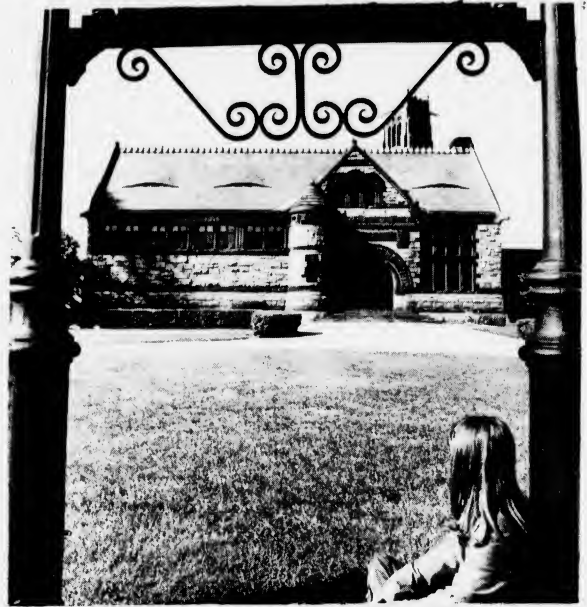

"You are, but you wouldn't have it if hadn't been for me," said Adams, who was used to having his way around Quincy, and that was that.

President John Adams' modest collection of books was housed in the library until 1893, when it was discovered that in 11 years only two persons, one of them Charles Francis Adams, Jr., had asked to see them. They were then transferred to the Boston Public Library.

At the start, Richardson's magnificent building was all but hidden behind a grain store, a hotel, an office building and four homes that lined Washington St.

Albert Crane, however, was a persistent man and, by the time he died in 1917, he had purchased and torn down all the buildings, leaving a broad expanse of open space to enhance the library.

But before the lawn could be seeded, World War I intervened and, in a burst of patriotism — "Food will win the war," they said — the area was planted with potaatoes, tended by an expert brought in from Maine. The experiment failed.

THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY

"There wasn't a potato in the lot that was anywhere near as large as a golf ball," said Mayor Joseph L. Whiton. The harvest was donated to the poor farm.

Albert Crane also put up $64,000 to build the Spear St. wing of the library in 1907-08 and the Crane family gave yet another $164,000 for the free standing addition, built in 1936, that now houses the stacks and the children's section.

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., is open to the public, free of charge, Monday to Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Friday and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. It is closed on Saturdays during July and August.

Hancock Cemetery

Patriots, Early Settlers, Intrigue Buried Here

Henry, the first Adams in Quincy, is buried there. So is the Rev. John Hancock, father of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. And Colonel John Quincy, for whom the city is named.

But of all the 800 graves in the Hancock Cemetery, the Old Burying Ground of Colonial Quincy, most intriguing is one marked by a tombstone bearing this cryptic epitaph:

"Erected to the memory of John R. Grieve: Died Nov. 12, 1850, age 22 years, and Hannah Banks, his wife, died Nov. 12, 1850, age 15 years. Both of Zanesville, Ohio. Deluded by the writings of A.J. Davis."

The mystery of John and Hannah has never been fully solved.

They came to Quincy in 1850, not as man and wife, but as male cousins, John Green and George Sands. They obtained work in a shoe factory but rarely left their lodgings on Elm St., spending long hours reading books on spiritualism.

Co-Workers thought that George Sands looked frail, almost effeminate. It was widely suspected that "he" was a girl. A scheme was devised to test the theory.

One day at lunch one of the shoe workers tossed George an apple. A man would catch it by closing his legs; a woman by spreading her skirt. Guess what "George" did!

Humiliated, John and Hannah never went back to the factory. Nor did they ever return to the house on Elm St. Their frozen bodies were found next spring by rabbit hunters on Penn's Hill, locked in a loving embrace.

Several months later, the father of John Grieve arrived from Ohio to bury the young couple. It was he who directed the words to be chiselled on the headstone. He explained no further.

A.J. Davis was never identified for sure. But Andrew Jackson Davis, a spiritualist, hypnotist and faith healer, was then practicing in Boston.

Among the belongings found in the Elm. St. lodgings were these words, written by 15-year-old Hannah Banks.

"To the oppressed and downtrodden, to the suffering and afflicted, I would cry out...Death is only an event, only a circumstance in the eternal life experience of the human soul. Death is simply a birth into a new and perfect state of existence."

Not far from the grave of John and Hannah is a tomb bearing words that cry out of an earlier injustice:

"Three precious friends under this tombstone lie

"Patterns to aged, youth and infancy.
"A great mother, her learned son, with child.

"The first and least went free. He was exiled.

"In love to Christ, this country, and dear friends.

"He left his own, cross'd seas and for amends

"Was here extoll'd, and envy'd all in a breath,

"His noble consort leaves, is drawn to death,

"Stranger changes may befall us ere we die,

"Blest they who will arrive eternity.
"God grant some names, O thou New England's friend.

"Don't sooner fade than thine, if times don't mend."

The tomb with its hidden message contains the family of the Rev. Leonard Hoar, third president of Harvard College, a man too liberal for his times.

He was forced by the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to resign at the instigation of religious opponents and jealous colleagues for permitting Harvard to "languish and decay." Eight months later, in November 1675, he was dead at 45.

In 1975, the same General Court, now of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, righted the 300-year-old wrong done to the Rev. Mr. Hoar by "proclaiming and confirming his innocence of any misdeeds while president of Harvard College."

The cemetery, on Hancock St., Quincy Sq., next to City Hall, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

At Dorothy Quincy Homestead

John Hancock's Declaration Of Love

An aura of romance surrounds the stately old house that is set back in the trees from the corner of Hancock St. and Butler Rd., on the banks of Furnace Brook.

There is the wallpaper with its blue cupids and pink flowers that was imported from France for the wedding of Dorothy Quincy, the vivacious daughter of the house, to Quincy-born John Hancock, a patriot on the run with a price on his head.

There are the words "You I Love and You alone," addressed by Hancock to his beloved Dorothy and scratched on a window pane with his diamond ring just before he fled to Lexington on the eve of the Revolution.

And there are the secret chambers and passageways, used, it was said, to hide fugitive patriots during the Revolution and, at an earlier date, even certain Englishmen fleeing a charge of regicide in the death of King Charles I.

Parts of the house were built in 1685 by Col. Edmund Quincy, the second of the name, on land that was granted to an earlier Edmund in 1638. The major part was built in 1706 by Edmund the third. (There were six Edmunds in all, four in a direct line; two nephews.)

The house was the social center of old Braintree during the regime of the fourth Edmund, largely because he sired five beautiful daughters around whom swirled a whole future generation of judges, generals and merchant kings.

The undisputed belle of the household was Dorothy, the coquettish youngest of the eight Quincy children, whose troth was soon plighted to John Hancock, the wealthy young businessman from Boston who was already becoming known as a leader of the rebels.

Tradition has it that they were to have been married in the north parlor of the Quincy homestead with its French cupid wallpaper when Revolution intervened and John had to flee with the British on his heels.

Eventually, they were wed Aug. 28, 1775, at the home of Thaddeus Burr, uncle of Aaron Burr (later Vice President of the United States) in Fairfield, Conn.

After the Revolution and the death of Edmund the fourth in 1788 the old house passed from the Quincy family. The Hancocks wanted nothing to do with it. Their only son, John George Washington Hancock, was killed in a skating accident at age 9 while on a visit in 1787.

The house was acquired in 1904 by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames, who restored it with vintage furniture, utensils and clothing, and gave it to the state with the proviso that the Dames continue to run it.

Adams Academy On Site Of John Hancock's Birthplace

By modern standards, the boarding house at the corner of Hancock and Dimmock Sts. had all the aspects of a genteel prison.

Residents were forbidden to leave between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. They could not enter or leave at any time except by the hall door. They were banned from pool halls and bars. Smoking materials also were forbidden to them.

In exchange for good behavior, plus tuition ranging from $75 to $150 a year, they were given the best prep school education of the day, for they were students at Adams Academy, which flourished from 1872 to 1907 in Quincy.

The academy was a gift of John Adams, the second President of the United States, who always had his checkbook ready to fill the spiritual and educational needs of the citizens of his beloved Quincy.

The trust fund, nourished by "rents, profits and emoluments" from certain Adams-owned properties, was set up in the Adams will of 1822, but it was not until 1869 that the fund was deemed large enough to start construction.

The location was specified by Adams himself as the corner of Adams and Hancock Sts., site of the birthplace of his childhood friend, John Hancock, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

The doors opened to the first students, 24 of them, on Sept. 4, 1872. Five years later, the academy reached a peak enrollment of 154 with an international student body—25 from Quincy, four from Washington, D.C., 125 from 14 states, two from England and one from Chile.

It had one of the earliest prep school football teams, too, recording a tie with the Resolutes of Boston on Oct. 21, 1876, a scant seven years after Princeton and Rutgers played the first college game. It whipped Andover three times from 1877-79.

The admissions catalogue specified that applicants be "well prepared in the usual studies of good grammar school" and warned that "no pupils are desired to give them a collegiate education."

The best known headmaster was Dr. William Everett, once acclaimed as one of the seven smartest men in the world. He ran the academy with a firm hand from 1878 to 1893 and again from 1897 to ADAMS ACADEMY, home of the Quincy Historical Society, now has a handicapped access ramp.

1907. From 1893 to 1897, he was a U.S. congressman from Lynn.

Dr. Everett, an amiable if sometimes waspish eccentric, was widely known as the man who hated Abraham Lincoln. He had reason. His father was Edward Everett, whose masterful oration at Gettysburg was over-shadowed by Lincoln's notes scribbled on the back of an envelope.

It was Dr. Everett, who signaled the passing of Adams Academy—and many other 19th Century classical prep schools—at graduation exercises in 1907 when he said that "unless someone comes forward and planks down $50,000, the academy will be closed."

Nobody did and on June 22, 1907, the Adams Academy officially closed its doors.

The building today is occupied by the Quincy Historical Society, which maintains a museum and research library in the old classrooms as well as an expanded gift shop. Abigail Adams Cairn

The Smoke Could Be Seen Over Bunker Hill

Abigail Adams was awakened at dawn in the farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill by the sound of far-off guns. All through the sweltering morning of June 17, 1775, as she hustled about with the chores, the dull boom of cannon intruded on her consciousness.

Riders on the Coast Road to Plymouth, stopping at the farmhouse for a drink of water, told her of a great battle underway on Breed's Hill in Charlestown.

One of them brought word that Dr. Joseph Warren had been killed in the fighting and little Abby, age 10, burst into tears, and John Quincy, nearly 8, felt bewildered and sad, for Dr. Warren was the Adams family doctor in Boston.

In the afternoon, Abigail could stand it no longer. Taking Abby and John Quincy by the hand, she walked up the Coast Road to the top of Penn's Hill and climbed up on the rocks for a better view.

The panorama of the Bay, a shimmering blue in the sunshine, spread out before them, the tiny houses on the three hills of Boston and, beyond, the black smoke rising in billows.

"Good God," exclaimed Abigail, "they are burning Charlestown!"

The scene etched itself forever in John Quincy's memory.

The early days of the Revolution were times of turmoil in Old Braintree and its North Precinct, which was later called Quincy.

Abigail's husband, John, was away most of the time at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, leaving 31-year-old Abigail to manage the farm and look to the needs of four small children: Abigail, John Quincy, Charles, 5, and Thomas Boylston, 3.

There were days of alarm as the British, penned up in Boston by the brand new Continental Army, foraged up and down the coast for supplies. Refugees from occupied Boston and the inner towns of Dorchester and Roxbury sometimes slept in the kitchen and in the fields.

As the wife of a member of Congress, Abigail was a center of attention. The house on the Coast Road was a favorite stopping place for travelers to Plymouth. Politicians up from Philadelphia made it a point to stop by for a visit with John Adams' wife.

Abigail was invited to visit Gen. George Washington's headquarters at Winter Hill. The aristocratic Washington was suspect among New Englanders. He was a Virginian; he was an Anglican; and, it was said, he held slaves. But John Adams liked him and Abigail was soon charmed.

One day, young John Quincy came home to find his Uncle Elihu melting down Abigail's pewter spoons in the kitchen to make bullet molds. He looked at his mother and she looked back at him and something indefinable passed between them.

"Do you wonder," wrote the sixth President of the United States some 68 years later, "that a boy of 7 who witnessed this scene should be a patriot."

In 1896, where the old Coast Road (now Franklin St.) meets Viden Rd. atop Penn's Hill, a stone cairn was built to mark the spot where Abigail and young John Quincy watched the Battle of Bunker Hill. It is open to the public and free of charge.

Josiah Quincy House

Lookout For Spying On British Ships

Abigail Adams stood with her great-uncle, Col. Josiah Quincy, in a window of his mansion overlooking Wollaston Beach and watched the tall masts of 170 ships stand slowly out to sea. It was March 17, 1776. The British were evacuating Boston.

But even in triumph there was tragedy.

Aboard the departing ships were more than 1,000 Loyalists, Americans who had chosen King above country, and one of them was Abigail's cousin, Samuel Quincy, the Colonel's only remaining son, an avowed Tory.

"I take a long farewell," his sister, Hannah, wrote to him for one last time. "Let it not be published that a brother of such brothers fled from his country. Can you expect to walk uprightly now? Can you take fire in your bosom and not be burned?"

Two of Col. Josiah Quincy's sons had died young. Now he had no more.

But there was no time for regrets. The work of revolution had begun. The second floor of the house at what is now 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, was a lookout from which the 66-year-old Colonel spied on British ship movements for his friend, Gen. George Washington.

A few months before, Col. Quincy watched the Royal Governor, Gen. Thomas Gage depart and he scratched on a pane of window glass the reminder: "Oct. 10, 1775. General Gage sailed for England with a fair wind."

This time he remained in the window for three days as the British tall ships moved restlessly about the Harbor as if reluctant to leave. Finally, on March 20, the last of them passed through the roadstead and out to sea.

The mansion in Wollaston reached full social flower under the aegis of the Colonel's grandson, the third Josiah, the "Great Mayor" of Boston, president of Harvard and Congressman, who called it "Tranquillia" and used it as his summer home.

It was there that the Marquis de Lafayette visited one Sunday afternoon after dinner with his friend, ex-President John Adams at the Adams Mansion. He carried flowers from the Adams garden for Mrs. Eliza Susan Quincy and her five attractive daughters.

The house was built in 1770 by the old Colonel himself, the first in a line of six Josiahs. It was said that, while most families passed their line from sire to son, the Quincys went from 'Siah to 'Siah.

But, while there were six Josephs and innumerable Edmunds, the city was named for yet another member of the prolific family — Col. John Quincy, the great-grandfather of John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States.

JOSIAH QUINCY HOUSE

The Josiah Quincy House, 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston is open to the public from June 5 to Oct. 15, Saturdays and Sundays 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tours are conducted on the hour and the last tour begins at 4 p.m. Visits may be made at other times by appointment. Admission is $2, children $1, and seniors $1.50; children 5 and younger free. All Quincy residents and SPNEA members are admitted free.

John Adams And Sons

Politics, war, and sons were on John Adams' mind in a letter written to his wife, Abigail Adams, in 1780:

"I must study politics and war, that my sons may have liberty to study mathematics and philosophy.

"My sons ought to study mathematics and philosophy, geography, natural history and naval architecture, navigation, commerce and agriculture, in order to give their sons a right to study painting, poetry, music, architecture, statuary, tapestry and porcelain."

First Iron Works

Steel Industry Born Here In 1644

It failed after nine years of effort and since failure was anathema in a growing America, perhaps that is why the site and even the memory of the first commercial iron blast furnace in the United States was lost for so long.

It flourished, if that is the word, from 1644 to 1653 on the banks of the Mount Wollaston River in a section of Old Braintree called, "the Woods." It left its name on the river, now Furnace Brook in West Quincy.

Iron was an important commodity in Colonial Massachusetts, particularly for nails and pots and pans. Unfortunately, iron utensils had to be imported from England, a costly process for the penny-wise colonists.

With this in mind, John Winthrop Jr., son of the governor of the Massachusetts Bay colony [Did someone cry "Nepotism?"], went to London and formed the "Company of Undertakers for the Ironworks in New England." He, of course, was the local agent.

The Company gave Winthrop a thousand pounds of capital and a work crew of indentured servants, many of whom ran away when they heard they were going to the wilds of America. Jail was better than that!

When, after a search from Maine to Plymouth, he decided to locate in Quincy, Winthrop was also granted 3,000 acres of land, with subsidiary land rights elsewhere in the colony, and a 21-year monopoly.

The operation was deemed of such importance that the iron workers were given exemption from militia duty, this at a time when war was imminent with the Narragansett Indians and with Ninigret, the sachem of the Niantics.

The first iron was turned out in 1644, but young Winthrop was fired the next year to be succeeded by Richard Leader. It is interesting to note that one of America's earliest magnates toiled for a salary of 100 pounds a year.

The ore from which iron was blasted on the banks of Furnace Brook came from the swamps and bogs. It was not a high quality product. Water power from a dam thrown across the Brook was inadequate. Quincy iron ore proved to be more expensive than the imported kind.

The Company of Undertakers appealed for fresh money in 1646 and apparently there were enough investors ready to send good money after bad because the furnace was still in operation in 1650 when the Scotch Prisoners arrived.

The Scots were rugged Highlanders, soldiers in the army of the future King Charles II who were captured in the Battle of Dunbar. They suffered the fate common to most 17th Century prisoners of war.

Cromwell shipped 272 of them to New England, cheap labor in an effort to make Quincy iron works a paying proposition. It didn't work. The Company of Undertakers went bankrupt in 1653 and "the Woods" went back to the bear and the deer.

Meanwhile, with the same Richard Leader as agent, construction began on a second iron works on the North Shore in Saugus in 1646. When it was completed in 1650 it was recognized as the first integrated iron industry in America.

The remains of the John Winthrop Jr. Blast Furnace are located in Hall Cemetery on Crescent St., West Quincy.

John Quincy Adams: The Old Flame Still Burned

The old man's bitterness glowed from every word as he penned them in his diary on June 17, 1843, the day the Bunker Hill Monument was dedicated.

"What a name in the annals of mankind is Bunker Hill! What a day was the 17th of June, 1775! And what a burlesque upon them both is an oration upon them by Daniel Webster!"

The old man despised Webster as a turncoat to his own heritage, one whose compromises had sold out to slavery.

"The ideal associations thundering cannon, which I heard, and the smoke of burning Charlestown, which I saw, on that awful day .. How could I have witnessed all this at once, without an unbecoming burst of indignation.

"Daniel Webster is a heartless traitor to the cause of freedom; John Tyler [the President] is a slave-monger. What have these to do with the Quincy granite pyramid on the brow of Bunker Hill?

"I stayed home .."

The old flame still burned in John Quincy Adams at 75.

City Hall Seat Of Government For 156 Years

Daniel and Hannah French deeded the land to the town of Quincy for $1,000 with the stipulation that it "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House and for the said Inhabitants."

And, with a few minor transgressions of that vow, the solid structure of Quincy granite on Quincy Square has been just that for the past 156 years, the nerve center of government for the town and then the city.

It was the great hall on the second floor that the popular John Quincy Adams II, grandson of a President of the United States, held forth as town moderator for many years and, with his brother, Charles Francis Adams Jr., gave informal direction to town affairs.

One of the earliest ordinances passed by the first City Council on March 8, 1889 was the adoption of the City Seal emblazoned with the four most significant dates in Quincy's history:

1625, for the first settlement on Mount Wollaston; 1640, for its separation from Boston as the town of Braintree; 1792, for its separation from Braintree as the town of Quincy; and 1888, for its incorporation as a city.

CITY HALL

Designed by the architect Solomon Willard—who received $280 for drawing up the plans and superintending construction for five months—the City Hall was completed and occupied for the first time on Nov. 1, 1844.

It cost exactly $19,115.93 to build, including 88 cents to John Briesler for lead to seal the chimney.

In 1979, when a 3 and one half story reflective glass addition was built behind the old City Hall, the cost was $1.9 million.

John Adams 'Father'

U.S., State Constitution Both Born Here

Quincy, birthplace of John Adams, John Quincy Adams and John Hancock, also has claim to the birth of the U.S. Constitution.

The seed for this precious document was planted here.

The U.S. Constitution was modeled after the Massachusetts Constitution which was written by John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin in the law office of the John Quincy Adams birthplace in Quincy.

There is every reason to believe that John Adams did not want to go the Massachusetts Constitution Convention in Cambridge in 1779.

He had arrived home only seven days before on the French frigate La Sensible after nearly 18 months in Paris helping to negotiate a commercial and military alliance with France. He was in such a rush to get home that he apparently landed the day before La Sensible reached Boston by rowing ashore from Nantasket Roads.

He missed his wife, Abigail, terribly, and she him.

"One was angry, another was full of Greif, and the third with Melancholy, so that I burnt them all," he wrote to her from Passy on Dec. 18, 1778, listing his complaints with her most recent letters. "If you write me in this style I shall leave of writing intirely. it kills me.

"Am I not wretched Enough, in this Banishment, without this? What Course shall I take to convince you that my Heart is warm? I beg you would never more write to me in such a strain for it really makes me unhappy."

"How lonely are my days?" she wrote on a Sunday evening, Dec. 27, "How solitary are my Nights? How insupportable the Idea that 3000 leagues, and the vast ocean now divide us—but devide only our persons for the Heart of my Friend is in the Bosom of his partner."

Somewhere on the vast ocean the two letters passed each other.

Paris and the dissolute court of Louis XVI held small appeal to the Puritan in John Adams, even when his closest everyday companions were Dr. Benjamin Franklin, still with an eye for the ladies at age 73, and the swashbuckling Capt. John Paul Jones, half patriot, half pirate, who had just taken command of the leaky old East Indiaman he had renamed Bon Homme Richard.

The American colonies, newly reborn as the United States of America, were going through the most dismal period of the War for Independence. Inflation was rampant: butcher's meat, a dollar to eight shillings a pound; flour, fifty dollars a hundredweight. The news from the fighting front was of death, privation and horror.

Like many Braintree wives whose husbands were away at war, Abigail Adams was forced into the unaccustomed role of head of the household, a function she filled with determination.

"I cannot avoid sometimes repining that the gifts of fortune were not bestowed upon us, that I might have enjoyed the happiness of spending my days with my partner," she wrote, "but as it is, I think it my duty to attend with frugality and economy to our own private affairs; and if I cannot add to our little substance, yet see to it that it is not diminished."

She abstained from drinking black market tea, allowing herself one tiny complaint: "I should like a little green (tea), but they say there is none to be had here. I only wish it for a medicine, as a relief to a nervous pain in my head to which I am sometimes subject."

John Adams attended the opening session of the Constitutional Convention in Cambridge on Wednesday, June 1, 1779. On Saturday, he was named to a committee of 30 to prepare the declaration of rights and the constitution. On Monday, the committee delegated the task to a subcommittee of three, John and Samuel Adams; and James Bowdoin.

Thus it was that John Adams wound up in the law office of his home at the foot of Penn's Hill, paired with his fire-brand cousin, Sam, and his ailing friend, James Bowdoin, to write a Constitution for Massachusetts.

The patient, hard-working John Adams, of course, did most of the work.

"I was by the Convention put upon the Committee—by the Committee upon the subcommittee—and by the subcommittee appointed a sub subcommittee—so that I had the honor to be principal Engineer," he wrote to his friend, Edmund Jennings. Payroll records indicate that he was paid 90 pounds for his work.

The so-called "Adams draft" of the Massachusetts Constitution was accepted by the Convention with a few alterations, but by that time John Adams was long gone back to Europe, this time to help negotiate a treaty of peace with Britain and serve as America's first minister to London. He did not see the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill again for another eight years.

But he was immensely heartened by these words from the pen of his ever-loving Abigail, written on Oct. 15, 1780:

"Our Massachusetts Constitution is read with admission in New York and pronounced by the Royal Governor as the best republican form he ever saw."

QUINCY RECYCLING PROGRAM PAYS OFF

Quincy's recycling program and leaf composting programs are great for several reasons.
First of all, recycling and composting preserve precious natural resources.

Second, several recyclable items and yardwaste are now banned by state law from Massachusetts landfills and incinerators.

Third, every ton we recycle or compost saves the city $53.00. That's how much the city pays Browning-Ferris Industries (BFI) per ton for trash disposal.

Fourth, leaves picked up during curbside collections are composted and used for community improvements.

In between the monthly curbside yardwaste collections, residents are able to drop off grass clippings, leaves, branches or shrubs to the DPW backyard Monday through Saturday from 7am to 3pm.
Proof of residency is required (driver's license).

Fifth, Quincy's contract with BFI contains an $8 per ton credit for all paper collected. An average savings of $50,000 annually is realized by taxpayers, as the credit is deducted right off the BFI bill on a monthly basis. Also, the DPW participates in a grant program that pays $8 per ton for every ton of recycling documented, resulting in approximately $52,000 of revenue each year for the City to reinvest in recycling or environmental projects in the community and through our schools.
When you divert recyclable items and yardwaste from the solid waste stream, you save $53 per ton in disposal fees for every ton diverted.

To take advantage of all these benefits, Quincy residents are strongly encouraged to participate in the city's recycling program and yardwaste program. Please do what you can for the environment and to save Quincy a great amount of money. For more information about the Quincy recycling program, please call the 24-hour Recycling Hotline

THE GRANITE RAILWAY

The Granite Railway First Commerical Railroad In U.S.

It was the darndest looking contraption that many among the distinguished gathering had ever seen.

Each of the three wagons had four wheels, six and one half feet in diameter, surmounted by a smaller gear wheel which was used to raise and lower the cargo platform that was slung low between the wheels.

It rode on foot-high wooden rails, topped by iron plate, which rested on stone sleepers or cross ties, placed eight feet apart and firmly supported on crushed granite to a depth beyond the frost line.

On Saturday, Oct. 7, 1826, the wagons were laden with 16 tons of the finest Quincy granite and the opening day guests were properly amazed when a single horse moved the whole thing with ease more than three miles to a special wharf on the Neponset River.

The granite blocks, a particularly hard and weather-resistant stone capable of taking a brilliant polish, were en route to Charlestown, where they were building a monument to the Battle of Bunker Hill.

The Granite Railway, the first such commercial venture in the United States, was built specifically to transport stone for the Bunker Hill Monument.

That it became successful, and a model for others around the country, is a tribute to three vastly dissimilar men, the engineer Gridley Bryant, the architect Solomon Willard and the financier, Colonel Thomas Handasyd Perkins.

Bryant was 27 at the time but already an engineer of note. He invented the eight wheeled railroad car and, when a fellow named Ross Winans of Baltimore sued to establish a patent on it, Bryant was able to prove his claim to the satisfaction of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Willard, then 43, was a great bear of a man, gentle, obliging, industrious. Frivolity, it was said, was alien to him and he was never known to run. He could be crotchety, too. He was a carpenter turned wood-carver, turned stone-carver and, finally architect.

Perkins was the autocratic, 52-year-old merchant king of Boston who was said to have been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy by President Washington and turned it down with the observation that he owned more ships than the Navy.

It was Perkins who lobbied the Railway's charter through a puzzled and obstinate State Legislature, which had never been called upon to incorporate a commercial railroad before. It was Perkins who financed it, too, largely with his own money.

Even in its early days, the Granite Railway was a tourist attraction of some magnitude.

Daniel Webster, who used to stop off for a pick-me-up in Quincy en route from Boston and Washington to his home in Marshfield, viewed it and decided that it would never succeed because of the frost that would form on the rails in the winter.

The President of the United States, a local boy named John Quincy Adams, visited in August, 1827, got caught in a thunderstorm and took shelter in a shed where Willard's stone-cutters were hacking away at monument granite.

A group of visitors were riding up the Railway's incline in an empty car on July 25, 1832, when the chain broke and catapulted them over a 40-foot cliff. One was killed in what may have been the first railroad fatality in the United States.

The Granite Railway Co. survived until 1870, some 27 years after the Bunker Hill Monument was finished, when most of its track was taken over by the Old Colony Railroad, which in turn became a division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Today much of the roadbed, over which freight moved commercially on rails for the first time in America, is buried under the macadam of the Southeast Expressway.

The old Railway incline has been restored and is located at the dead end of Mullin Ave. in West Quincy. It is open to the public year around, 24 hours a day. There is no admission charge.

USS SALEM

Centerpiece Of U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum

USS Salem: Newest Tourist Attraction

The USS SALEM is one of Quincy's newest tourist attractions.

Built at Quincy's renowned Fore River Shipyard, she became the Flagship of the United States Navy's Sixth Fleet during the Cold War years in the 1950s.

The USS SALEM, the world's only preserved heavy cruiser, is over 700 feet long and carries the heaviest automatic main battery guns in any warship of any navy's cruiser class. As the most powerful gunned warship in the fleet, she was a bulwark of democracy in the Mediterranean and the Caribbean Seas.

She carried a crew of over 1,600 men and traveled at a top speed of 35 knots. Today, visitors can tour the Main Deck, Number 3 Turret, a 5-inch mount, Admiral's and Captain's Bridges, and other sources of interest. Scheduled guided tours by today's crew will take guests through the Second Deck where they can see how the USS SALEM's crew lived and worked.

Of special note are the crew's gallery and bake shop, the barber shop, where one could get a haircut when the barber was on duty and the machine shops where the actual work is done to restore the ship. Real sailors will want to see the CIC (Combat Information Center), the nerve center of the ship where she was controlled and fought from; Engine Room 3, where her powerful battleship class propulsion system drove her through the sea; and her berthing compartments, where Sailor and Marine lived their lives. A well-stocked Museum Shop is on board in the ship's store where Salem hats, tee shirts, souvenirs and gifts can be purchased.

Senior citizens, school groups, and Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts as well as other organizations are welcome and can reserve tour times in advance if desired. The ship is available for overnight encampments and special activities.

The USS Salem accommodates functions of 25 to 300 people. Arrangements can be made for birthday parties, retirements, business meetings, seminars, weddings, dinners and special events. A variety of the ship's spaces are available. Call for details.

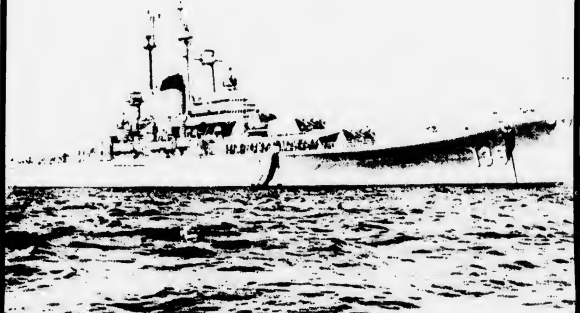

Spring, summer and fall are the sun times aboard the ship. The museum's archivist will be open for research and viewing its extensive collection of armaments, uniforms, and memorabilia.

The USS SALEM at the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum is a wonderful family experience for all. Visit history-rich Quincy, home of two U.S. Presidents, the Granite Industry, and the First Commercial railroad and have a memorable time.

'First Ladies Of The Skies' Amelia Earhart, Harriet Quimby Had Quincy Ties

Abigail Adams is not Quincy's only "First Lady." The city also has ties to two "first ladies" of the skies: Amelia Earhart and Harriet Quimby.

Earhart, the country's most famous aviatrix, who disappeared in the Pacific on an around-the-world flight in 1937. Her disappearance is still an intriguing mystery more than a half-century later.

Quimby, although not as well known, actually was the first woman to earn a pilot's license. She flew here and died here in a tragic Airmeet crash.

A resident of Medford at the time, Earhart was one of five stockholders in the Dennison Airport established on a nine-acre marshland tract at Quincy Shore Drive and East Squantum St., North Quincy.

The Beechwood Community Life Center is now located on part of the site across from historic Moswetuset Hummock where the Moswetuset Indians settled and from which the name Massachusetts is derived.

Earhart flew on the first official flight from Dennison Sept. 30, 1927. She took flying lessons here and flew regularly here throughout 1927 and 1928.

She demonstrated the Kinner aircraft and was a strong advocate of women in aviation.

She later bought a Fokker monoplane from Commander Richard E. Byrd—who would become the famed North Pole explorer—and flew it across the Atlantic, the first woman to accomplish that feat.

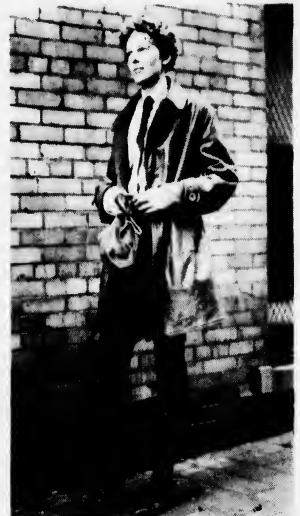

Byrd was stationed at the Squantum Naval Air Base which adjoined the Dennison Airport and today is the Marina Bay area.

Quincy's first Aeromeet held in 1910 marked the beginning of New England's aviation history. The 1910 meet coincided with the country's first air show held in California. Other Quincy meets followed in 1911 and 1912.

Harriet Quimby, the first woman to fly the English channel in 1911—the weekend the Titanic sank—came to Squantum to compete in the third Aeromeet in 1912. And met a tragic death.

HARRIET QUIMBY

AMELIA EARHART

On July 1, she took off from the Harvard Aviation Field on East Squantum Street for a 27-mile demonstration flight out to the Boston Light. As her Bleriot turned around the Light and headed back, the plane nosed down and plummeted into Dorchester Bay. As a horrified crowd watched, Quimby's passenger, William Willard, manager of the Aeromeet, and then Quimby, fell from the plane into the harbor waters. The plane nosed over on impact. And was undamaged. Both Quimby and Willard were killed.

Fifteen years later in 1927 the Dennison Airport, Quincy's first and only commercial airport was founded with two 1,800-foot strips. It had a brief life span of 14 years on marshland leased from the U.S. government by Harold T. Dennison, a Quincy architect.

The airport's stucco hangar and office building became a landmark until it closed in 1941. It is now the site of the Aviation History Info Center at the Beechwood on the Bay.

In an era when most women were not employed or career-oriented, Earhart and Quimby were quite unique.

Both were educated, employed, and self-sufficient with multiple community, career and public roles. Neither were suffragettes or active feminists, but both were gifted, courageous and tireless women—promoting and demonstrating equal rights for women. Both were published journalists and photographers. Both met timely and tragic deaths.

The historical significance of our site has prompted study, information gathering, research and collections of early aviation photos and artifacts. Quincy's Aviation History Info Center evolved from three years of community meetings and wonderful help from aviation history buffs, journalists, aviation historians, and interested community folk. Our understandings, learning, activities and events focus upon the history of our site where aviation in New England began.

Aviation History meetings are open to all and held at 7 p.m. Aug. 10 - First Aeromeet Aircraft: Wright's & Bleriot's. Sept. 15 - Squantum Air Station: The First Years. Photography Display.

BEAUTIFUL VIEW of Boston's skyline is from Squaw Rock area of Squantum. At right is the Myles Standish Cairn erected in 1895 to commemorate his visit here Sept. 30, 1621—the first recorded visit of white men to this locality. He was guided across the baby by Tisquantum or Squanto who became the early settlers' friend and benefactor. Squantum was named after him.

Moswetuset Hummock

'Birthplace Of Massachusetts'

The Indians saw it was a hill (wetuset) shaped like an arrow head (mos) so they called it "Moswetuset" and when English tongues got through mangling the word it came out "Massachusetts," which became the name of the bay and then the state.

The little wooded hillock near the junction of East Squantum St. and Quincy Shore Drive was once the seat of the sachem Chickatabot, who comes down through the pages of Quincy as a rather pathetic figure.

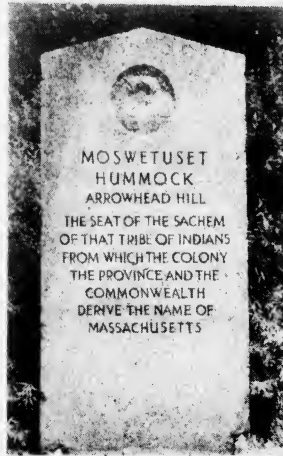

He was the chief of the Moswetuset Indians, a once great tribe that occupied the coast north of Plymouth.

A few years before, under the great sachem Nanepashemet, the Moswetuset had been able to field some 3,000 warriors for a war with the Nanepashemet was killed.

Then came the plaque.

In two years the mighty Moswetuset were all but wiped out. No more than 60 of them were left to till their fields on the banks of the Neponset River. Sachem Chickatabot fled his home on the hill in Wollaston and took refuge on Moswetuset Hummock.

That was the situation in 1621 when Capt. Myles Standish landed from a shallop with an exploring party of Plymouth Pilgrims that included the Indian guide Squanto (or Tsquantum), whose name was given to the peninsula that stuck out in the bay.

The tragic Chickatabot died not long after the Pilgrims' visit and we succeeded as sachem by his son, Josiah Wampatuck, a boy who knew a good deal when he saw one.

Wampatuck sold what was left of his virtually deserted tribal lands to a group of whites for 12 pounds, 10 shillings. The lands included most of what is today the city of Quincy and the towns of Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook.

Moswetuset Hummock is the oldest state park in Massachusetts and is on the National Registry.

Moswetuset Hummock, identified by a marker stone and maintained in its natural state, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

Neighbors Had A Nickname Duchess Of Windsor Once Lived Here

The Duchess of Windsor is a name in Quincy's more modern history.

She lived here in Wollaston while married to a young Navy lieutenant stationed at a Naval air school in Squantum in 1917.

The Massachusetts Naval Militia had a training field in what is now the Marina Bay area which was taken over by the First Naval District as an air training school.

Assigned the head of the air school at the site which later became the Squantum Naval Reserve Air Base was Lt. Earle W. Spencer.

He was married to the former Wallis Warfield who later would become the Duchess of Windsor when King Edward VIII abdicated his throne in 1936 "for the woman I love"—a woman twice divorced.

Some thought the king should be allowed to marry her and keep his title as long as she did not become queen. But stronger opposition prevailed and he stepped down.

They were married on June 3, 1937.

While here, she and Spencer lived in a second-floor apartment on Davis St. in Wollaston.

DUCHESS OF WINDSOR

Legend has it that her Wollaston neighbors thought she was somewhat snobbish.

They nicknamed her "The Duchess" never dreaming that one day she would really be one.

A Third Generation Continues Our Traditions.

Quincy has changed a great deal since Sweeney Funeral Home was established in 1917. But, it's nice to know some things will never change. Like the observance of traditional values and customs.

At Sweeney Funeral Homes, older residents are quick to notice the subtle reminders of yesteryear, such as the grey gloves our funeral director still wears. Like the characteristic top hat and tails that our founder, Dennis Sweeney, wore over 30 years ago, they reflect our Tradition. One that has been built on a dignified and instinctive concern for the city's bereaved families for three generations.

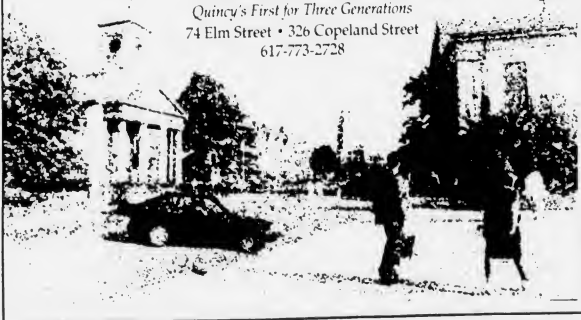

Today, our founder's grand-nephew, Dennis S. Sweeney has continued the family's philosophy of maintaining a beautiful, home-like atmosphere.

And like his namesake, who started pre-arrangements in the 1940s, Dennis believes in helping residents to plan for the future. Pre-planning means that this financial decision is not left for a family to decide while they are attempting to cope with a major personal loss. It's a difficult time, a time when family members are least able to make the wisest choice.

Sweeney Funeral Homes has been helping South Shore residents with difficult decisions for over 70 years. Call Dennis Sweeney at (617) 773-2728 for a free consultation. There's no time like the present.

The Nimitz Connection

Fleet Admiral Chester Nimitz, of World War II fame, is another name with a connection to Quincy's modern history.

Nimitz, who directed the U.S. Naval operations in the Pacific after Japan's sneak attack at Pearl Harbor, was married to a Quincy girl.

Catherine Vance Freeman and Nimitz were wed April 9, 1913 at her family's home at 40 Grand View Ave., Wollaston. Her father, Richard, was a former city council president.

Rev. Carl G. Horst, who was minister of the then Wollaston Unitarian Church on Winthrop Ave., performed the ceremony.

Nimitz was 28 and Catherine 21 on the day of their wedding which he recalled years later as "the happiest day of my life."

It was the first marriage for both. They apparently met while Nimitz was in Quincy waiting for the submarine to which he was assigned to be outfitted at the Fore River Shipyard.

Nimitz's name was one of the most famous of World War II as a commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet.

Under his leadership, the Navy staged a spectacular comeback after the disaster at Pearl Harbor, winning such strategic battles as Midway, the Solomons, the Gilbert and Marshall Islands, the Marianas, Philippines, Iwo Jima and Okinawa.

Nimitz was aboard the USS Missouri with General Douglas MacArthur as a signer for the United States in the Japanese surrender ceremonies Sept. 1, 1945.

Nimitz died just before his 81st birthday in February, 1966 in San Francisco after suffering a stroke.

Catherine, a daughter and a grandson were at his bedside.

The Admiral Nimitz Museum was established in Fredericksburg, Tex. where he was born.

According to the museum, there were four children, three daughters and a son.

The latter followed in his father's footsteps and became an admiral.

The museum says Mrs. Nimitz died "several years after" her husband's death but the children are still living, although it doesn't say where.

Nimitz and Quincy had another connection.

Many of the great fighting ships that played a major role under Nimitz in the final victory over Japan were built here at the Fore River shipyard in his wife, Catherine's, hometown.

A total of 227 Navy ships of all sizes were built here during the war, among them battleships, aircraft carriers, cruisers, destroyers, destroyer escorts and LSTs.

And, among them were such famous names as Massachusetts, Lexington, Wasp, Quincy, Boston, Canberra, etc.

And not to forget that tough old battlewagon, the Nevada, commissioned here in 1916 and still going strong at the outbreak of World War II.

She was at Pearl Harbor, that day of infamy, Dec. 7, 1941 when the Japanese planes sneaked in. Though bombed and damaged, she was the only battle able to get underway that fateful day during the attack.

She lived to fight at Normandy and went back to the Pacific for the bloody battles of Iwo Jima and Okinawa.

She was a symbol of Quincy shipbuilding know-how.

Her career came to an end as a "guinea pig" for the Bikini atom bomb tests in 1946.

But not without a final display of her Quincy-built ruggedness.

She survived two atomic bomb blasts during the tests, the 16-inch guns of the battleship Iowa and repeated attacks by Navy dive bombers.

Finally, torpedoes from the planes did her in and she went grudgingly to her rest. Gone, but like Nimitz, not forgotten.

HISTORIC FIRST PARISH Church, final resting place of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, as seen from Constitution Common across Hancock St.

(Harry Brett Photos)

BRONZE PLAQUE at entrance to Hancock Cemetery lists some of the early settlers buried there. Among them: Rev. John Hancock, father of the patriot; Henry Adams, Josiah Quincy and Dr. Leonard Hoar, third president of Harvard.

CONSTITUTION COMMON with its "Walk of Names" makes a picturesque and restful scene. New City Hall, adjoining Old City Hall now named the James R. McIntyre Government Center, was built in 1978.
